RETRENCHMENT:

Or, What a Man Saved by Stopping his Newspaper.

Not many years ago, a farmer who lived a hundred or two miles from the seaboard, became impressed with the idea that unless he adopted the close cutting system of retrenchment, he would certainly go to the wall. Wheat, during the preceding season, had been at a high price; but, unluckily for him, he had only a small portion of his land in wheat. Of corn and potatoes he had raised more than the usual quantity; but the price of corn was down, and potatoes were low. This year he had sown double the wheat he had ever sown before, and, instead of raising a thousand bushels of potatoes, as he had generally done, only planted about an acre in that vegetable, the product of which was about one hundred and fifty bushels.

Unluckily for Mr. Ashburn, his calculations did not turn out well. After his wheat was harvested, and his potatoes nearly ready to dig the price of the former fell to ninety cents per bushel, and the price of the latter rose to one dollar. Everywhere the wheat crop had been abundant, and almost everywhere the potatoe crop promised to be light.

Mr. Ashburn was sadly disappointed at this result.

'I shall be ruined,' he said at home, and carried a long face while abroad. When his wife and daughters asked for money with which to get their fall and winter clothing, he grumbled sadly, gave them half what they wated, and said they must retrench. A day or two afterwards, the collector of the 'Mercury' came along and presented his bill.

Ashburn paid it in a slow, reluctant manner and then said—

'I wish you to have the paper stopped, Mr. Collector.'

'Oh, no, don't say that, Mr. Ashburn. You are one of our old subscribers, and we can't think of parting with you.

'Sorry to give up the paper. But must do it,' returned the farmer.

'Isn't it as good as ever? You used to say you'd rather give up a dinner a week than the 'Mercury.'

'Oh, yes, it's as good as ever, and sometimes I think much better than it was. It's a great pleasure to read it. But I must retrench at every point, and then I dont see how I'm to get along. Wheat's down to ninety cents, and falling daily.'

'But the paper is only two dollars a year, Mr. Ashburn.'

'I know. But two dollars are two dollars. However, its no use to talk, Mr. Collector; the Mercury must be stopped. If I have better luck next year, I will subscribe for it again.'

This left the collector nothing to urge, and he withdrew. In his next letter to the publishers, he ordered the paper to be discontinued, which was accordingly done.

Of this little act of retrenchment, Jane, Margaret and Phœbe knew nothing at the time, and the farmer was rather loath to tell them. When the fact did become known, as it must soon, he expected a buzzing in the hive, and the anticipation of this made him half repent of what he had done, and almost wish that the collector would forget to notify the office of his wish to have the paper stopped. But the collector was a prompt man. On the second Wednesday evening, Ashburn went to the post office as usual. The post master handed him a letter, saying as he did so—

'I can't find any paper for you, to-day. They have made a mistake in not mailing it this week.'

'No,' replied Ashburn. 'I have stopped it.'

'Indeed! The Mercury is an excellent paper. What other one do you intend to take?'

'I shall not take any newspaper this year,' replied Ashburn.

'Not take a newspaper, Mr. Ashburn!' said the post master, with a look and tone of surprise.

'No. I must retrench. I must cut off all superfluous expenses. And I believe I can do without a newspaper as well as anything else. It's a mere luxury; though a very pleasant one I own, but still dispensible.'

'Not a luxury, but a necessary, I say, and indispensable,' returned the post master. 'I don't know what I wouldn't rather do without than a newspaper. What in the world are Phœbe, and Jane, and Margaret going to do?'

'They will have to do without. There is no help for it.'

'If they don't raise a storm about your ears that you will be glad to allay even at the cost of half a dozen newspapers, I am mistaken,' said the post master, laughing.

Ashburn replied, as he turned to walk away, that he thought he could face all storms of that kind, without flinching.

'Give me the Mercury, papa,' said Margaret, running to the door to meet her father when she saw him coming.

'I haven't got it,' replied Mr. Ashburn, feeling rather uncomfortable.

'Why! Hasnt it come?'

'No? it hasn't come?'

Margaret looked very much disappointed.

'It has never missed before.' she said, looking earnestly at her father.

No suspicion of the truth was in her mind; but to the eyes of her father, her countenance was full of suspicion. Still, he had not the courage to confess what he had done.

'The Mercury hasn't come!' he heard Margaret say to her sisters a few minutes afterwards, and their expressions of disappointment fell rebukingly upon his ears.

It seemed to Mr. Ashburn that he heard little else while in the house during the whole day, but the failure of the newspaper. When night came, even he, as he sat with nothing to do but to think about the low price of wheat for an hour before bed time, missed his old friend with the welcome face, that had so often amused, instructed and interested him.

On Monday morning the girls were very urgent for their father to ride over to the post office and see if the paper hadn't come; but, of course, the farmer was 'too busy' for that. On Tuesday and Wednesday the same excuse was made. On Thursday Margaret asked a neighbor who was going by the office to call and get the newspaper for them. Towards evening Mr. Markland was seen riding down the road, and Margaret and Jane ran down eagearly to the gate for the newspaper.

'Did you get the paper for us?' asked Margaret, showing two smiling rows of milk white teeth, while her eyes danced with anticipated pleasure.

Mr. Markland shook his head.

'Why?' asked both of the girls at once.

'The post master says it has been stopped.'

'Stopped!' How changed were their faces and tones of voice.

'Yes. He says your father directed it to be stopped.'

'That must be a mistake,' said Margaret. 'He would have told us.'

Mr. Markland rode on, and the girls ran back into the house.

'Father, the post master says you have stopped the newspaper!' exclaimed his daughters, breaking in upon Mr. Ashburn's not very pleasant reflections on the low prices of wheat, and the difference in the return he would receive at ninety cents a bushel to what he would have realized at the last year's of a dollar and twenty-five.

'It's true,' he replied, trenching himself behind a firm, decided manner.

'But why did you stop it, father?' inquired the girls.

'Because I can't afford to take it. It's as much as I shall be able to do, to get you enough to eat and wear this year.'

Mr. Ashburn's manner was decided, and his voice had a repelling tone.

Margaret and Phebe could say no more; but they did not leave their father's presence without giving his eyes the benefit of seeing a free gush of tears. It would be doing injustice to Mr. Ashburn's state of mind to say that he felt very comfortable, or had done so, since stopping the 'Mercury,' an act of which at sundry times he more than half repented. But, as it had been done, he could not think of recalling it.

Very sober were the faces that surrounded the supper table that evening; and but few words were spoken. Mr. Ashburn felt oppressed, and also fretted to think that his daughters should make both themselves and him unhappy about the trifle of a newspaper, when he had such serious troubles to bear.

On the next Saturday, as Mr. Ashburn was walking over his farm, he saw a man sitting on one of his fences, dressed in a jockey cap, and wearing a short hunting coat. He had a rifle over his shoulder and carried a powder flask, shot and bird bags. In fact he was a fully equipped sportsman, a somewhat rara avis in those parts.

'What's this lazy fellow doing here?' said Ashburn, to himself. 'I wonder where he comes from.'

'Good morning neighbor,' spoke out the stranger in a familiar way as soon as the farmer came within speaking distance. 'Is there any good game about here? any wild turkeys, or pheasants.'

'There are plenty of squirrels,' returned Ashburn, a little sarcastically, 'and the woods are full of robbins.'

'Squirrels make a first rate pie. But I neednt tell you that, my friend. Every farmer knows the taste of squirrels,' said the sportsman, with great good humor. 'Still I want to try my hand at a wild turkey. I've come off here in the country to have a crack at game better worth the shooting than we get in the neighborhood of P ———.'

'You're from P ——, then?' said the farmer.

'Yes I live in P ——.'

'When did you leave there?'

'Four or five weeks ago.'

'Then you don't know what wheat is selling for now?'

'Wheat? No. I think it was ninety-five or a dollar, I don't remember which, when I left.'

'Ninety, is all it is selling for here.'

'Ninety! I should like to buy some at that.'

'I have no doubt you can be accommodated,' replied the farmer.

'That is exceedingly low for wheat. If it wasn't for having a week's sport among your wild turkeys, and the hope of being able to kill a deer, I'd stop and buy up a lot of wheat on speculation.'

'I'll sell you five hundred bushels at ninety-two,' said the farmer, half hoping that his green customer might be tempted to buy at this advance upon the regular rate.

'Will you!' interrogated the stranger,

'I'm half tempted to take you up. I really believe I—No!—I must knock over some wild turkeys first. It won't do to come this far, without bagging rarer game than wheat, I believe I must decline, friend.'

'What would you say at ninety-one?' The farmer had heard a rumor, a day or two before, of a fall of two or three cents in wheat, and if he could get off five hundred bushels upon this sportsman, who had let the breast of his coat fly opon far enough to give a glimpse of a large thick pocket book, at ninety-one, it would be quite a desirable operation.

'Ninety-one—ninety-one!' said the stranger to himself. 'That is a temptation! I can turn a penny on that. But the the wild turkies; I must have a crack at a wild turkey or a deer. I think, friend, he added, speaking louder, 'that I will have some sport in these parts for a few days first. Then, may be, I'll buy a few thousand bushels of wheat if the prices haven't gone up.'

'I shouldn't wonder if the prices advanced a little,' said the farmer.

'Wouldn't you?' And the stranger looked into the farmer's face with a very innocent expression.

'It can't go much lower; if there should be any change, it will doubtless be an improvement.'

'How much wheat have you?' asked the sportsman.

'I've about a thousand bushels left.'

'A thousand bushels. Ninety cents—nine hundred dollars;—I'll tell you what, friend, since talking to you has put me in the notion of trying my hand at a speculation on wheat, I'll just make you an offer, which you may except or not, just as you please. I'll give you ninety cents cash for all you've got, one half payable now, and the other half on delivery of the wheat at the canal, provided you get extra force and deliver it immediately.'

Ashburn stood thoughtful for a moment or two, and then replied—

'Very well sir, its a bargain.'

'Which, to save time, we will close immediately. I will go with you to your house, and pay you five hundred dollars on the whole bill for a thousand bushels.'

The farmer had no objection to this, of course, and invited the stranger to go to his house with him, where the five hundred dollars were soon counted out. For this amount of money he wrote a receipt and handed it to the stranger, who after reading it said—

'I would prefer your making out a bill for a thousand dollars, and writing on it, 'Received on account, five hundred dollars.' '

'It may overrun that quantity,' said the farmer.'

'No matter, a new bill can be made out for that. I'll take all you have.'

The farmer saw no objection to the form proposed by the stranger; and therefore tore up the receipt he had written, and made out a bill in the form desired.

Will you commence delivering to-day?' inquired the sportsman, who all at once began to manifest a marked degree of interest in the business.

'Yes,' replied the farmer.

'How many wagons have you?'

'Two.'

'As it is down hill all the way to the canal, they can easily take a hundred bushels each.'

'Oh, yes.'

'Very well. They can make two load apiece to-day, and by starting early, three loads apeice on Monday, which will transfer the whole thousand bushels to the canal. I will go down immediately and see that a boat is ready to commence loading. You can go to work at once.'

By extra efforts the wheat was all delivered by Monday afternoon, and the balance of the purchase money paid. As Mr. Ashburn was riding home a neighbor who had noticed his wagons going past his house with wheat for the two days, overtook him.

'So I see, friend Ashburn, that like me you are content to take the first advance in the market, instead of running the risk of a decline for a further rise in prices. What did you get for your wheat?'

'I sold for ninety cents.'

'Ninety cents?' exclaimed the neighbor.—Surely you didnt sell for that.'

'I certainly did. I tried to get ninety-two, but ninety was the highest offer I could obtain.'

'Ninety cents! Why what has come over you, Ashburn? Wheat is selling at one dollar and twenty cents. I've just sold five hundred bushels for that.'

'Impossible!' ejaculated the farmer.

'Not at all impossible. Don't you know that by the last arrival from England have come accounts of bad harvest, and that wheat has taken a sudden rise.'

'No I don't know any such thing,' returned the astonished Ashburn.

'Well, it's so. Where is your newspaper? Haven't you read it? I got mine Friday evening and saw the news. Early on Saturday morning I found two or three speculators ready to buy up all the wheat they could get at old prices; but they didn't make many operations. One fellow, who pretended to be a fancy sportsman, thrust himself into my way, but even if I had not known of the rise in the price of wheat, I should have suspected it as soon as I saw him, for I read in the 'Mercury,' of last week, of just such a looking chap as him, having got ahead of some ignorant country farmers by buying up their produce, on a sudden rise of the market at a price much below its real value.'

'Good day!' said Ashburn, suddenly applying his whip to the flank of his horse; and away he dashed homeward at a full gallop.

The farmer never sat down to make a regular calculation of what he had lost by stopping his newspaper; but it required no formality of pencil and paper to arrive at this. A difference of thirty cents on each bushel, made, for a thousand bushels, the important sum of three hundred dollars, and this fact his mind instantly saw.

By the next mail he enclosed two dollars to the publishers of the 'Mercury' and re-ordered the paper. He will doubtless think a good while and retrench at a good many points before he orders another discontinuance.

Trying to Wheel Himself. Going to dinner the other day, we saw a little codger, about two years old, sitting in a wheel barrow and trying to wheel himself. It struck us that many people in this world are often caught in the same act—and we shall always think, hereafter, when we see a business man trusting every thing to his clerks, and continually seeking his own amusement, always absent from his counting house, and yet expecting to get along, he's sitting in a wheelbarrow and trying to wheel himself. When we see a professional man better acquainted with everything else than his profession, always starting some new scheme, and never attending to his calling, his wardrobe and credit will soon designate him as sitting in a wheelbarrow and trying to wheel himself. When we see a farmer with an over abundance of 'hired help,' trusting everything to their management, his fences down, impliments out of repair, land suffering for want of proper tillage—too proud or too lazy to turn off coat and go to work—he's sitting in a wheelbarrow trying to wheel himself. When we see a mechanic run half a square every day to borrow a newspaper, and may be, have to wait ten or fifteen minutes before he can get it, we shall suspect that the time he loses would soon pay the subscription, and consider him sitting in a wheelbarrow and trying to wheel himself. When we see a man busily engaged in circulating scandal concerning his neighbor, we infer that he is pretty deep in the mud himself, and is sitting in wheelbarrow and trying to wheel himself.

Newspapers. Books are very pretty ornaments for a library, but for common, every day use, what is there so cheap, so interesting, so instructive, so amusing, so indispensable as a good family newspaper? Nothing, that we ever heard of, can 'hold a candle to it.' As it comes smoking from the press, it contains all the freshness, and ten times the variety, of a new book every week. It smooths the thoughtful brow of age, and affords to the younger editions of humanity a most easy and agreeable mode of acquiring habits of reading and reflection. Verily, the newspaper causes many hours to pass away pleasantly and profitably, which would otherwise have been spent in idleness and mischief. Long evenings are before us once more, and we pity him who has not a good supply of these pleasant companions.

> The man that hath no taste for newspapers,
> Nor is not moved with columns of fair type,
> Is fit for treasons, stratagems and spoils;
> The motions of his sprit are dull as night,
> And his affections dark as Erupus;
> Let no such, man be trusted. Mark the paper!

The Secret of Wedded Life. A woman to be happy should marry a man at least a dozen years older than herself. This secures the happiness of both, for while the husband is flattered with the youthful idolatry, and loves her as a daughter and wife both, she reverences and loves her husband as she would her father.

Timber and Wood Lands. Sufficient attention is not paid to the preservation of the forests of the United States, and it is highly propable that the next generation will suddenly find timber very scarce and high. The waste of timber is very great in all the wooded regions, and the demand promises before many years to exceed the supply. In England for centuries past, some of the largest fortunes have been derived from timber plantations, and the surest fortune which a man could leave to his children, has been by preparing an extensive timber plantation, which, though returning him nothing during his life, has been in many instances a mine of wealth to his children. Many of the distinguished nobility of that country have practised that system for many successive generations. And to great advantage. We believe many of our citizens could in no way more surely leave a valuable inheritance to their children, than by purchasing some of the cheap lands in the country, accessible to railways and rivers, and making thereon a plantation of timber trees, which would be attended with but trifling expense.

Energy and Mind. Energy is everything. How mean a thing is man with little motive power! All the abilities nature has given him lie useless, like a great and mighty machine, ready at every point for useful action, but not a wheel turns for want of a starting power? A great man, is like a great machine. He has a great power to sit in motion the various and immense projects which he has in his hand; little motives can neither stop nor start him, they may set in motion the powers of an ordinary man, and render him a respectable, nay, even a beautiful piece of mechanism, but never a magnificent one.

Yet there is one thing which renders men supremely above the machine. By the working of his own mind he can improve and exalt himself; by directing his eye to what is great and good, he may become so. If, then, we can become what we wish to be, what high objects should we aim at, and what resolute and energetic efforts should we be ever making to attain them?

Let Children Sing. All children can learn to sing if they commence in season. We do not say all will have the same sweet voice of the nightingale; for some have naturally sweet, mild, and soft voices, when they talk while others speak in loud, strong, and masculine tones. The same is true in regard to singing.

In Germany, every child is taught to use its voice while young. In their schools, all join in singing as a regular exercise, as much as they attend to the study of geography; and in their churches the singing is not confined to a choir, who sit apart from the others, perhaps in one corner of the house, but there is a vast tide of incense going forth to God from every heart which can give utterance to this language from the soul.

An Interesting Incident. At the dedication of the Normal School at Westfield, Mass., Governor Briggs, who presided over the ceremonies, in the course of an address by him on that occasion, alluded to the importance of self-dependence as one great means of success in this world, that early prosperity had not been the road usually travelled by those who in after years had become distinguished either for wisdom or virtue, while honest poverty, patient toil, perseverence, and a decided dependence on self, had wrought out for their possessors distinguished and lasting honor; and he observed, as he wiped away the tears that struggled in his eyes, 'I can recall the case of a poor boy, who once sat on the hard plank seat of one of these schools, in one of the poorest districts of this state, while his father was toiling at the anvil for his daily bread, who, under the smiles of a kind Providence, has since been honored by his fellow citizens infinitely beyond his deserts, who, as Chief Magistrate of this commonwealth, is now addressing you.'

"Strike while the Iron is Hot." Two servants, who had lived many years together, with an old gentleman in Northamptonshire, were one evening sitting by the kitchen fire, when the batchelor said to the maid, 'Hannah, you and I have lived many years together, and been very comfortable; master gets very old and shaky, and can't last long; and when he dies we shouldn't like to part. So suppose we be married: we've saved a bit of money apiece, and when master's gone should do on a bit of land. What sayest, yes or no, at once?'—Hannah replied, 'No, Peter, I'd rather not.' Peter said no more about it. The next night the same parties sat in the same place. After a little time Hannah said, 'Peter I've been thinking about what you said last night, and have altered my mind.' Peter answered in three words, 'So have I,'

A Word. Say not a word you had better leave unsaid. A word is a little thing we know, but it has stired up a whole world of strife. Suppressing a word has saved many a character—many a life. A word unuttered and Hamilton would have lived the pride of his country. Who can tell the good and bad effects of a single word? Be careful what you say. Think before you speak, and you will never be mortified with yourself, or cause a thrill of pain to flash through the heart of a friend.

For the Quincy Patriot.

CENTRE DISTRICT SCHOOL.

MR. GREEN—In the Patriot of the 11th ult. we have seen a report of the General School Committee relative to the Petition of Mr. Daniel French and others, requesting the removal of Mr. J. W. Greene, teacher of the Grammar School in the Centre District, and we have expected ere this time to have seen an answer to said report from some one of the petitioners, but that expectation not being realized, we feel that justice demands a few passing remarks on the report be made, as public as the report itself.

First, the Committee make known to the public that they have received a Petition from Mr. French and others; that they have 'impartially examined the nature and grounds of their complaints and have decided unanimously that the request of the petitioners should not be granted.' Perhaps the decision was wise and judicious; but, to prove to the public how much their wise decision was appreciated by the inhabitants of the District, we will merely state that there are thirty four scholars belonging to the Centre District now attending the private school taught by Rev. A. B. Wheeler, most of which number would have undoubtedly attended the District School had their parents been satisfied of the competency of Mr. Greene as a teacher.

In these remarks we would not be understood to say that Mr. Greene's literary acquirements are not sufficient, but we believe that he is not competent to impart knowledge and learning to the scholars. We have come to this conclusion by keeping a watchful eye over, and examining our children, and cannot discern that they have made any improvement in "valuable learning or other things that are excellent and praiseworthy."

Secondly, "the Committee deeply regret the spirit of disaffection which has manifested itself in the District, etc." Have they shown their sincerity to their profession of deep regret? We say they have not. Had the Committee been unanimous in their deep regret, they would have endeavored to quell the spirit of disaffection, rather than to add fuel to that spirit by sustaining the cause at the expense of the District, and the dissatisfaction of a large portion of the parents who send their children to the school although they did not sign the Petition. Have the majority of the Committee made apparent a disposition to quiet the disaffection? Witness the slur they intended to heap upon the Petitioners ("as is usual in such cases") for want of better arguments, in presenting "the following facts." First, the majority evidently intended that the petitioners should appear in the eyes of the public as incapable of knowing whether their children were improving or not, simply because "none of the petitioners have ever visited the school to see for themselves the practical working of the system, or to observe the management, etc." We would say to the majority that from the testimony of our children, in whose veracity we can place our utmost confidence, we may be better acquainted with the regulations of the school than one, "if not more," who occasionally calls into the school and spends one or two leisure hours, apparently caring but little for the general improvement of the scholars, provided his own individual purpose is progressing. We have the testimony of many, and out of the mouths of many witnesses the truth shall be established. As to the "practical working of the system," the chairman of the Committee stated to the petitioners, on the evening they met at the Grammar School room, that the Committee, in employing Mr. Greene the Committee did not fully understand, but it having been recommended from some high authority they were willing to try the experiment and thus test its utility.

Now, if they cannot fully understand the system, is it consistent to suppose that the petitioners would be better able to understand it by visiting the school? We answer no. We believe the only sure method for us to "test the utility" of the system, regulations, etc, is to examine our children thoroughly, and if we are satisfied that they have made no improvement, we feel justified in complaining of the incompetency of the teacher, or, of his system, regulations, etc.

In the last sentence of the second paragraph, the majority inform us that "the Committee have obtained satisfactory evidence that these reports are incorrect." Here the majority make it appear that the petitioners have been guilty of preferring reports that are untrue, having received all their information from their children. We again say that we can place entire confidence in the veracity of our children, had we no other proof that the reports were correct. From whom do the Committee obtain the "satisfactory evidence"?—was it from Mr. Greene or his protector?

In the third paragraph the majority say, "the Committee are happy to bear testimony to the general progress of the school in valuable learning and other things that are excellent and praiseworthy." If they have discovered such facts we are inclined to believe their examinations were made through a magnifier of no ordinary power.

Finally, the Committee believe it to be a duty which they owe to the inhabitants of the District and to Mr. Greene, to sustain him in that station in which the District have placed him. The petitioners have reasons to believe that one member of the Committee done more than the District to place Mr. Greene in his station, and they hope that the inhabitants of the town will consider it a duty, hereafter, to elect such men for their General School Committee as will not quietly allow the money appropriated for Schooling to be squandered away on incompetent Pedagogues.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, JAN. 1, 1848.

John A. Green, Editor.

NEW YEAR'S PRESENTS. The pleasant annual custom of exchanging presents to propitiate good wishes and good feelings among friends will doubtless be observed by our readers to-day. All who are in pursuit of articles for presents will find at the counters of Messrs C. Gill & Co. of this town, an almost endless variety. Splendid Annuals and illustrated books superbly bound, Bibles, Prayer Books, Albums, juvenile and miscellaneous books in every variety of binding; also, work boxes, fancy articles and toys, to suit all tastes and at prices which cannot fail to be satisfactory. The Messrs. Gill have made extensive preparations to meet the wants of their customers and we think from a glance at their stock that our friends may supply all their desires at their store.

ADVICE TO YOUNG LADIES. We have recently received from Messrs. Phillips & Sampson of Boston, a small though neatly bound volume of more than two hundred pages, by that justly celebrated writer, T. S. Arthur, author of several works which treat on subjects affecting the moral and social conditions of the community. In this work, though briefly mentioned yet to the point, may be found highly valuable suggestions in regard to the "improvement of the mind, gossipping and evil-speaking, dress, health, marriage, and various other topics peculiarly adapted to the "gentler sex." In no publication of its limits have we found more wholesome truths, conveyed in simpler language, and illustrated in plain and eloquent delineations, than may be found in this admirable treatise on female education. If the gift of a useful book is to be the New Year's present for a young lady, the donor cannot select a more suitable offering than Arthur's "Advice to Young Ladies," which may be procured at the Quincy Bookstore.

Messrs. Phillips & Sampson have all the publications for the new year, and most of the works issued by them are also for sale at Gill's.

THE PLAYMATE. This little work for children has reached the fifth number. The January number is now before us and fully sustains the reputation already won—that of an amusing and instructive companion for children. Parents cannot spend a dollar more usefully than by securing for their children the regular visits of this little "Playmate." C. Gill & Co., Quincy Bookstore, are the Agents.

"THE FLAG OF OUR UNION." This valuable and interesting weekly journal for January 1st, has [illegible] with new type, and a new head—in the foreground the Father of his Country, Washington, sits upon a noble charger; in the background, is a view of Boston; the American Eagle, with wings spread over all, heads the design, holding in his talons the olive-branch of Peace, upon the branches of which are hung the Shields of the States, containing the words, "The Flag of our Union." This number also has a full length likeness of Ned Buntline taken from life, and engraved expressly for that paper, accompanied with a biographical sketch, giving his true name, and an inkling of his history. Altogether, it is a beautiful sheet, and everybody should get a copy.

WESTERN RAILROAD. Josiah Quincy, Jr., has resigned his Treasuryship, from and after the 8th inst, having held the office for twelve years, during times of the most tremendous pressure, with triumphant success. Upwards of twenty-four millions have passed through his hands, and at one time he had, in his individual capacity, given his name, on the paper of the Corporation, for upwards of $2,500,000.

CONGRESS. But little public business has been transacted in either branch the past week in consequence of the sudden death of Hon. John Fairfield of Maine, and the announcement of the decease of Mr. Bradley of Michigan.

FROM EUROPE. The steamship Hibernia arrived at Boston on Saturday last. The dates by this arrival are to Dec. 4th. The commercial news is considered rather favorable although quite a number of failures had taken place in England and other parts of Europe. The general news is not important. Accounts from Ireland are not favorable.

THE FORGERY CASE. The Grand Jury of Suffolk have found a bill against George Miller for issuing notes purporting to be signed by S. F. Belknap, which notes were denied by him. He was arraigned and pleaded not guilty, and was put under bonds of $15,000.

RUM AND MISSIONARIES. The bark Catalpa sailed from Boston on Wednesday for Smyrna, having on board thirty thousand gallons of rum, and five missionaries—two men and three women. The missionaries (not the rum) are bound for the Syrian Mission. Appropriate services were held on board previous to sailing.

FIRE. An old building situated near the head of the Canal, in this town, was nearly destroyed by fire on Wednesday last. It was owned by Mr. L. Furnald and occupied by him as a stable and lodging room. The loss probably did not exceed one hundred dollars.

BOSTON ALMANAC. This valuable little annual may be purchased at Mrs. E. Hayden's Drug Store, rear of the Stone Temple; also, various other almanacs for 1848.

SENATOR FAIRFIELD. Hon. John Fairfield, United States Senator from Maine, died at Washington on Friday night of last week. He was in his seat in the Senate on Thursday. His sudden death was the result of a surgical operation. He had suffered from dropsy in the knee, which caused great pain, and diminished his usefulness, and in the hope of obtaining relief he submitted to an experiment which has proved fatal. The operation had once before been tried and afforded temporary relief, and Mr. F. thought that a deeper incision would affect a more permanent cure. His remains will be taken to Saco, (Me.) where he has a large family. He was much beloved and respected by his connexions and townsmen, and his sudden death has caused deep sensation in the place.

COURT AT DEDHAM. The Court of Common Pleas has been in session at Dedham about two weeks.

Thomas Kernan, for stealing from Albert J. Mosher, George H. French and Whitcomb Porter, was found guilty—for entering the Depot, the indictment for informality was quashed, and the assault, etc. on the woman was continued to the April term of the court.

In the case between Messrs. Henry Wood and George Veazie of this town, we learn that Veazie was adjudged to pay five dollars damages and costs.

In the case of the Commonwealth vs. Benjamin Ryan of Braintree, for an assault upon the Rev. Aaron Haynes, by an appeal from the Justises' Court, the case was decided in favor of Ryan, reversing the decision of the Justice, N. L. White, Esq.

UNITARIANS IN THE UNITED STATES. There are 244 Societies, of which 162 are in Massachusetts, (22 being in Boston,) 15 in Maine, 24 in New Hampshire, 6 in Vermont, 4 in Connecticut, 3 in Rhode Island, 13 in New York, 1 in Ohio, 1 in Kentucky, 8 in Illinois, 2 in Indiana, 1 in Missouri, 1 in Wisconsin, 3 in Pennsylvania, 1 South Carolina, 1 in Georgia, 1 in Louisiana, 1 in Alabama, 1 in Maryland, 1 in District Columbia, 2 in Canada. In England there are over 300 Unitarian Societies, and about one half the Protestants on the continent are said to be Unitarians.

MEXICO. The latest intelligence is not of great moment. Twelve thousand men were on their way to join Gen. Scott.

A new substitute for Ether has been invented recently by a medical gentleman of Edinburgh. It is said to be very pleasant to the taste, and its perfume is represented as very agreeable.

In the Court of Common Pleas at Dedham, Judge Forbes imposed a fine of $20 and costs upon William McGee, of Roxbury, for refusing to obey a summons to attend Court.

Four new territories will probably be instituted by the present Congress, viz; Nebraska, west of Missouri; Itaska, north of Wisconsin; Minesota, west of the same; and, another territory running up to the extreme Northwestern boundary.

A Naval Court Martial is to be held at the Charlestown Navy Yard on the 10th inst. for the trial of Commander R. S. Pinckney, late of the ship Decatur, on charge of misconduct. Com. Downes presides.

Selden Brainard, convicted of forgery at Brooklyn, (N. Y.) has been sentenced to five years imprisonment in the State Prison.

John Hartigan and Patrick Darnley, charged with being the murderers of Dennis Mahegin, at Sanbornton, (N. H.) were arrested in Boston on the 22d ult. Mahegin was a contractor, and had discharged these two men from his employ.

The reception of Gen. Taylor cost the municipal authorities of New Orleans more than nine thousand dollars.

The Boston Courier says that nine tenths of the fashionable church music is a libel on devotion, and ought to be hooted from society.

The winters of 1709, '16, '39, '47, '54, '63, '76, '84, '88, and '89, are all recorded as having been intensely cold throughout Europe.

A lady of Boston recently applied for admission to the anatomical lectures in that city, but with what success has not been ascertained.

The Speaker of the House of Representatives has prohibited the sale of liquors in the subterranean apartments of the Capitol connecting with the House of Representatives. A similar course has been adopted by the Vice President on the Senate side of the Capitol.

Counterfeit fives and threes of the Randolph Bank, altered from some broken Michigan Bank, are in circulation. The signatures are very badly done.

The "Prisoner's Friend," published at Boston by Messrs Charles and John M. Spear, is to be enlarged and improved. The price is also to be raised to two dollars.

Father Matthew told Father Taylor, when recently in Ireland, that if the grain produced last year, in Great Britain, had not been used for the purposes of distilling, there need not have been any famine or starvation in Ireland.

The Emperor of China says: Wherever Christians go, they whiten the soil with human bones; and I will not have Christianity in my empire.

One hundred and three hogsheads of adulterated wine were thrown into the Seine, the other day, and shortly afterwards the river, for the distance of one hundred yards, was covered with innumerable fishes, poisoned by the deleterious compounds intended for human stomachs.

The wife is the sun of the social system. Unless she attracts, there is nothing to keep heavy bodies, like husbands, from flying off into space.

A lecturer down east defines widows as 'second hand wives.'

A horse is on exhibition at Cincinnati, whose body is covered with a coat of fine wool, in the place of hair. His color is between that of a mouse and dun color. He was brought from the Rocky Mountains.

A French author has discovered that women never pardon a man for losing an opportunity of loving them.

A difficulty occurred at New Haven on the 23d inst, between two tutors and two students. One of the tutors was wounded with a sword cane, but the injury is not likely to prove fatal, and the other was knocked down with an iron bar, and seriously wounded. He is not expected to survive. The students were arrested and held to bail in $8000 each, which they could not procure, and they were therefore remanded to prison.

At the Eighth District Convention held in Dedham last week, E. K. Whitaker, Esq., of Needham, was elected Delegate to the National Convention, and F. A. Kingsbury, Esq., of Weymouth, substitute.

The remains of Mrs. J. P. Bigelow of Boston, who recently died in Europe, have arrived and been interred at Mount Auburn with appropriate ceremonies.

An Elephant at the Zoological Institute in Philadelphia became unmanageable recently and nearly killed his keeper; broke open the cages of the animals, and created a general excitement, but he was finally secured. His keeper has since died of his wounds.

The Hon. Samuel Hubbard, Judge of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts, died in Boston last week. Mr. Hubbard graduated at Yale College in 1802, and was about sixty-five years old. He was a man of sterling abilities and elevated character.

Oh holy be the marriage bands
That firmly bind two willing hands,
And blest the power that love imparts
To blend as one two willing hearts.

May all the joys the virtues bring
From this Hymenial union spring,
And all those cares that life oppress
By being shar'd be felt the less.

May peace and comfort crown your days
And children rise to speak your praise,
And may that power who rules above
Look down and bless your vows of love.

So pray your friends and so will pray
Your friend and Hyman's F. M. A.

DIED.

In this town, 27th ult, Mary Ann W., daughter of the late Mr. Lemuel Spear, aged 14 years.

Yet as our earthly pleasures fade, if plants of purer peace
Spring in our bosom's wilderness, and nurtured there increase,
And humble hope, and holy fear, our wounded bosoms fill,
They'll teach us all the blessedness of yielding to his will.

Then seek not hours of sober grief or sorrowing thoughts to shun,
Until we feel that we can say, "Thy will, not mine, be done."
And then our hearts to him will pay our homage pure and warm,
Who saw the cloud o'er those we loved and housed them from the storm. S.

Dec 31st, Mary F. daughter of Mr. Hazen and Mrs. Susan Longie, aged 9 years and 5 months.

In Braintree, on the 19th ult., Mrs Rhoda, wife of Mr. Charles Faxon, aged 57.

Friends, Patrons, AND FELLOW CITIZENS,

I wish you all a Happy New Year!!

NOW for a little fun and nonsense. There is quite an excitement about town, among the profession, because

GEORGE B. NIGHTINGALE

has been SHOEING UP not more than half of creation, for the last eight years, with

BOOTS & SHOES.

Well, let 'em "go it." "Guess there wont be much of a shower after all," as the chap said when Noah wouldn't let him get into the ark,—calculate to keep doing so right strait along, every time. Why my dear "fellow critters," we don't mean to brag, but you undertake to take a look at OUR Boots and Shoes and the first you know you get your foot right strait in; there you are, stuck fast; then out comes the old pocket book with THE SHINERS; that's just what we want, and nothing else,—much better than credit; credit takes time to no purpose, oftentimes, and time, you know, is money. The pay down system is the only true one, after all,—the best remedy for corns and unpleasant dreams. The man that takes a pair of BOOTS or SHOES with one hand, and PULLS OUT THE CASH with the other, is independent; like all other tubs, he stands on his own bottoms; give me the man that shells out the stuff like a sheaf of wheat in cold weather and we'll set him on his taps in a giffy. I therefore advise all mankind, womankind, and every other kind that wears SHOE LEATHER, to CALL when they find themselves ailing about the UNDERSTANDINGS. The Doctors may tinker up the physical frame but I'd beat 'em hollow at repairing Damaged Soles (with the best material for such cases)

P. S. Needn't be particular about knocking when you wish to come in; never mind for a little mud as we have it in abundance. Brooms are plenty and cheap for the tin.

With the money you can buy
Boots, Caps, Shoes—come and try;
Findings, also, made to use
For to make good Boots or Shoes.

When your Shoes are full of holes,
Or should need a pair of Soles,
I can mend them if you will
Just call in and pay the bill.

GEORGE B. NIGHTINGALE.

Samaritan Balm.

For the cure of Coughs, Colds, and Diseases of the Lungs!

ANOTHER evidence of the benefits derived from the use of this invaluable Medicine:

Boston, Nov. 1, 1847.

Messrs. Otis, Broaders & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen—Please send me by Expressss six dozen more of the "Samaritan Balm." Its virtues are fully established in our neighborhood, and I do not hesitate to say that the sale of it has been far greater than any new medicine I ever attempted to introduce. Of its benefits I can speak from actual experience, as being decidedly the best remedy for colds and diseases of the Lungs I ever tried. Last winter I was sorely afflicted with an attack of the "Bronchitis," when the good lady whose invention it is kindly prepared me a bottle which has completely cured me; and from the benefits I myself have personally derived from its use, I feel grateful that she has been prevailed upon to give so valuable a medicine to the world. Notwithstanding she has done it with a any wish to profit by it in a pecuniary point of view, I hope and trust she will reap a rich reward for her goodness towards suffering humanity. Yours, truly, D. BUGBEE.

☞Price one dollar per bottle—six bottles for five dollars.

THE asperities of Disease are often enhanced by the rigorous measures undertaken by designing or ignorant persons in Attempting Cures. THE DISCRIMINATING KNOWLEDGE, whereby we may know these remedies which shall perfect a RAPID CURE, is of difficult acquisition.

It is in fact only obtained after LABORIOUS RESEARCH by the Student of Nature, the only true scholar of medicine, and the experience of the Sages of the Native Tribes are the true guides in directing those researches. If it were not for the invaluable gifts of the Clothing! Clothing!!

Particular Notice.

WE wish to have it distinctly understood, notwithstanding all that may have been said to the contrary, (by those interested,) that

READY MADE CLOTHING
AT

IS STILL IN SUCCESSFUL OPERATION AT THE CELEBRATED

ROUGH AND READY HALL,

Where can be found the largest and best selected Stock of

READY MADE CLOTHING,
In the town of Quincy or vicinity,

Suitable for the present and coming season, all of which will be sold at the usual low prices for which

ROUGH & READY HALL IS SO JUSTLY CELEBRATED.

N. B. We would also say that ALL ARTICLES which are sold at this establishment are what some of our neighbors would facetiously call

SLOP MADE,

having the impression, we suppose, from the IMMENSE DIFFERENCE IN PRICES between our establishment and their own, that our Clothing could not be well got up at the extremely low price we sell for.

We would merely say as regards STYLE, FIT AND WORKMANSHIP, all Clothing that is sold at

ROUGH & READY HALL,

WILL COMPARE TO ADVANTAGE with any articles manufactured as custom work, so called, in Town.

Quincy, Nov. 27. tf GEORGE SAVIL & Co.

TESTIMONIALS.

This certifies that I am personally acquainted with DR. DUDLEY of Boston, have examined his work, and seen him operate on the Teeth, and believe him to be worthy of confidence. I have known his partner, D. S. GRANDIN, M. D., for nearly twenty years as a scientific and skillful Dentist. For inserting artificial teeth in my estimation he has no superior.

G. WARE GAY, M. D.
Quincy, Nov. 11, 1847.

This may certify, that I have examined several specimens of Dental Plate work executed by Dr. Dudley of Boston, which exhibit great skill and ingenuity. The teeth are incorruptable, and so closely imitate nature that it would be next to impossible to distinguish them from natural ones. Dr. Dudley has operated successfully on my own teeth to my great comfort, and in my presence upon those of others, and I can recommend him as an artist deserving of the confidence of the public.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

TO THE MOON.

I wish thou wert a living thing,
That I might tell thee how I love thee ;
To thee my sweetest notes I'd sing
And sound thy praise to gems above thee.

I love thee in thy crescent form,
Nor less when deck'd with all thy graces,
Or lonely struggling through the storm
When all the stars have hid their faces.

Some call thee changefull, but not I,
Thou keep'st thy course, God knows, most duly ;
The fault is in the gazer's eye,
That lacks the power to see thee truly.

Thou look'st on me with thy sweet face,
And always look so mild and cheerly,
I almost fancy I can trace
The look of one I loved most dearly.

But now good night, thou beauteous thing,
While you o'er earth a watch are keeping,
If you won't listen while I sing
Perhaps you'll kiss me while I'm sleeping.

F. M. ADLINGTON, Weymouth.

TO OUR SOLDIERS IN MEXICO.

The following lines are going the rounds of the papers ; the initials will be recognized by many of our readers.

Come back to your homes, the call must go forth,
That bids you come back to your homes at the north.
Welcome back, for your country has witnessed with pride
How her soldiers have fought, how her soldiers have died.

You have borne our loved banner resistlessly on,
While the world could scarce reckon the victories won.
By breeze and by flash, came the tidings of glory,
Unsung by the bard, and unequalled by story.

The foe to you numbered, as leaves to the tree,
Yet onward you swept as the stream to the sea.
They died as they lived, but encumbering the soil,
Or they fled as they flee who steal rather than toil.

O'er vale and o'er hill top, o'er desert and town,
Those stars shine in brightness that never go down.
And the red and the white stripes, above which they burn,
Speak the conflict and truce, that you offered in turn.

Now curb the fierce war horse, with care bid him tread,
In retracing his steps o'er the fields of the dead.
Protect the defenceless—the needy relieve—
Encourage and comfort the stricken who grieve

Let them see that our eagle stoops not in his flight,
That mercy is mingled with valor and might.
Let them see, though your country has bidden the blow
That your breasts are yet human, with love they still glow.

Then back to your homes—give the conquered release,
War's trappings exchange for the garments of peace ;
For the sword, in no conflict, wins laurels like those
That the Judge of life's battle, on victors bestows.

J. R. B.

I CANNOT FORGET THEE.

I cannot forget thee—the struggle is vain,
Thine image will come in its freshness again ;
To bring back the past, with its hopes and its fears,
Its joys and its sorrows, its sunshine and its tears.

I love thee, I love thee—I cannot resign
The fond hope that whispers, thou yet will be mine ;
At morning, at evening, in dreams thou art near,
And accents I lov'd sweetly fall on my ear.

Let fate do her worst, she can never efface
From my mind or my heart, thy name or thy place ;
The cold world in vain our union would sever ;
Thou art my belov'd, thou art mine, and forever !

ANECDOTES.

When Mason was preparing the case of E. K. Avery, and had examined about two hundred witnesses, somebody called to see him. The legal gentleman sent word that he was occupied and could not be interrupted. "But the man is a witness, a Methodist minister." "Call him up," said Mason. "Well, sir, what can you testify ?"

"I have had a vision ; two angels have appeared to me and told me that brother Avery is innocent—"

"Let them be summoned," said Mason, and resumed his work.

'Old man ! I wish you would hand over that newspaper. It isn't reasonable that you should have it all the time. I'm in a hurry.'

'Why, son I am astonished. Is that the way you address your father ?"

'Why not old covey—when you go on reading the paper straight through, and here I've been waiting for it a quarter of an hour ? There will be a muss if I don't get it soon. Don't you think I want to know something about the horse race, and Bonney Vestey, and Old Zack, as well as other folks. I won't stand it much longer—hand it over, I say !'

'You Zeke !'

'What, ma ?'

'Have you sanded your teeth and tallowed your hair ?'

'Yes, ma.'

'Tarred your boots and corked your eyebrows ?'

'Yes, ma.'

'Then tenzle your hat and go to meeting ; we must be as fashionable as our neighbors.'

An Irishman, in speaking of a spell of sickness he had, said : 'Be my faith, I laid spachless six weeks in the long month of August, and all my cry was, 'wather !' wather !' '

'Have you any cold victuals ?' said a little urchin to a young lady who opened the door in obedience to his rap. 'Oh, no,' she replied jocosely ; 'they are all hot !' 'Then, please Miss,' returned the varlet, 'I'll wait till they are cold.'

What is that which fastens two people together and yet touches but one of them ? A wedding ring.

D., is one of the oldest Dentists in Boston, was formerly a distinguished operator in New York, and as a plate worker, excelled by none in the profession. Here are some of the many testimonies which he has received from distinguished men :

Extract of a letter from Dr. S. F. Fitch of Philadelphia, author of a large work on Dental Surgery, to Eleazer Parmly, dated June, 1843.

'Dr Grandin operates very handsomely upon the teeth. He has plugged several for me to my great comfort and satisfaction. The Doctor's acquirements and personal good character must, I think, give him a very respectable standing as a scientific Surgeon Dentist. S. F. FITCH.'

From Reuben D Massey, M. D., formerly Professor of Anatomy and Surgery at Dartmouth College, (N H) and at, present Professor of Anatomy and Surgery at the Medical College at Cincinnati, Ohio.

'I am acquainted with Dr. Grandin, and regard him as a very skillful dentist, well qualified to operate in all the departments of the profession. Dr. G. manufactures and uses the porcelain teeth and those too of superior quality, as I should judge from the tests to which I have seen them subjected. I do not hesitate to recommend Dr. Grandin to those who may wish to employ a good dentist. R D. MUSSEY.'

From Parker Cleavland, M. D , Professor of Chemistry, Mineralogy and Natural Philosophy at Bowdoin College, Brunswick, (Me.)

'I have seen the porcelain teeth manufactured by David S. Grandin, M. D., and from their composition as stated by him to me, and from the tests to which I have seen them subjected by Dr. G., I am disposed to consider them of superior quality, and not liable to be affected by any agents to which they may be exposed in the mouth. MISCELLANY.

A THANKSGIVING SERMON.

We make the following extract from a sermon delivered in the city of Mexico, by the Chaplain of the United States Army, on the 3d of October, on the occasion of a public thanksgiving for the victories achieved by the army. We should be pleased to publish the whole, agreeable to request, but its great length will not admit of it.

War—though a great calamity—attended with much that is to be deplored—and involving a terrible responsibility on the governments which are parties to it, is still in the actual condition of mankind, necessary and right, at least on one side—as the means of national defence and preservation—of preventing the repetition of national wrongs, by their punishment, of redressing injuries inflicted and obtaining rights withheld. When, therefore, a people succeed in a war, waged by the government for these ends, they have cause of thanksgiving to the great Disposer of events, from whom that success has proceeded. For victory in war is not only amongst the greatest of national deliverances and blessings, considered in itself, but it is the only means of gaining the object contended for, and procuring an honorable and advantageous peace—the true end of victory.

It should however be born in mind, that the responsibility of the war, as before observed—that is to say, the determination of its necessity and righteousness, rests not on those who serve in the army, but on the constituted authorities of the country, whose orders it is the soldiers' duty to obey and execute. He should to be sure, in his private capacity, desire and pray, that he may never be called to do battle, but in a righteous cause—righteous on the part of his government. Still as a general rule it is his duty, to submit to the official determination of the authority of the country, over him, and with courage and might to prosecute, in his station, the war it has declared or sanctioned. And without reference to the origin of this war, it is unquestionably our duty as officers and solders, vigorously to wage it, in order to obtain the ends for which it exists, and to conquer a just and honorable peace, as its happy conclusion. In the prosecution of this war, waged, as it has been, with the most scrupulous regard, on our part, to the laws of warfare recognized by the civilized and christian nations, valor on the part of the soldier, whether in command or in the ranks, is due to his country—and on the other hand, his achievements should be celebrated, and his services rewarded by appropriate distinctions—for he not only renders the most important service to his country, but in doing so, braves the greatest dangers and perils his dearest possession—life itself.

My brethren—we have cause of gratitude to God, in the reflection that we belong through his providential appointments to a brave as well as a free race, and that He has inspired our commands with wisdom and military skill, to combine these elements of individual power, in the achievement of exploits, which as they are the proper subject of our own wonder, we may modestly deem, will be that of our country's admiration. But that we may be truly influenced by gratitude, we must believe, what we acknowledge in the thanksgiving of the church, that, 'as the Sovereign Commander of all the world,' He is indeed 'the only giver of all victory,' and that not unto us—not unto us—but to the Lord belongs the praise. And assuredly, if the hand of the Almighty Disposer is ever to be recognized in the affairs of the world, it would seem that it must be, in such signal and important events, as those which we are now called upon to consider, and be thankful for. And without reference to the origin of this war, it is unquestionably our duty as officers and solders, vigorously to wage it, in order to obtain the ends for which it exists, and to conquer a just and honorable peace, as its happy conclusion. In the prosecution of this war, waged, as it has been, with the most scrupulous regard, on our part, to the laws of warfare recognized by the civilized and christian nations, valor on the part of the soldier, whether in command or in the ranks, is due to his country—and on the other hand, his achievements should be celebrated, and his services rewarded by appropriate distinctions—for he not only renders the most important service to his country, but in doing so, braves the greatest dangers and perils his dearest possession—life itself.

My brethren—we have cause of gratitude to God, in the reflection that we belong through his providential appointments to a brave as well as a free race, and that He has inspired our commands with wisdom and military skill, to combine these elements of individual power, in the achievement of exploits, which as they are the proper subject of our own wonder, we may modestly deem, will be that of our country's admiration. But that we may be truly influenced by gratitude, we must believe, what we acknowledge in the thanksgiving of the church, that, 'as the Sovereign Commander of all the world,' He is indeed 'the only giver of all victory,' and that not unto us—not unto us—but to the Lord belongs the praise. And assuredly, if the hand of the Almighty Disposer is ever to be recognized in the affairs of the world, it would seem that it must be, in such signal and important events, as those which we are now called upon to consider, and be thankful for. And all but the utterly irreligious will own his favoring Providence, manifestly displayed in our behalf, not indeed, that we infer from success, his approval of the cause of our country, or that he has taken our side, because we are better or more deserving than our opponent—no—for often does He in his inscrutable wisdom permit the apparent wrong to succeed, and the right to be defeated. Such an inference is not involved in our thanksgivings, which have a distinct and all-sufficent object in our individual deliverance from great and imminent danger from 'the arrow that flieth by day'—from 'the pestilence that walketh in darkness'—and from 'the destruction that wasteth at noon-day'—that while 'a thousand have fallen at our side, and ten thousand at our right hand,' He, in his mercy, hath not permitted this sudden death to 'come nigh us.' We find a further object in the benefits conferred by these repeated victories on our army and country, and the more unmerited are our blessings, the warmer should be our gratitude.

In considering how great things the 'Good Lord hath done for us,' we must regard the uniformity of our success. What is true of the whole war, is especially so, of this entire campaign, from the landing of our army at Vera Cruz, up to the capture of this city. We have succeeded in all we have undertaken—never engaged in fight, but to conquor—never attacked, but to defeat our enemy. All difficulties, however great, have been overcome—all opposition, however formidable, born down. No place of defence, so strong by nature or by the art of fortification, has been able to resist our assault. And more remarkable still, the peculiarities of the climate and seasons have not presented their anticipated obstacles, and the very elements have been made to minister to our aid—the 'fortune of war' (so called) has been uninterruptedly with us—crowning with eminent success all our plans and battles, and consummating the campaign in our possession of this capital of Mexico. Say then, ye oppugners of Providence—ye advocates of blind chance, can aught but the admission of a purpose in the mind of the great Disposer of events who holds the very winds in his fist, account for such marvellous uniformity?

Then, further, to see the hand of God in all this, let us consider that in all our principal battles, we have been greatly outnumbered by the enemy, who nevertheless instead of making attack, has awaited it from us, and that too in positions selected and fortified, so as greatly to increase his power of resistance, yet all in vain. Well might our foe be astonished at our daring with such diminutive forces, to penetrate so far into the interior of a country, inhabited by at least seven millions of people—at our venturing to march so far from the sea board, thereby encountering the great difficulty of keeping open our communications with the places whence our reinforcements and supplies were to be drawn; and how greatly that astonishment must have been increased, when they saw us, with forces so apparently inadequate to the object, abandon that very communication, those reinforcements and supplies, and with a hardihood, which can only find a parallel in the army of Cortez, trust to our stout hearts and strong arms in forcing our subsistance from themselves. It only remained that their emotions should mount to the wonder which now possesses them, when in despite of all these disadvantages added to our deficiency in heavy artillery—(since supplied from their own superabundance at Contreras and Churubusco,) we forced our way into the very heart of a country so capable of defence by passes and defiles that it seemed to bid defiance to all skill and numbers! Yet such is the fact; and 'when,' (in the words of the order referred to,) 'the very limited numbers who have performed those brilliant deeds, shall have become known, the world will be astonished, and our own countrymen filled with joy and admiration.'

BOOTS AND SHOES, AND LEATHER DEALERS. The Boot and Shoe Business is undoubtedly the largest manufacturing business in the United States, producing commodities to the amount, as estimated by the Rochester American, of fifty millions of dollars annually, and employing over 100,000 persons—male and female.

In Massachusetts, by the statistical returns of 1846, there were made in that year—

3,768,168 pair of boots, and 17,128,412 pairs of shoes.

Total value of Boots and Shoes made,	$14,779,140.
Amount of Leather made in the State in 1846,	3,836,659.
Value of shoe pegs made,	18,306.
Value of lasts made,	80,154.
Value of India rubber shoes,	312,000.
Total,	$19,026,250;

No machinery is used, except for lasts and pegs.

Many of the Western dealers found the market so limited this fall, that they were unable to get their usual supply. The price has advanced from ten to fifteen per cent.

The Canada tariff in 1845 placed a duty on the American articles at so high a rate that it amounts to prohibition. The Yankees, however, are not to be outdone by its operations. Messrs Brown & Child of Montreal, have opened an extensive manufactory there, and employ some 400 werkmen from Massachusetts. They are now supplying the dealers in the Upper and Lower Provinces.

FORCED TO MARRY.

This perhaps, should be called a novel rather than a romance; but the turn of the adventure is at all events rare and unexpected, and entertainment is increased by the maliciously comic figure cut by the melancholy Cromwell, whose propensity to the refreshment of a little occasional fun is here gratified in a manner that must have been as delightful to himself as distracting to the poor divine. It is a regular scene in a play, transferred to the stage of life.

Jeremiah White received a liberal education and was brought up at Trinity College, Cambridge, of which house he became a fellow. In the troublesome time of the war Mr. White's politics led him to join the prevailing powers, and in time procured him to be made preacher to the council of state, and domestic chaplain to his highness, Oliver, lord protector. He was a very sprightly and facetious man, despised the cant and hypocrisy of the puritanical party of his time, and was considered one of the chief wits of the protector's court. Possessing all the advantages of youth and a fine person, he had the ambition to aspire to the hand of Cromwell's youngest daughter, the lady Frances. The young lady appears by no means to have discouraged his addresses, but in so religous a court his gallantry could not be carried on without being taken notice of; the protector was informed of it, and having no inclination for such an alliance, was so much concerned, that he ordered the person who told him to keep a strict look out, promising, if he should give him any substantial proofs, he should be well rewarded and White severely punished. The spy followed his business so close, that in a little time he dogged Jerry White (as he was generally called) to the lady's chamber, and ran immediately to the protector to acquaint him that they were together. Oliver in a rage hastened to the chamber, and going hastily in, found Jerry on his knees, either kissing his daughter's hand or having just kissed it. Cromwell in a fury asked what was the meaning of that posture before his daughter Frances? White, with a great deal of presence of mind, said, 'May it please your highness, I have a long time courted that young gentlewoman there, my lady's woman, and cannot prevail; I was therefore humbly praying her ladyship to intercede for me,' Oliver turning to the young woman, cried, 'What's the meaning of this, hussy? Why do you refuse the honor Mr. White would do you? He is my friend, and I expect you to treat him as such.' My lady's woman, who desired nothing better, with a low courtesy replied, 'If Mr. White intends me that honor, I shall not be against him.' 'Sayest thou so, my lass,' cried Cromwell, 'call Goodwyn: this business shall be done presently before I go out of the room.' Mr. White had gone too far to recede from this proposal; his brother parson came, and Jerry and my lady's woman were married in the presence of the protector, who gave the bride £500 to her portion, to the secret disappintment and indignation of the enraged dupe of his own making, but to the entire gratification and satisfaction of the fair Abigail, the moment they were made one flesh, who, by this unexpected good fortune obtained a husband much above her most sanguine hope or expectation.

The restoration deprived White of all hope of preferment if he refused to take the oaths, and offered him but faint prospects if he did; he therefore prudently chose to remain quiescent, for he was too pleasant a man to take up his abode in a prison for preaching in a conventicle. His wit and cheerfulness gained him many friends, but he would have found himself more at home in the palace of Charles II. than in that of Oliver. He survived not only the Restoration and the Revolution, but the Union, and died in 1707, aged 78.

When the story of his marriage was mentioned before Mrs. White (who survived her husband), she always simpered her assent to its truth.

FEMALE DELICACY.

This being a practical subject, and one in which the well-being of the rising generation is deeply interested, no apology will be offered for plainly stating some instances in which the female delicacy is lost, and the sister graces retire to make room for a rude train. And how far mothers may feel themselves to blame for such displays of their daughters, perhaps they will endeavor candidly to decide.

Miss Consequentia has reached her seventeenth year. She is the daughter of Christian parents, and has been for some time under the instruction of a fashionable and popular preceptor, and has so much improved as to be remarkably well satisfied with her own attainments. Her mother, 'good, easy woman,' is charmed with her daughter's spirit. 'My C.,' she often says, with great complacency, 'is a girl of so much independence of thinking, that when once her mind is made up, no one can turn her; and she has great decision of character, although it is certainly rather too bad that she does not mind a word I say.' 'Not at all too bad,' replied Miss C.; 'you old people have such antiquated ways of thinking.'

The Misses Vociffere are the daughters of the first merchant in the city—are said to be highly accomplished—can sing and play well—feel a great deal of dignity, and have such high notions of delicacy, that, to be seen in a night cap, or repairing an old garment, or mending a stocking, would put them in a flutter not easily allayed; and yet frequently, when riding or walking through the streets, the loud and boisterous laugh, the vulgar stare, the stentorian question and answer, attract the astonished gaze of the passing traveller; and delicacy, stripped of its leaves, drops its head as if ashamed, and, in confusion, seeks to hide its blushes.

Miss Fastideo thinks it highly indelicate for a female to be attractively and publicly engaged in any of the Christian enterprises of the church of which she is a member, because thay must necessarily sometimes place her in a prominent attitude before a scoffing world, which will excite 'attention and remark, which, of all things, a professing female ought to shun.' And yet the newest fashion is readily complied with by her, although that fashion require a shortening of the dress, or an exposure of the shoulders.

The Misses Loquacity are fine girls, but such talkers!—know all news, and, as the entertainment of the company who visit at their parents' house usually devolves upon them (for their mother, in her zeal that her daughters should not appear awkward in company, uses them to the etiquette of the parlor, whilst she superintends the refinements of the kitchen, as displayed in the luxuries of the table,) they talk on all subjects; and, as many persons, from motives of politeness, have allowed their incorrect opinions to pass unreproved, they think themselves very wise and womanly, and are consequently constantly guilty of great indelicacy of manners.

ORIGIN OF ENGLAND'S NATIONAL DEBT. The Democratic Review says that 'the existing debt had a most fitting commencement, viz: an agreement to pay a theft of Charles II. At that time there was a kind of money, issued by goldsmiths as a 'receipt for coin' lodged with them on deposit. Charles, always in a strait for money, and surrounded by a most profligate set of men, was unable to borrow—his credit was gone. He therefore, with his worthy coadjutors, contrived to create a panic, during which he induced goldsmiths and merchants to lodge their money (£664,263.) in the exchequer for security. As soon as this was done, he abstracted the money and spent it in his revels. This sum, bearing six per cent. interest, commenced the English debt.

The people of England have paid interest on the money Charles stole and gave to his woman, £40,000 per annum for one hundred and eighty-one years, making £7,240,000. or $32,000,000, and the debt is no nearer extinguished than before. Gradually increasing during the eighteenth century, the debt arose to £262,463.043 in 1793. In the following twenty-two years, which is the estimate for the life of a generation, it was increased to £510,000,000 sterling.

SOMETHING IN A NAME. Attention has been called to the appropriateness of the names of our military leaders. Taylor has had an infinite variety of jocular allusions to the manner in which he has sewed up the Mexican nation. Scott has fully proved his claims to the appellation of Win-field. Worth might have taken his name from his character and his deeds. Pierce has gone through the enemy like a streak of lightning, while the heavy blows of a Smith have rung loud and clear on the Mexican anvil. Wool, they say, has wooled our foes, and Twiggs twigged them to some purpose. Pillow has invited many a Mexican to his last slumber. Butler tapped his share of Mexican barrels at Monterey, while Hunter started the game out of Alvarado, and gave his commander no chance to be in at the death. The Indiana general showed Santa Anna that there was no 'turning' in the Lane. Some of our officers have proved even better than their names. Childs showed at Puebla that he was no baby, and Bragg proved himself more than a boaster at Buena Vista.

BAD ARRANGEMENT FOR SHERIFFS. The Japanese have a very efficient government, and obey the laws from a sense of honor rather than from force. In the whole Empire there is not a poblic executioner. When a man commits a crime that is adjudged worthy of death, he receives an official notification that such a day is appointed for him to die, at such an hour; time always being allowed the condemned to arrange his affairs. At the appointed hour he assembles his family bids them farewell, and then opens his own bowels.

GLUTTONY AND MODERATION. The quantity of food consumed by some insects is truely wonderful. Caterpillars will devour more than twice their own weight in a day. Some larvæ that live on flesh will in the course of a day increase two hundred times their weight. On the other hand, many are extremely abstemious. A mite will live three months though glued down to a piece of glass. Spiders will live a year without food. Mr. Baker kept a beetle three years in that condition. They eat everything but metals and stones.

BRAINS. The brain of man being taken in the proportion to his body, is stated by several writers as one to 30. (it might more correctly be as 1 to 40). It is curious to observe that the proportions are in moles as one to 36; in the Quistiti monkey, 1 to 24; in the rat 1 to 76; in the mouse, 1 to 43; in the field mouse 1 to 31; in the elephant, 1 to 500; in the sparrow and cock, 1 to 25; in the goose, 1 to 360; and in the canary only 1 to 14.

For the Quincy Patriot.

CANDIDATE FOR PRESIDENT.

The approach of the time at which the great parties of the country must select their candidates for President, to be voted for at the next election, has the natural effect of causing all who are interested in seeing that a proper successor be provided for Mr. Polk, to canvass the merits of those statesmen who have been named in the various quarters, as at once competent to fill the Executive chair, and who can bring certain influences to bear upon the decision of the question upon which the popular tribunal is to pass judgment. Every democrat must see that the candidate of his party, at the next election, should be a man of the first class, both as regards talent and undoubted attachment to principle. In making a selection of a candidate, the two points to be first considered, are, 1st, is the man proposed by any portion of the party, so sound in his views, and so honest in his general character, as to leave no doubt of his fidelity in the event of his elevation to the Presidency? and, 2d, is he possessed of that energy, decision, and firmness of character, which will convince all who desire the success of those principles of which he will be the representative, that he will be enabled to rise superior to all those influences which are brought to bear upon great officers, in the hope to make them swerve from the path of duty, and aid in promoting individual aggrandisement, or sectional purposes, at the expense of the general good? It is obvious, that unless these two vitally important questions can be answered in the affirmative, it will be idle to consider the 'claims' or 'merits' of any man who has been spoken of as likely to be the democratic candidate. For, if a man be not honest, if his principles be not sound, what signifies his intellectual character? Would he not prove more mischievous if possessed of great talent, than he would if he were a mere common-place character? And if not firm of purpose, what trust can be reposed in his honesty? The power to resist the blandishments of some, and the threats of others, is what is desirable in a President of the United States, even more than brilliant talents; and without it, honesty itself soon becomes of no practical use. Therefore, in selecting a candidate for the next Presidency, the democracy, if they desire to succeed, must nominate a man whose integrity will be sustained by unflinching decision—who has given evidence, in his past course, that he can be depended upon in those emergencies which try the character of men, and test the strength of parties and of nations.

Have we any such man in our party, and do circumstances point out the propriety of his nomination? We unhesitatingly reply that we have a man who unites in himself all the qualifications necessary to make a competent Chief Magistrate of the Republic. That man is GEORGE MIFFLIN DALLAS of Pennsylvania. Without meaning to cast the slightest disrespect upon any of the gentlemen who have been named in connection with the democratic nomination, we must be permitted to say, that in favor of no one of their number can there be presented weightier reasons for his being thus honored, than can be adduced in support of the propositton to nominate Mr. Dallas. The history of the Vice President shows that he is a democrat of whose fidelity to the great principles of his party, there cannot exist a shade of a doubt in the mind of any intelligent and impartial man. His whole course, for more than a quarter of a century, has been such we can rest assured that he is attached to correct principles, ready to support them to the full extent of his commanding powers, and to make use of the influences of any official position that he may occupy, to promote their advancement. Throughout his life, he has belonged to the liberal party, and there has scarcely been a question of moment before the country for settlement, that his name has not been found among those who have been most conspicuous in supporting that decision most calculated to subserve popular rights. He has been ever found faithful, and it was owing to this well known fact, that his nomination for the Vice Presidency, in 1844, gave such general satisfaction, though his name had not been mentioned in connection with that office previous to the meeting of the Baltimore Convention.

Of Mr. Dallas's firmness and of the likelihood of his not giving way before any attacks that may be made upon him by an opposition at once powerful and unscrupulous, we have the most abundant evidence in one of the latest acts of his life. We refer to his vote on the question of reducing the tariff of '42, which was before Congress in the summer of '46. The bill to liberalize our revenue system had passed the House of Representatives, and it soon became known that its fate in the Senate depended upon the casting vote of the Vice President, parties being equally divided in that body on the tariff question. The greatest exertions were made to secure that vote for the side of monopoly. Not only were they made in the Senate itself, by men of mighty intellect and vast influence, but the "pressure from without" was of a character before which any man of less than extraordinary firmness and honesty would have given way. It required regular JACKSON ENERGY to resist those exertions. That energy was not wanting to the occasion. The hour had come and the man was not absent. In spite of all the threats of the regular supporters of monopoly—in the face of attempts made to seduce him from the right path by either dishonest or timid friends—Mr. Dallas remained true to his principles, and gave his vote for that measure which has worked so well, and which was the first in a series of acts calculated to bind the various nations of the earth in the indissoluble ties of an enlarged interest. The manner in which his vote was received throughout the the republic, is the best commentary on its value, and the firmness necessary to cause it to be given. The true democracy hailed it with approbation; but that great and powerful party which makes up the opposition and which controls immense political and rival interests, gave utterance to a voice of condemnation, at once loud and deep, and calculated to intimidate all but mighty minds; and they were joined by a few of those timid democrats, who are so ready to take fright at a bold act from their own party, and who cannot bear that the whigs should ever be "stirred up." The Vice President was burnt in effigy,—one of those acts to which the "decency" party is so fond of exerting, in the hope of forever disgracing those of their opponents whom they can neither intimidate or seduce. But, as a lively writer has said, burning in effigy is the first step in that political martyrdom which ends in canonization. The people have always delighted to honor those whom the whigs have most bitterly denounced, and we feel convinced that the case of Mr. Dallas will form no exception to this general rule. The wisdom of his course is now as little doubted as its firmness. The "ruin" his vote was about to bring upon his country, according to prophecies of his opponents, has never shown its horrid front; but the times are as prosperous as any our country has ever known.

The opinion of a proposed candidate for the Presidency, on the disposition of the territory we are likely to acquire as one of the results of a treaty with Mexico, is a point of the very first importance. Here we find Mr. Dallas holding views on which the democratic party of both the north and the south can unite and march onward to victory, which has ever followed from their combined exertions, but which must fall to the lot of the enemy when the democracy are divided. In his address to the democratic citizens of Holidaysburg, (Pa.), Mr. Dallas, in speaking of that article of the Constitution which gives to Congress "the power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations the territory and other property belonging to the United States," made use of the following language:—"This constitutional clause bears solely upon property, upon naked land. If the territory be tenanted by men, and especially if these men have already their civil institutions and their domestic relations, and, still more stronger, if that territory has come to us covered with established societies by conquest or purchase, I cannot for an instant indulge the extravagant construction of this article which would empower Congress to extinguish the privilege of self-government, and to do precisely with the local communities what it pleased. At that rate, we might, one of these days, be shocked by an act of Congress formally establishing slavery among a people who disclaimed and excluded it; for if this clause of the Constitution impart any power to prohibit, it equally imparts the power to originate and legalize." These are the views upon which all patriotic citizens can unite, and circumstances point to Mr. Dallas as the most suitable man to be taken as their embodiment.

Though every man in this country must be the "author of his own wishes," it is no drawback to one in public life, that his name is historical, and that it is preeminently associated with that of the history of the republic. Such is the good fortune of Mr. Dallas. His family has an historical station. All his sympathies, in this regard, are with the liberal party of this country; and from this we can draw an additional guarantee of the safety of democratic principles should the government be entrusted to his hands.

The nomination of Mr. Dallas by the democracy, would not only be a wise act of itself, but would be doing justice to Pennsylvania. This great State has rendered immense service to the democracy, and by her votes and the moral influence of her action, she has more than once turned the tide of battle. Never but once did she vote for a federal whig candidate for the Presidency; and then she did not support her decision by one of those magnificent majorities she has so often rolled up in behalf of the democratic cause. A miserable plurality of less than four hundred was all that even the storm of 1840 could extort from her, when other States which had supported Jackson went for Harrison by majorities to be counted by thousands and in some instances, by tens of thousands. Yet this State, so useful in her action, and so consistant in her course, has had less to do directly with the government than almost any other member of the confederacy. First at the fight, she has always been last at the feast—often not even honored with an invitation to attend it. She has had the fighting to do, and little else. Never has she seen a son of hers in the Presidential chair—never has she given even a Vice President to the republic, except in the person of Mr. Dallas. Her share of cabinet appointments, and of diplomatic stations, has not been large, certainly not proportionate to her merits, and to the talents of her eminent men. It is time for this course of action to be changed. The great middle State has a right to be felt directly in the management of public affairs, in the ordering, controlling, and giving character to national policy. Justice and expediency alike dictate this; and what man so fit to be selected as the recipiant of an honor to be done through him to an eminent Commonwealth, as he who has made her weight felt in the national councils, at a time when monopoly sought to intimidate, and cowardice to seduce him from the support of the eternal principles of right?

SATURDAY, JAN. 8, 1848.

PREMIUM BOOTS AND SKILL APPRECIATED. At the last annual Mechanic's Fair, at Faneuil Hall, Boston, an opportunity was given of admiring the wonderful improvement which characterizes the present age, in regard to the several mechanical professions throughout the country. One of the most useful and respectable of the professions was beautifully represented by a specimen from the establishment of one of our most extensive boot and shoe manufactories. A diploma was awarded to Messrs. Adam Curtis & Co. for the ingenuity, elegance and utility exhibited in a pair of their light fancy boots. The specimen was truly beautiful. It would reflect credit upon any Parisian Manufactory. Composed of morocco and Patent leather, they combined all the elasticity of a sandal with the firmness of a buskin. The feet, which were fashioned similar to the modern French style, though exceedingly fanciful and gay, were also perfectly symmetrical and chaste. The taste and beauty of the style, must soon win the admiration of the lover of fashion and the votaries of Terpsichore.

In doing justice to genius, we would merely say, that these boots were designed and executed by Mr. J. W. Wills, one of the workmen employed by Messrs. Curtis & Co. Mr. Wills is one of those young men whom natural ability and assideous application to business have raised to a high eminence in his profession. Genius and industry are generally rewarded in this country, and we observe those establishments attaining the greatest celebrity, in all professions, which engage, and reward with liberality, the services of those most competent.

We advise all, who have a taste for this kind of mechanical ingenuity and skill, to improve their physical understandings, by a call on Mr. Curtis, and also on Mr. Wills,—"to boot."

THE THIRTIETH CONGRESS. The business before this body, although important, does not progress much. Twenty five thousand dollars have been appropriated by the Senate for the purchase of the Madison papers. A bill has been reported for adding ten regiments to the regular army, and another, for twenty new regiments of volunteers. The latter lies on the table till the first is disposed of. Much time has been occupied in debate on the ten regiment bill, amendments thereto, and on resolutions concerning the war. The House has been principally occupied with the reception of petitions, the discussion of war resolutions, and the passage of resolves calling for information from the executive department. A bill providing for the relief of the widows of revolutionary pensioners has been passed.

FOREIGN ARRIVAL. The steamer Caledonia arrived at Boston on Tuesday, bringing fourteen days later news from Europe. There had been a perceptible improvement in trade; money was more easy and failures were less frequent.

The Boston ship, Robert G. Shaw, from Charleston for Havre, with a cargo of cotton, was struck by lightning on the 6th ult., and burnt. The crew took to the long-boat and arrived at Brest on the 10th.

Ralph Waldo Emerson is to deliver a course of lectures before the Edinburgh Philosophical Institution.

MASSACHUSETTS LEGISLATURE. The members elect to both branches, assembled at the Capitol on Wednesday. The Senate organized by the choice of Hon. Zenas Scudder as President, and the re-election of Charles Calhoun as Clerk. Information was sent to the Governor and to the House of the organization, and after some preliminary business the Senate adjourned.

The House was called to order by Mr. Kellogg of Hadley, who was a member in 1809, and information sent to the Governor that the House was ready to organize. Two hundred and seventy four members were in attendance. His Excellency administered the oath in due form, and the members proceeded to ballot for Speaker. On the third balloting, F. B. Crowningshield had 145 of 252 votes cast and was declared elected. Mr. Charles W Story was then re-elected Clerk, the usual preliminary business was transacted, and the House adjourned.

A procession was formed at the State House and the Governor and Council, escorted by the Cadets, proceeded to the Old South Church. The customary election sermon was delivered by Rev. Mr. Vinton.

On Thursday but little business transpired in either branch. Benjamin Stevens was re-elected Sergeant-at-Arms, by the House, having 228 of 231 votes cast. Chaplains were also chosen.

FIRE AT WEST RANDOLPH. A stable, and two horses, three cows, a yoke of oxen, and thirty tons of hay, belonging to Hon. Bradford L. Wales, were destroyed by fire, last week, at West Randolph—supposed to be the act of an incendiary. Mr. Wales was partially insured.

FROM MEXICO. Gen. Lane has had a fight with the Mexicans at a place called "Matamoras," in which he whipped his opposers and released several American prisoners. No other news of consequence.

ADJUTANT GENERAL. George H. Devereux, Esq., of Salem, has been selected by his Excellency, the Governor and Commander-in-Chief, to be the successor of Gen. Oliver, in the Adjutant General's Department.

PRETTY GOOD. One John Davidson out in Illinois, run away with the wife of a corn speculator, whose name is not mentioned. The speculator heard of the fugitives at Natchez, and fearing that Davidson would run short of money, he sent him a fifty dollar note in a letter, and told him if he didn't clear down east with the woman he'd gouge out both his eyes and thrash him within an inch of his life. It is supposed the happy pair sloped, as they have not been since heard of by their Illinois friends.

SINGULAR DECISION. The London Observer states that it has been decided recently by Lord Denman and the other Judges of the Court of Queen's Bench, that according to the new law of England, a marriage with the sister of a deceased wife is absolutely null and void; and as a matter of course all the children of such a marriage are illegitimate.

IMPORTANT DECISION. The Superior Court of New Hampshire, at the late term decided, in a suit upon a note given for spiritnous liquors sold without license, that the sale being illegal, the note was without legal consideration and could not be recovered. This is a very important decision; and will compel dealers in liquor to require "pay down."

FIRE. Another incendiary fire occurred in this town last Thursday evening, by which an old dwelling house situated on Common street, worth $300, and owned by widow Guildford Field, was destroyed. A family had moved out of the house the day previous. We learn that Mrs. F. is quite an aged lady, and that this building was about her only source of income. There was no insurance.

Some friends of the Sabbath have offered 100 dollars for the best approved tract of four, eight, or twelve pages, showing the pernicious influence of Sabbath recreations on health and morals, and meeting the popular reasons urged for them.

There is a place in New Hampshire where they never have any old maids. When a girl reaches twenty-nine, and is still on the ladder of expectation, the young fellows club together and draw lots for her. Those who escape, pay a bonus to the one who succeeds in getting her. There's gallantry for you.

During this year, according to long established custom, the young ladies are privileged to "pop the question." Of course they will improve the opportunity.

It is said that $200,000 have been expended "by an old and respectable citizen" of Cincinnati, in the purchase of marble in Italy for the front of a house he is erecting in that city.

Commander Wilkes, U. S. N., states that the depth of the ocean has never been ascertained. Capt. Ross, at 37,000 feet found no bottom.

The number of slaves in Kentucky is 189,796. They are valued at $58,000,000, or $306 each.

Statistical tables, made up from the books of the custom house, show the gratifying fact that within a period of ten years the foreign commerce of Boston has more than doubled in amount.

In the Court of Common Pleas at Ipswich, on Saturday last, Joseph Brown and Charles Morton, pleaded guilty to the indictment for breaking into a counting room at Lawrence, in December. Brown was sentenced to two years in the state prison, but Morton obtained a postponement of sentence.

The population of Worcester, according to the census just taken, is 15,643. In 1840 it was 7,497, showing an increase in seven years and five months of eight thousand one hundred and forty-six.

At Pittsburg a few days since, a man offered a lighted cigar to one of the elephants of a menagerie. The elephant acknowledged his politeness with a wipe over the ribs, which sent him half across the arena.

The city of Detroit is no longer the capital of Michigan. The various State officers have been moved off to Lansing.

By a new law in the State of New York, parties to a law suit must testify to the truth therein, as far as they may know, when required by opposite parties. This was always the rule in equity but not till now at common law.

The New York Mercury says that Jonah was the first and largest emetic ever administered.

A bill for the organization of the Territory of Nebraska, west of Iowa and Missouri, was reported in the House of Representatives some two years since. It will probably be effected this winter. This will be the great prairie state, and respect to fertility of soil will vie with any state in the Union.

Looking for the admission of Wisconsin into the Union this winter, we may safely predict that Nebraska and Minesota will be the next two free states. In both of these territories game is abundant—herds of buffaloes and deer, flocks of turkies, prairie-hens, and quails are daily seen upon the prairies.

A rich mine of plumbago, black lead, has been opened in Jeffrey, (N. H.) at the foot of the Monadnock mountain. It brings about $75 per ton. The mine was purchased for $50.

The New Orleans ladies insisted upon kissing Gen. Taylor. He surrendered!

'A fellow at the West,' advertises for a partner to go on a spree. Any person having five hundred dollars or more, with an appetite for champaigne, segars and sensualities, and ambition for red eyes, headache, and the down-y side of a curb-stone, can hear of an exellent chance.

It is asserted that in all Italy, containing a population of 22,000,000 of souls, there are not as many newspapers printed as would emenate from the single city of Boston or Philadelphia; and they are small "seven by nine sheets," containing little else than advertisements and the decrees of government.

The Pittsburgh Day Brook tells of a firm in that city, who, after settling up their accounts for the past year, found that their loss amounted to over ten thousand dollars, and they were forced to close. Their business was conducted on the principles of economy, but the secret of their ruin is soon told—they never advertised in thir newspapers!

NOW for a little fun and nonsense. There is quite an excitement about town, among the profession, because

GEORGE B. NIGHTINGALE

has been SHOEING UP not more than half of creation, for the last eight years, with

BOOTS & SHOES.

Well, let 'em "go it." "Guess there wont be much of a shower after all," as the chap said when Noah wouldn't let him get into the ark,—calculate to keep doing so right strait along, every time. Why my dear "fellow critters," we don't mean to brag, but you undertake to take a look at OUR Boots and Shoes and the first you know you get your foot right strait in; there you are, stuck fast; then out comes the old pocket book with THE SHINERS; that's just what we want, and nothing else,—much better than credit; credit takes time to no purpose, oftentimes, and time, you know, is money. The pay down system is the only true one, after all,—the best remedy for corns and unpleasant dreams. The man that takes a pair of BOOTS or SHOES with one hand, and PULLS OUT THE CASH with the other, is independent; like all other tubs, he stands on his own bottoms; give me the man that shells out the stuff like a sheaf of wheat in cold weather and we'll set him on his taps in a giffy. I therefore advise all mankind, womankind, and every other kind that wears SHOE LEATHER, to CALL when they find themselves ailing about the UNDERSTANDINGS. The Doctors may tinker up the physical frame but I'll beat 'em hollow at repairing Damaged Soles (with the best material for such cases)

P. S. Needn't be particular about knocking when you wish to come in; never mind for a little mud as we have it in abundance. Brooms are plenty and cheap for the tin.

With the money you can buy

For the cure of Coughs, Colds, and Diseases of the Lungs!

ANOTHER evidence of the benefits derived from the use of this invaluable Medicine:

Boston, Nov. 1, 1847.

Messrs. Otis, Broaders & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen—Please send me by Express six dozen more of the "Samaritan Balm." Its virtues are fully established in our neighborhood, and I do not hesitate to say that the sale of it has been far greater than any new medicine I ever attempted to introduce. Of its benefits I can speak from actual experience, as being decidedly the best remedy for colds and diseases of the Lungs I ever tried. Last winter I was sorely afflicted with an attack of the "Bronchitis," when the good lady whose invention it is kindly prepared me a bottle which has completely cured me; and from the benefits I myself have personally derived from its use, I feel grateful that she has been prevailed upon to give so valuable a medicine to the world. Notwithstanding she has done it with so many wish to profit by it in a pecuniar point of view, I hope and trust she will reap a rich reward for her goodness towards suffering humanity. Yours, truly, D. BUGBEE.

Quincy Cloth & Clothing

ESTABLISHMENT.

THE subscriber has on hand, and is constantly receiving, a good assortment of

Cloths, Cassimeres and Vestings,

OF VARIOUS STYLES AND QUALITIES, with which he will offer inducements to all people, to call at his store, where can be found

A GREAT VARIETY of as good stock as can be found in Quincy, and where goods are

Manufactured into Clothing in a style and with workmanship

NOT SURPASSED BY ANY.

The TAILORING, which is no small part of his business, is, and always has been, under the superintendence of WORKMEN in every sense, who having no personal interest in the business, do the work with a which cannot be expected of one whose sole aim is to make up garments in the quickest time possible. Any, and all, wishing a garment of any description, are invited to call, and if he has the CLOTHS to suit the PRICE WILL.

FINISH AND DURABILITY,

On hand as above, a great variety of

Hats, Caps, Umbrellas, Stocks,

Handkerchiefs, Bosoms, Shirts, Collars. Gloves, Suspenders, together with a good variety of other goods "too numerous to mention," as the auctioneers say

Samaritan Balm.

For the cure of Coughs, Colds, and Diseases of the Lungs!

ANOTHER evidence of the benefits derived from the use of this invaluable Medicine:

Boston, Nov. 1, 1847.

Messrs. Otis, Broaders & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen—Please send me by Expresss six dozen more of the "Samaritan Balm." Its virtues are fully established in our neighborhood, and I do not hesitate to say that the sale of it has been far greater than any new medicine I ever attempted to introduce. Of its benefits I can speak from actual experience, as being decidedly the best remedy for colds and diseases of the Lungs I ever tried. Last winter I was sorely afflicted with an attack of the "Bronchitis," when the good lady whose invention it is kindly prepared me a bottle which has completely cured me; and from the benefits I myself have personally derived from its use, I feel grateful that she has been prevailed upon to give so valuable a medicine to the world. Notwithstanding she has done it with a any wish to profit by it in a pecuniar. point of view, I hope and trust she will reap a rich reward for her goodness towards suffering humanity. Yours, truly, D. BUGBEE.

☞ Price one dollar per bottle—six bottles for five dollars.

For sale by Mrs. E. HAYDEN, Quincy, and by Dealers in Medicine generally throughout the United States

New Arrangement & New Goods.

Ladies' Boots and Shoes

MADE TO ORDER.

FEELING thankful for the liberal encouragement heretofore given us, and wishing to still merit a share of the trade, we have made arrangements with a SKILFUL AND COMPETENT WORKMAN on LADIES' SHOES, who will devote his whole time to that branch, which will enable us to suit all customers. We shall procure at different times all the various styles and fashions, by which means we shall be ready to manufacture any kind or quality in the market.

Ladies' Gaiter Boots—Black, Blue Black, Bronze, Green, or any of the fashionable colors;

Ladies' Buskins—Black, Bronze or Green;

Ladies' Dancing Slippers—of French Kid or Morocco—Black, Bronze, Green or other colors;

Ladies' Polkas of various styles, or other Shoes

MADE WITH NEATNESS AND DISPATCH.

N. B. All our shoes will be made on Kimball's Lasts, which bear the highest repute in the market for beauty, style and fashion.

We shall also keep a good supply of Ladies' Shoes, of the various styles, on hand.

Gents BOOTS of various styles, Pegg'd and Sew'd, ready made

Also—A FULL ASSORTMENT of BOOT AND SHOE FINDINGS, such as are generally found in such establishments.

All BOOTS or SHOES made to order, WARRANTED TO FIT

We shall endeavor to sell all goods as cheap as possible. UNDERWOOD & FOSTER.

Clothing! Clothing!!

Particular Notice.

WE wish to have it distinctly understood, notwithstanding all that may have been said to the contrary, (by those interested.) that

AT

IS STILL IN SUCCESSFUL OPERATION AT THE CELEBRATED

ROUGH AND READY HALL,

Where can be found the largest and best selected Stock of

READY MADE CLOTHING,

In the town of Quincy or vicinity,

Suitable for the present and coming season, all of which will be sold at the usual low prices for which

ROUGH & READY HALL IS SO JUSTLY CELEBRATED.

N. B. We would also say that ALL ARTICLES which are sold at this establishment are what some of our neighbors would facetiously call

SLOP MADE,

having the impression, we suppose, from the IMMENSE DIFFERENCE IN PRICES between our establishment and their own, that our Clothing could not be well got up at the extremely low price we sell for.

We would merely say as regards STYLE, FIT AND WORKMANSHIP, all Clothing that is sold at

ROUGH & READY HALL,

WILL COMPARE TO ADVANTAGE with any articles manufactured as custom work, so called, in Town.

Quincy, Nov. 27. tf GEORGE SAVIL & Co.

Public Notice.

JOHN DINEGAN,

Merchant Tailor, School St.,

WOULD respectfully solicit the attention of one and all who are in want of CLOTHING AT FAIR PRICES, to the New and Extensive Assortment

☞ Which will come CHEAPER than any thing of the same description ever offered to the inhabitants of QUINCY.

JOHN DINEGAN has also received a Very Extensive Assortment of PLAIN and FIGURED

CASSIMERES & DOE SKINS,

OF FRENCH AND AMERICAN MANUFACTURE,

And of the Latest and Most Approved Styles.

VESTINGS,

We have received an almost endless variety of Plain and Figured

Silks, Satins and Valencias,—of the very Latest Styles.

J. D. would invite the attention of Parents to his New Styles of

TWEEDS AND SATTINETS,

Suitable for Boys' Sacks or Business Coats, which he will make to order CHEAPER THAN CAN BE BOUGHT IN THE CITY BY THE DOZEN.

J. Dinegan, having made extensive arrangements for the Fall Trade, would simply add, that his present Stock is on a more

COMPREHENSIVE AND EXTENSIVE SCALE

Than at any former period, and that, engaging none but the BEST OF WORKMEN, the inhabitants of Quincy and the surrounding Villages

May rest assured that they can purchase their Clothing CHEAPER of him than at any other place in town.

Gentlemen's Furnishings.

J. D. intends keeping a very good assortment of FURNISHING GOODS.

P. S. The public should remember that DINEGAN keeps no Slop Work. All that may be seen at his Store is of his own getting up, and all Garments bought of him are WARRANTED to Fit or no Sale.

SONG FOR A TEMPERANCE MEETING.

TUNE—Auld Lang Syne.

'Tis long ago, old Alcohol,
Since we as friends have met,
But still your rascal character
We cannot well forget;
You pick pocket propensity
Our purses feel it yet—
Your pick-pocket propensity
Our purses feel it yet.

We've met you in the parlor with
The doctor and the priest,
When none of us suspected we
Were worshipping the beast,
But hail'd you with good favor as
The glory of the feast,—
But hail'd you with good favor as
The glory of the feast.

We've met you where fair ladies in-
Treduced you with a smile,
Unconscious while their lips you press'd
You were a thing so vile—
You infamous old hypocrite,
E'en ladies to beguile,—
You infamous old hypocrite,
E'en ladies to beguile.

We've seen you in the pulpit peep-
Ing through the parsons eyes,
And in the halls of Justice where
The Judge look'd wond'rous wise,
And even we've detected you
In old aunt Tabby's pies,—
And even we've detected you
In old aunt Tabby's pies.

We've seen you on the topmast hurl
The sailor from the mast,
And mark'd where lay the noble wreck
High on the breakers cast;
The gallant ship that but for you
Had triumphed o'er the blast,—
The gallant ship that but for you
Had triumph'd o'er the blast.

But you have done more evil still
Than all of these combin'd,
Your triumph o'er the noble heart,
Your conquest o'er the mind;
By making those unfit for earth
Whom God for heaven design'd,—
By making those unfit for earth
Whom God for heaven design'd.

F. M. ADLINGTON, Weymouth.

ADDRESS OF THE LADIES.

You flattering youths, who say you prize
Our ruby lips, and sparkling eyes,
Our cheeks which shame the blushing rose,
Our necks which vie with winter snows,
Our melting word, our witching smile,
Which every sorrow can beguile;
Our bosoms fair, our lovely breasts,
Where angels might desire to rest,

Since we this year uncensured may
To you some 'marked attentions' pay,
Or even visit you, and woo,
And 'pop the question' to you too,
We take this opportunity,
To tell you most respectfully,
Ourselves and all our winning charms,
Are waiting only for your arms.

The ruby lips you spoke of now,
Will breathe with you the marriage vow;
The eyes whose thrilling glance you praise,
Will shed on you their fondest rays:
Our lovely necks, and breasts of snow,
A husband's fond embrace would know,
While cheerfully our inmost soul
Would always own his sweet control.

Old Bachelors! though cold and chill,
For you we have some pity still,
For ah! we know your wretched life,
Without a kind and loving wife:
Make some amends for errors past,
By wedding ere the year is passed,
And thus secure some bliss before
Your earthly journey shall be o'er.

Ye Widowers!—but we need not call,
We see you're courting, one and all,
And thus proclaim you lik'd the state
In which you lived so very late;
We know indeed you want a spouse,
To mind the children and the house;
Let each one therefore choose some staid,
Sedate, sweet tempered, smart Old Maid.

Then, Gentlemen, if you be wise,
Come on at once and take a prize,
Or soon perhaps you'll woo in vain,
As we'll put on our airs again:
And still if cold old Bachelors
Prefer their Blankets and their Furs,
Why let them coldly live and die,
Unwept for and unhonored lie.

ANECDOTES.

Theodore Hook once dined with a Mr. Hatchet. 'Ah, my dear fellow,' said the host deprecatingly, 'I am sorry to say that you will not get to-day such a dinner as our friend Tom Moore gave us.' 'Certainly not,' replied Hook, 'from a Hatchet one can expect nothing but a chop.'

A witness was asked how he knew that a man and woman were husband and wife, replied: 'Because he had often heard the lady blow the gentleman up.' The evidence was held to be conclusive.

It was asked by a lady in company if Adjutant Bliss was a married man. 'No,' responded the doctor, 'he is not a connubial bliss.'

A young lady, seeing her lover run in great haste to meet her, asked the cause of his hurry. 'Madam,' replied the lover, 'I was following my inclination.'

MISCELLANY.

WINTER.

Hast thou come again—our old—our good old, kind-hearted friend of lang syne? Well—old gentleman, here is a hand for thee to shake, and we greet thee lovingly with right good will. Blessings on that frosty head and blue nose of thine! they are the same as when we hailed them welcome in the days of our boyhood. Ay, Winter was Winter then—and the light of thy venerable countenance carried joy to every heart.

They say thou art growing melancholy, old neighbor—that thine eyes overflow with rheum, and thy hand is freezing cold. Shame on them! Those are tears of joy; and, if thy hand smacks somewhat of the icicle, let thine enemies shake till their blood tingles again in their veins. Melancholy! thou art the veriest wag of the whole family—the grand marshal of fun and frolic—the anointed prince of light hearts and heels. Melancholy! Bacchus were a Dutchman to thee. Cold! Let them build a fire for thee—thou art not such a fool as to laugh without a fire. Let them welcome thee—an old fashioned wit—in the old fashioned way, and our word for it, and the very roof tree will shake with thy good natured mirth. Cold! Pile on the wood—bring forth the fragrant basket of Greenings—the broad bowl of Shelbarks—and see if Summer, in all her glory, can dispense life like thee. See if even the miser's flinty heart does not begin to warm at thy approach. Draw out the fiddle! Marshal your ranks—young and old—fathers, mothers, aunts and cousins—the whole of you! Now—one, two, three! There! is it a cold, melancholy, rheumatic old cynic, that sets such lively spirits in motion? No, our old friend! It is too common that benefactors are belied—and they belie thee most foully—they do, indeed. Would that thy detractors could boast of garments as spotless, and hearts as free and warm as thine.

Come, thou dweller in the stormy caves of the North! Come from thy mountain home! Glad hearts are waiting to hear thy hoarse voice in the sky. Touch the hills. Spread thy mantle in the valleys! The merry bells are impatient to ring forth the joys of thy appearing. The virgin has prepared the best room—and her heart sits lightly on its throne—for thou hast promised her a lover at thy coming. Speak to the waters. The skater's shout shall answer thee, as his iron heel thrills along the glittering chrystal. Breathe on the forest boughs. The twigs become networks of burnished silver sprinkled with diamonds. Spring has wrought no enchantment so beautiful as thine. The architect gazes with awe upon the temples thou hast built in the Northern Seas—and the lover of beauty stops to admire thy cunning work where thou art busy with the snow-wreath. Come, thou harbinger of the dance and song—we love thy hoary locks, for they remind us of youth, and love, and joy. It is meet they should be reverenced for thou bearest age without its austerity, and art venerable without being unsocial or unhappy.—Hartford Review.

SALT FOR HOGS. Hogs, during the process of fattening, should be supplied with salt as often as once a week. It is no less advantageous to them than to the ox, the cow, or the sheep; and when liberally given, is a preventive of many diseases to which, from their continual confinement and the effect of hearty food, they are inevitably exposed. Store hogs are greatly benefitted by a liberal provision of salt, and will generally partake of it once or twice a week, as eagerly, and, to all appearance, with as good zest, as they do of corn meal. Charcoal is also highly salutary in its influence upon the health of swine.

HOW TO GET RICH.

Be Industrious. Every body knows that industry is a fundamental virtue in the man of business. But it is not every sort of business which tends to wealth. Many men work hard to do a great deal of business, and after all make less money than they would otherwise if they did less. Industry should be expended in seeing to all the details of business, in carefully finishing up each separate undertaking, and in the maintenance of such a system as will keep everything under control.

Be Economical. This rule also is familiar to everybody. Economy is a virtue to be practised every hour in a large place. It is to be practiced in pence as much as in pounds. A shilling a day saved amounts to an estate in the course of a life. Economy is especially important in the outset of life, until the foundations of an estate are laid. Many men are poor all their days, because when their necessary expenses were light, they did not seize the opportunity to save a small capital which would have changed their fortunes for the whole of their lives.

Stick to your own business. Let speculators make their thousands in a year or a day; mind your own regular trade, never turning from it to the right hand or the left. If you are a merchant, a professional man, or a mechanic, never buy lots of stocks unless you have surplus money which you wish to invest. Your own business you understand as well as other men; but other people's business you do not understand. Let your business be some one that is useful to the community. All such occupations possess the elements of profit in themselves, while mere speculation has no such element.

Never take great hazards. Such hazards are seldom well balanced by the prospect of profit; and if they were, the habit of mind which is induced, is unfavorable, and generally the result is bad. To keep what you have, should be the first rule; to get what you can, fairly, is the second.

Don't be in a hurry to get rich. Gradual gains are the only natural gains, and they who are in haste to get rich, break over sound rules, fall into temptations and distress of various sorts, and generally fail of their object. There is no use in getting rich suddenly. The man who keeps his business under his control, and saves some from year to year, is always rich. At any rate, he possesses the highest enjoyment which riches are able to afford.

Never do business for the sake of doing it, and be counted a great merchant. There is often more money to be made by a small business than by a large one, and that business will in the end be most respectable, which is most successful. Do not get deeply in debt, but so manage as always, if possible, to keep your financial position easy, so that you can turn any way you please.

Do not love money extravagantly. We speak here merely in reference to being rich. In morals the inordinate love for money is one of the most degrading vices. But the extravagant desire of accumulation, induces an eagerness, many times, which is imprudent, and so misses its object from too much haste to grasp it.

Getting Rich. Keep at it—dig, dig, if you would become rich—stop for nothing—drive ahead—neglect friends—despise the poor—scorn benevolence—wear out your constitution and as sure as you live, wealth will pour in upon you like a flood. But remember—it must be a comfortable reflection—that you have worn yourself out it accumulating property, while death will soon stare you in the face. You who would be rich—who leave no part untried to add to your coffers—do not forget, we pray you, that you must die and leave your property to other hands. Tell us, would it not be better to enjoy life, by having every thing that is really necessary, in doing good to others—assisting the poor and needy, and in laying up a treasure above? Just believe it, and you will be tenfold more happy—enjoy more of the happiness of life; live to a greater age, and die in peace.

SPOILING HIS PROSPECTS.

Dr. Abram Scoot was an imprudenr son of Esculapius—and during his college days had acquired a most improvident name. Some eight or ten years since, the population of the thriving villege of H., away down in Maine, was augmented by the arrival of this worthy disciple of Galen, who was at this time suffering under the operation of an 'entire course,' of medical lectures, and who had just been duly equipped with diploma and 'license to poison.'

The ambitious young M. D. at once took possession of a ten-foot-square crib, which he so contrived in its internal arrangements, as to answer the purposes of office and nominal lodgings. He then succeeded in running his face for a large gilded 'shingle,' upon which he caused to be inscribed in conspicous characters—'DR. ABRAM SCOOT—to be found here at all hours of the day or night.'

The sign was appropriately disposed of over the Doctor's door, and Abram sat himself down to wait with patience for patients.

But callers were scarce, and the newly-fledged Doctor, found ample leisure to attend to matters other than those connected immediately with jalaps and blisters—among which, it was noted that a buxom young widow residing near by, came in for a share. The lady's domicil was contigeous to the Doctor's, and the neighbors were uncharitable enough to hint that the stranger's calls there were neither so innocent, or so far between, as angels' visits. But the village of H —— always was a scandal loving place.

Very early one morning, some six weeks after his arrival in H., the Doctor, who doubtless had been making a professional call, appeared at the outer door of the widow's glaring white cottage, and was just stepping over the threshold, when he found himself in the presence of a most generous crowd of the villagers, who stared comically at him as he came out, while a doleful din broke on his ears, as he closed the door.

He rushed into the midst of the multitude, and anxiously sought the cause of this extraordinary phenomenon. As he turned his eyes towards the house, he immediately discovered emblazoned over the widow's door, his gilded sign, bearing the inscription as large as life—

DR. ABRAM SCOOT,

TO BE FOUND HERE, AT ALL HOURS OF THE DAY OR NIGHT!

Perhaps an explosion didn't follow this discovery, and perhaps the sign aforesaid didn't 'come down' in the shortest possible space of time!

Suffice it, that a few hours afterwards, the entire stock of utensils, drugs, medicines and dye-stuffs composing the Doctor's stock in trade, were packed in a brown hair trunk, which trunk was lashed beneath the dickey of the Skowhegan Coach, and upon the driver's box was seen the unfortunate Doctor himself, muffled to the eye-lids, most wofully contemplating an unreceipted wash-woman's bill.

As the stage started—he was aroused from his reverie by the voice of the unpaid sign-painter, who rushed after the coach, shouting at the top of his lungs—'I say, Doctor—which way? You won't forget the sign, Doctor!'

The brief reply of the mortified M. D. was lost amid the roar of the bystanders, as the stage shot round the corner, upon the road towards Augusta!

IMPROVE YOUR EVENINGS.

Young men, especially young mechanics and working men, do not loaf away the long winter evenings in the bar rooms or in the stores. If your business does not demand your attention, either attend some instructing lecture or the meetings of some society for intellectual improvement, or else retire to your own homes and spend the time in useful reading and study.

But, perhaps some young mechanic may ask, what is the use of my denying myself amusements, and devoting my leisure hours to study, when I cannot expect, after all, ever to become distinguished for my knowledge, let me do the best I can? Why may I not just as well idle away my hours of relaxation from toil, as to follow the course you have recommended? To such an one, we would say, we do not ask you to deprive yourself of amusement, not even of that kind which is generally understood by the term; but we would find you have amusement as a general thing, in those things that instruct while they amuse; that improve the mind, while they banish care. You mistake, if you suppose that an hour spent in acquiring useful knowledge, is an hour destitute of amusement. You will not make this objection to a course of study when you have once heartily entered on such a course. But you say you cannot expect to gain distinction.

Well, let us ask you if distinction is the main object to be thought of in the pursuit of knowledge? Is not knowledge worthy of being sought for its own sake, without reference to the distinction it may confer? Would you not rather choose to be intelligent, even if you was never to be heard of, out of your own village, though by becoming so you actually had to rob yourself of amusements, and submit to deprivations? You will answer in the affirmative to this question, we are sure, when you give it a moment's consideration. There is something so degrading in the consciousness of ignorance, that no young man of spirit will wish to feel it. But how do you know but that you may, by the right improvement of your leisure hours, become distinguished if that be so necessary to your happiness, if that forms the only motive for study? What is there in your situation that forms an impassible barrier between you and the temple of fame? Is it your occupation? Has not a Burns, though but a ploughman, rivalled in song the prudent aspirants for poetical fame? Did not a Gifford, though once a poor shoemaker, become one of the most distinguished critics and writers of his day? Did not Franklin, who was only a printer, immortalize himself as a philosopher? Have not the most distinguished Orators of our own day, especially of our own land, been those who were surrounded with difficulties in early life? Then why need you despair? But, say you, these men had genius to assist them. Perhaps so, but we apprehend that determined pursuance in what they undertook, together with the inspiration which the very difficulties of their situation created, had as much to do with their success as any peculiar natural endowments. They were exemplifications of the truth advanced by Young:

"Each man makes his own statute build himself."

But, allowing it to be true that genius, natural unacquired genius, was the great source of their greatness, how do you know but you possess the same, and how will you know unless you task your powers? Genius will do nothing unless something be placed before it for it to act upon—it can do nothing unless it has materials furnished it with which it may act. Genius will not give you a knowledge of history, unless you read works of history—it will not give you a knowledge of language, unless you take pains to study the rules of language, it will not open to you the wonders and secrets of any science, without any trouble on your part. In short, genius will not cram knowledge into the head and make you great, whether you wish it or not. You must avail yourself of the means of acquiring knowledge, be your genius what it may.

Then, again, we say, improve your evenings. On an average you can spend two hours an evening, for one half the year, in reading or some other intellectual exercise; and what an amount of knowledge you may gain, what mental discipline, in a few years if these hours are faithfully improved. How much higher will you then stand in the estimation of others, than you would had you devoted those hours to mere trifling amusements, and how much more happiness will you then experience in intellectual employment, to what you would in the other case, when the season for trifling has gone by.

'LOOK WHERE YOU'RE GOING.' Young men, if you intend to get married—if you think your happiness will be increased and your interest advanced by matrimony, be sure and look where you're going. Join yourself in union with no woman who is selfish, for she will sacrifice you—with no one who is fickle, for she will become estranged—have naught to do with a proud one—for she will despise you—nor with an extravagant one, for she will ruin you. Leave a coquette to the fools that flutter around her—let her own fireside accommodate a scold, and flee from a woman who loves scandal as you would from the evil one. 'Look where you are going,' will sum it all up.

Young ladies, when you are surrounded by dashing men—when the tones of love and the words of compliment float out together, when you are excited by the movement of the whirling waltz, or melted by the tenderness of mellow music, arrest yourself in the rosy atmosphere of delight, and 'look where you're going.' When a daring hand is pressing yours, or your delicate tresses are lifted by him you fancy loves you; when the moonlight invites to trusting, and the stars seem but to breath out innocence, listen with caution to the words you hear—gaze into your heart unshrinkingly and 'look where you're going.'

SAGE OBSERVATIONS. It has been remarked by a shrewd observer of human nature, that millers, when they speak, use floury language.

The carpenters are, in most of cases, plane men.

The shoemakers are remarkable for their charity, as they generally give their awl when they see a case of distress.

The sawyers are good pay, for they generally plank the amount of their bills.

That tailors' love of cabbage prove them to be patrons of agricultural pursuits.

That hatters, if at all thwarted, are fur-ious fellows.

That watch-makers are bad customers to the grocers, for they generally go on tick.

That printers generally make good lawyers, from their previous acquaintance with cases.

That barbers always succeed in making love to vain women, owing to their knowledge of the use and application of soft soap.

That gun-smiths are the only honest men who deal in stocks.

And that doctors are a living paradox, for, though they deal in scruples, they have no conscience.

HOW TO PRESERVE BOOTS. Put a pound of tallow and half a pound of rosin into a pot on the fire; when melted and mixed warm the boots and apply the hot stuff with a painters brush, until neither the soles nor upper leathers will suck in any more. If it is desired that the boots should immediately take a polish, dissolve an ounce of beeswax in an ounce of spirits of turpentine, to which add a tea-spoonful of lampblack. A day or two after the boots have been treated with the tallow and rosin, rub over them the wax and turpentine, but not before the fire. Thus the exterior will have a coat of wax, alone, and shine like a mirror. Tallow, or any greece, becomes rancid, and rots the stitching as well as the leather; but the rosin gives it an antiseptic quality which preserves the whole. Boots or shoes should be so large as to admit of wearing in them cork soles. Cork is so bad a conductor of heat, that with it in the boot, the feet are always warm on the coldest stone floor.

EARLY RISING. Are you poor, you will probably forever remain so, if you habitually waste the precious hours of the morning in bed. Who will seek the labor or services of him who sleeps or dozes in the morning until seven or eight o'clock. If such a person is poor, he must remain poor. 'He that would thrive, must rise at five.' The poor can ill afford to lose daily two or three hours of the best portion of the day. Economy of time and diligence in business, are virtues peculiar appropriate to those who depend upon their earnings for the means of subsistance. Allowing twelve working hours to a day, he who by rising at eight instead of five o'clock in the morning, thereby loses three hours labor daily, parts with one forth of his means of supporting himself and family—ten years labor lost in the course of forty years.

A MOTHER TO HER DAUGHTER ON HER MARRIAGE. You are now, my beloved child, about to leave those arms which have hitherto cherished you, and directed your every step, and at length conducted you to a safe, happy, and honorable protection, in the very bosom of love and honor. You must now be no longer the flighty, inconsiderate, haughty, passionate girl, but ever, with reverence and delight, have the merit of your husband in view. Reflect how vast the sum of your obligation, to the man who confers upon you independence, distinction, and above all, felicity. Moderate, then, my beloved child, your private expenses, and proportion your general expenditure to the standard of his fortune, or rather, his wishes. I fear not that, with your education and principles, you can ever forget the more sacred duties, so soon to be your sphere of action. Remember the solemnity of your vows the dignity of your character, the sanctity of your condition. You are amenable to society for your example, to your husband for his honor and happiness, and to Heaven for those rich talents entrusted to your care and your improvement.

MEMORY. The great point in cultivating the memory is to gain command of the attention. A habit of continued, unrelaxed attention, especially if acquired in early years, is the foundation of a good memory. A habit of very attentive thought is better than all the artificial memories ever contrived. To the formation of such a habit sufficient efforts have not often been directed. Therefore it is that we hear many persons complaining of the want of a good memory. They cannot remember the lectures, sermons, and addresses which they hear, nor the books which they read. All of it seems to run through their mind like water through a sieve. They were entertained and even edified, they would say, but ask them to state what it was that entertained and instructed them, they cannot tell. Close attention, or rather persevering effort to give close attention, will help even such a memory. Too common practice is to attempt to fill the store-house of the memory before the foundation is laid, or a habit of attention or thought is formed.

WOMAN'S LOVE. We would not give a fig for the love of a fashionable, novel-reading young woman. What is her love? Idle nothingness. She never dreams of anything but rosy cheeks, bright eyes and splendid forms. The heart, the character, the disposition, have nothing to do with her opinion. She loves the outward appearance—the foppish dress, and the fashionable ball-room manner. Not so is the pure love of the industrious, timid girl. Her love emanates from the heart, and when her affections are drawn out you will find an object worthy of them. You will not be dazzled by dress or by books—the heart alone will convice you that her love is not thrown away. Give us the respect and love of such a woman—timid, gentle, kind and industrious—and you are welcome to the tinsel and glare, the admiration and praise, of the ball-room coquette.

WATER. In a lecture delivered by Professor Maffit, the following beautiful apostrophe to water was introduced:

'The strength of rum! Give me only the pale water, which nature brews down in the bright crystal alembies of her cloud-crested mountains. Give me, when I would assail with strained nerves and the arduous outly of bones and sinews some amount of opposition, reared full and impassible in my path; give me only that pure flow which followed the stroke of the Prophet's rod, give me that gush cool and clean that bubbled up before Hagar and and Ishmael in the desert. Give me only that fluid which trickles down the bright sides of our own American mountains, gathers into rills in the woody uplands, then rolls into broad, beautiful, transparent rivers—spreads into lakes, the mirrors to reflect all that is dark, or soft, or bright, or deep, in the unfathomed firmament above. Give me these crystal streams—these cool, fever-allaying waves, in health or sickness, when the thirst of the last fever shall assail my vitals—give me these waters, untortured and free, until that moment when I shall drink the waters of eternal life!'

UNCERTAINTY. How uncertain is every thing in life! To-day the future may be bright before us—but on the morrow clouds and gloom may shroud our fair prospects. We should so live, that when disappointments overtake us, we may meet them with unbending fortitude. They only who are thus schooled enjoy life and are buoyed up amid the conflicts and uncertainties of earth.

A MAN. The man whom I call deserving the name, is one whose thoughts and exertions are for others rather than himself, whose high purpose is adopted on just principles and never abandoned while heaven and earth afford means of accomplishing it. He is one who will neither seek an indirect advantage by a spacious road, nor take an evil path to secure a real good purpose.—Sir. Walter Scott.

LOVE AT FIRST SIGHT. Many people might love at first sight, for all the love they ever had was no better than an idle fancy. Nevertheless, we believe there is such a thing as the case of a hungry man that sees a roast turkey.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, JAN. 15, 1848.

John A. Green, Editor.

INTERESTING TABLE. The following interesting table of the numbers engaged on both sides in the various battles of Mexico, and of the killed and wounded, is from the recent speech of Gen. Cass, in the Senate. It is authentic, and the most correct information received at Adj. General's office:

* Killed and wounded.

The number of Mexicans wounded in most of these engagements is unknown. The following are the only returns given:—Palo Alto, 300; Resaca de la Palma, 40; El Embudo, 60; Huanranjla, 300; Atlisco, 200. Total, 1360.

OLD COLONY RAILROAD The Annual Meeting of the Stockholders of this Corporation, was held in Boston on the 29th ult.

Uriel Crocker, William Thomas, E. H. Derby, and H. H. Runnewell, of Boston, John Sever of Kingston, and I. L. Hedge and J. H. Loud of Plymouth, were chosen Directors.

The Board of Directors has been organized by the election of E. H. Derby, Esq., as President, and J. H. Loud, as Clerk. Mr. Crocker was first chosen President, but declined.

The Directors presented their fourth Annual Report, from which the following is gathered:

The whole number of passengers transported over the road between the two termini and the intermediate stations, during the year, was three hundred and sixty-three thousand nine hundred and forty-two, being an increase of more than one hundred and fifty thousand passengers over the previous year.

The receipts for the year ending Nov. 30, 1847, for the transportation of passengers and merchandise, from mails, rents, and surplus of earnings previous year,	$176,631 95
Expenses for the same time, for running the trains, including fuel, oil, salaries, repairs of road, &c.,	87,020 40
	$89,611 55
A dividend of 3 per cent paid in July,	$36,003 00
A dividend of 3 1-2 per cent. to be paid in Jan.	42,003 50
	78,006 50
Surplus of earnings not divided,	$11,605 05

A contract has been entered into with the Fall River Road to be binding on the two corporations until August, 1856, by which the receipts for the transportation of passengers and freight over the two roads is to be divided pro rata, according to the distance carried over each road. The Fall River Road to furnish all passenger and merchandize cars necessary for the joint business, and to be allowed for the use and risk of passenger cars, and for the benefits derived by the Old Colony from the connexion, one half cent per mile per passenger, when upon the Old Colony Road, for all passengers taken to and from the Fall River Road;—and for the use of merchandize cars, risk thereof and risk to merchandize, one half cent per mile per ton, when on the Old Colony Road, for all merchandize taken to and from the Fall River Road. The Old Colony Road to furnish motive power, depot accommodation in Boston, including a freight depot at South Cove. Each Corporation covenants to and with the other, neither directly nor indirectly, to aid or encourage the charter of any new road, the effect of which will be to injure the interests of the other; nor to patronise the same, if chartered, if by so doing, the income of the other shall be thereby diminished.

A lease has been taken of the South Shore Road for five years from and after the date of its being completed, at an annual rent of six per cent on its cost.

A similar lease has also been taken of the Dorchester and Milton Branch.

The Directors of the Old Colony Railroad having determined to lay another track to South Braintree, and to build a new freight depot in the South Cove, have voted to create new stock to the amount of four hundred thousand dollars, to defray the expenses thereof, and to pay the debts of the Corporation, says the Plymouth Memorial. The road bed presents as good a surface as that of any other railroad in the Commonwealth, and when the projects above named shall be completed, the Old Colony Road, with a double track to South Braintree, will be possessed of a road which will compare favorably with any other, and at a cost very much less than any other, having the like accommodations in the city of Boston. The Capital Stock will then be $16,000.

Amount of sales at the Brighton Market last year, were $2,719,462, in 1746, $1,871,113; in 1845, $1,893,648.

MEXICAN WAR AND THE CLERGY. At the late term of the Court of Common Pleas for this county, recently held at Dedham, the case of the Commonwealth, vs. Benjamin Ryan, was decided in favor of the defendant. It will be understood that this case was reported in this paper as resulting against the defendant, in the hearing before the Justice, N. L. White, Esq., but the evidence before the Court and the deliberations of the jury resulted in a different verdict. Before the Court of Common Pleas, the evidence of the principle witness, Rev. Mr. Haynes, after stating that he was near the premises of one Mr. Libby, as we learn from the "Norfolk Democrat," he states that,

Benjamin Ryan was at work there splitting stone. He found a number of persons there, Mr. Ryan among the rest, conversing about a celebration of the success of our arms in Mexico, which was to take place at Canton. He stepped upon a piece of stone that had been split, and asked them if they approved of fighting to settle difficulties, and raised an argument that if it were not right for two to fight, how could it be for many to do it. The debate waxed warm, and Mr. Ryan commenced an attack on all clergymen, calling them a d—d set of tories and Benedict Arnold men. He told Mr Ryan it was not so, that he was in a false position. Mr. Ryan used profane words, and threatened to drop him. He ordered him off the ground or out of the place. That he would whip or drop me or something to that amount. He (Haynes) told him to attend to his business, and I would attend to mine. He (Ryan) drew his fist, said I called him a liar, and he would drop me or knock me down. He said I had tried to pray down the government, that I had alluded to it in my sermons.

Several other witnesses were called, but the foregoing for the compliant as we gathered from the Dedham paper was the principal for the government; and for the defendant, which we learn from the same source, we copy that of Col. Otis Wild, one of the most respectable citizens of Braintree, and who we think would tell a true story.

He testifies that he was present, that Haynes came where the defendant was conversing, and asked what celebration they were going to attend. Upon Mr. Ryan's answering, Haynes said, "Do you think it a good plan if two men go out to fight, to applaud the victor?" There was then a rather warm debate. Haynes said, "Ryan, what you state is false." Ryan then laid down his hammer, and ordered Haynes to leave the works; he would be charged with lying by no man; he gave it to no man, and he would take it from no man. Haynes said he came on business with another man. Ryan told him to do it and be off. He told him to quit the works or he would take measures to make him. Mr. Haynes did not move, nor say he was going. Mr. Ryan put his right hand upon his left arm, and pushed him, not hard enough, in the opinion of the witness, to push down a child. He (witness) told him he was getting too warm, and had batter drop the subject, it was an interruption to the work.

HINGHAM AND QUINCY BRIDGE AND TURNPIKE CORPORATION. The annual meeting of this Corporation was held at the Union Hotel in Hingham, on the 3d inst. The annual Report of the Directors presented its affairs in a prosperous condition. A Dividend was paid of ten dollars per share. The following officers were elected:

Clerk and Treasurer—Lemuel Brackett.

Directors—Martin Fearing, James Newcomb, Elijah Baxter.

Martin Fearing was elected President by the Directors.

LEGISLATIVE. On the 7th inst., the returns of votes for Governor and Lt. Governor were reported—whole number for Governor 105,493; necessary for choice, 52,722; George N. Briggs has 53,742. Whole number for Lt. Governor, 106,064; necessary for choice, 53,032; John Reed has 53,937. George N. Briggs and John Reed were thereupon declared to be elected. On the 8th, both branches met in convention to fill vacancies in the Senate. Twenty three whigs were chosen. Truman Clark, David A. Simmons and James C. Doane are the members from this County. On Tuesday, the Governor and Lt. Governor were qualified, in presence of both branches, and His Excellency delivered his Address. The Convention then proceeded to the choice of nine Councillors. John P. Bigelow, Charles Russell, Jesse Murdock, John Porter, John Chapman, Abraham R. Thompson, George Bliss, William Mitchell and Edward L. Keyes were declared elected. William B. Calhoun, a Senator from Hampden County, was chosen Secretary of State, and Joseph Barrett of Concord, Treasurer and Receiver General. On Wednesday, Benjamin Stevens, Esq. was unanimously re-elected Sergeant at Arms, on the part of the Senate. Both houses were engaged in arranging the Standing Committees.

CONGRESS. A bill has been reported in the Senate granting half pay to widows and orphans of volunteers killed in Mexico. Also a bill establishing Territorial government in Oregon, and a bill to increase the medical staff of the army. A petition has been presented, signed by 2900 Unitarian clergymen and laymen, asking for the withdrawal of our troops from Mexico and the appointment of commissioners to treat. No business of general interest has been transacted in the House. Much time is wasted by both bodies in unimportant discussion.

FROM MEXICO. Gen. Cushing arrived in the city of Mexico Dec. 8th, with the Massachusetts, and first Pennsylvania regiments and another detachment of recruits. Major Webster was in command of the Massachusetts men. Col. Wright remained at Perote, as governor of that place, and Lt. Col. Abbott was sick there.

Gen. Scott has issued orders for the army to spread over and occupy the Mexican country, until Mexico sues for peace, and is willling to make terms which will be acceptable to the United States.

Generals Worth and Pillow, and Col. Duncan, have been ordered to Vera Cruz, where a court martial has been convened to try them upon the charges which caused their arrest by Gen. Scott.

THE 'EAGLE.' The first number of a paper with this title has been received. It is to be published semi-monthly at New York, A. Honeywell editor, at fifty cents a year. The Eagle is printed in quarto form, published by practical men, and devoted to "Reform in the comprehensive sense of the word." The friends of "progress and humanity" can see a prospectus at this office.

TREMENDOUS EXPLOSION. The steamer Sea Bird, from New Orleans for St. Louis, freighted with one thousand kegs powder, took fire on the 5th inst., near Cape Girardeaux. The explosion was tremendous, and was heard forty miles. The boat was blown to atoms. The passengers and crew escaped before the explosion.

APPOINTMENT. Robert Rantoul, Jr, Esq., United States District Attorney, has been appointed, by the Governor and Council, a Justice of the Peace throughout the Commonwealth.

RAILROAD ACCIDENT. Mr. Daniel Cummings, engineer on the Taunton and New Bedford Railroad, was killed on Tuesday morning. He was leaning over the frame work of the locomotive, seeing to some part of the machinery, while under full way, and his head came in contact with a fence with such violence as to cause immediate death. He belonged to New Bedford, and has left a wife and family to lament their loss.

NEW YORK. The annual session of the Legislature of New York commenced at Albany last Tuesday. The officers are all Whigs, their friends having a large majority in both branches of the Legislature. Mr. Calhoun, the Clerk of the Senate, is the editor of the Owego Advertiser, and a brother of Hon. W. B. Calhoun, and of Charles Calhoun, Clerk of the Senate of this State. The Message of Governor Young was immediately sent in to both Houses. The whole debt of the State is stated to be $22,883,500, of which $16,743,749 is on account of the Canals.

FIRE AT MILTON. On Tuesday night the large two story wooden building opposite the new Depot at Milton Lower Mills, known as 'Plummer's Building,' was totally destroyed by fire. The building was occupied in the upper stories by the Odd Fellows, and an Order of Rechabites and the lower floor as stores. The depot was somewhat scorched by the heat. There was an insurance of $2000 on the building, and $1500 on the stock.

SALE OF CLOTHING. Our readers will notice that the very extensive stock of Clothing of Messrs. Savil is to be sold at auction this evening. If you want a good outfit, go to 'Rough and Ready Hall.'

The Naval Court Martial, which was to have been held at the Charlestown Navy Yard for the trial of Commander Pinckney, is postponed sine die.

Among the recent promotions in the army, are two sons of Mr. Gill of the Post. Nathaniel Gill as 2d Lieutenant in the 9th regiment, and Thomas H. Gill as 2d Lieutenant in the voltigeur regiment.

The Senate of New York have adopted the Wilmot Proviso by a vote of twenty-six to one. It had previously passed the House.

The Franklin Typographical Society of Boston, will celebrate Franklin's birth-day by a grand supper this evening.

Immediate measures will be taken to petition the Legislature for the extension of the Cape Cod Branch Railroad from Sandwich to Barnstable and Yarmouth Port.

The Postmaster General has decided that letters to officers, solders and sailors, engaged in the war with Mexico, are to go free under the law of Congress, passed at the last session.

Orders have been received from General Scott requesting officers of the army now in the United States on leave of absence, to return to the seat of war at the earliest practicable day, and resume their respective commands in the army.

A sagacious Yankee has set up a clothing shop in the city of Mexico, and christened it "Oak Hall." He will prosper.

Professor Morse, the inventor of the Telegraph, has recently given the American Tract Society five hundred dollars, to support colporteurs in Mexico.

It is said that at Boston the street dirt sells annually for $30,000—being vastly more than the income derived from some gold mines.

All the sections on the Norfolk County Railroad, are now under contract for the grading, and the work is rapidly progressing. About seven hundred laborers are employed. It is thought that the cars will be running from Blackstone to Boston before the close of the present year.

The highest peak of the Rocky Mountains is 12,500 feet, and James's Peak is 12,000 feet.

The mountains of Segar, in Arabia, produce frankincense; and those of Safra, the balm of Mecca, from the amyris opobabamum which in the early ages sold for its weight in gold.

Josiah Minot has been appoined by the President and confirmed as United States Attorney for New Hampshire, vice Franklin Pierce, resigned.

The Governor of Maine has appointed Hon. W. B. S. Moor, of Bangor, in the recess of the Legislature of that State, to be Senator in Congress, in place of the late Mr. Fairfield. Mr. Moore, in consequence of the appointment, resigns the office of Attorney General.

Mr. Garrison has resumed his labors as editor of the Liberator. We learn from this paper that the receipts at the Bazaar in Faneuil Hall amounted to about $4500.

The Foreign Commerce of Boston has more than doubled within the past ten years.

A queer man down east says the joining of hands by a gentleman and lady at the alter, always reminds him of a custom among prize fighters of shaking hands before they attack each other with hostile intent.

Mr. Richard Fletcher declined the appointment of associate justice, to fill the vacancy on the bench caused by the death of Judge Hubbard, and Charles Allen, of Worcester, formerly Judge of the Common Pleas, has been nominated by the Governor.

On the evening of Dec 24, a stranger left a bundle at the door of a house in Lynn, saying it was for "Mr. ——," naming the gentleman who lived there. On examining the bundle, the people were surprised to find an infant, not many days old.

In Roxbury on Saturday night several watchmen who had returned from their night rounds, came near losing their lives by retiring to sleep in a badly ventilated room under the city hall.

The Suffolk Grand Jury, on Saturday morning, returned an indictment against George Miller for uttering notes to the amount of $29,000 purporting to be signed by S. F. Belknap, and which are denied by Mr. B. Mr. Miller gave bonds in the sum of $15,000, for his appearance at the next term.

Mr. H. Grattan, in a speech made in Parliament in November, said that one hundred and fifteen thousand nine hundred and twenty-nine persons had starved to death in Ireland during the late famine.

TENDERS his services to the citizens of QUINCY in all the various branches of the

DENTAL ART,

And would respectfully announce that he has established an OFFICE in this place, at the residence of DOCT. LLOYD GOODENOW, Hancock St., where he will give his personal attention to all who may desire his services, ONCE A MONTH.

Dr. Dudley proposes to visit this town on the FIRST MONDAY of each succeeding month and then to remain several days. During his absence orders may be left with Dr. GOODENOW, and will be punctually attended to on his return.

TESTIMONIALS.

This certifies that I am personally acquainted with DR. DUDLEY of Boston, have examined his work, and seen him operate on the Teeth, and believe him to be worthy of confidence. I have known his partner, D. S GRANDIN, M. D, for nearly twenty years as a scientific and skillful Dentist. For inserting artificial teeth in my estimation he has no superior.

G. WARE GAY, M. D.

Quincy, Nov. 11, 1847.

This may certify, that I have examined several specimens of Dental Plate work executed by Dr. Dudley of Boston, which exhibit great skill and ingenuity. The teeth are incorruptable, and so closely imitate nature that it would be next to impossible to distinguish them from natural ones. Dr. Dudley has operated successfully on my own teeth to my great comfort, and in my presence upon those of others, and I can recommend him as an artist deserving of the confidence of the public.

LLOYD GOODNOW, M. D.

Friends, Patrons, AND FELLOW CITIZENS,

I wish you all a Happy New Year!!

NOW for a little fun and nonsense. There is quite an excitement about town, among the profession, because

GEORGE B. NIGHTINGALE

has been SHOEING UP not more than half of creation, for the last eight years, with

BOOTS & SHOES.

Well, let 'em "go it." "Guess there wont be much of a shower after all," as the chap said when Noah wouldn't let him get into the ark,—calculate to keep doing so right strait along, every time. Why my dear "fellow critters," we don't mean to brag, but you undertake to take a look at OUR Boots and Shoes and the first you know you get your foot right strait in; there you are, stuck fast; then out comes the old pocket book with THE SHINERS; that's just what we want, and nothing else,—much better than credit; credit takes time to no purpose, oftentimes, and time, you know, is money. The pay down system is the only true one, after all,—the best remedy for corns and unpleasant dreams. The man that takes a pair of BOOTS or SHOES with one hand, and PULLS OUT THE CASH with the other, is independent; like all other tubs, he stands on his own bottoms; give me the man that shells out the stuff like a sheaf of wheat in cold weather and we'll set him on his taps in a giffy. I therefore advise all mankind, womankind, and every other kind that wears SHOE LEATHER, to CALL when they find themselves ailng about the UNDERSTANDINGS. The Doctors may tinker up the physical frame but I'll beat 'em hollow at repairing Damaged Soles (with the best material for such cases)

P. S. Needn't be particular about knocking when you wish to come in: never mind for a little mud as we have it in abundance. Brooms are plenty and cheap for the tin.

With the money you can buy
Boots, Caps, Shoes—come and try;
Findings, also, made to use
For to make good Boots or Shoes.

When your Shoes are full of holes,
Or should need a pair of Soles,
I can mend them if you will
Just call in and pay the bill.

Samaritan Balm,

For the cure of Coughs, Colds, and Diseases of the Lungs!

ANOTHER evidence of the benefits derived from the use of this invaluable Medicine:

Boston, Nov. 1, 1847.

Messrs. Otis, Broaders & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen—Please send me by Expresss six dozen more of the "Samaritan Balm." Its virtues are fully established in our neighborhood, and I do not hesitate to say that the sale of it has been far greater than any new medicine I ever attempted to introduce. Of its benefits I can speak from actual experience, as being decidedly the best remedy for colds and diseases of the Lungs I ever tried. Last winter I was sorely afflicted with an attack of the "Bronchitis," when the good lady whose invention it is kindly prepared me a bottle which has completely cured me; and from the benefits I myself have personally derived from its use, I feel grateful that she has been prevailed upon to give so valuable a medicine to the world. Notwithstanding she has done it without any wish to profit by it in a pecuniary point of view, I hope and trust she will reap a rich reward for her goodness towards suffering humanity. Yours, truly, D. BUGBEE.

☞Price one dollar per bottle—six bottles for five dollars.

For sale by Mrs. E. HAYDEN, Quincy, and by Dealers in Medicine generally throughout the United States.

Clothing! Clothing!!

Particular Notice.

WE wish to have it distinctly understood, notwithstanding all that may have been said to the contrary, (by those interested,) that

AT

IS STILL IN SUCCESSFUL OPERATION AT THE CELEBRATED

ROUGH AND READY HALL,

Where can be found the largest and best selected Stock of

READY MADE CLOTHING,

In the town of Quincy or vicinity,

Suitable for the present and coming season, all of which will be sold at the usual low prices for which

ROUGH & READY HALL IS SO JUSTLY CELEBRATED.

N. B. We woul d also say that ALL ARTICLES which are sold at this establishment are what some of our neighbors would facetiously call

SLOP MADE,

having the impression, we suppose, from the IMMENSE DIFFERENCE IN PRICES between our establishment and their own, that our Clothing could not be well got up at the extremely low price we sell for.

We would merely say as regards STYLE, FIT AND WORKMANSHIP, all Clothing that is sold at

ROUGH & READY HALL,

WILL COMPARE TO ADVANTAGE with any articles manufactured as custom work, so called, in Town.

Quincy, Nov. 27. tf GEORGE SAVIL & Co.

Public Notice.

JOHN DINEGAN,

Merchant Tailor, School St.,

WOULD respectfully solicit the attention of one and all who are in want of CLOTHING AT FAIR PRICES, to the New and Extensive Assortment of

EXTRA HEAVY BROADCLOTHS,

HE HAS JUST RECEIVED.

Among them will be found Plain and Figured Beavers of English, French and American Manufacture.

PLAIN AND TWILLED CASTOR CLOTHS SUITABLE FOR OVER COATS, SACKS, OR BUSINESS COATS,

JOHN DINEGAN has also received a Very Extensive Assortment of PLAIN and FIGURED

CASSIMERES & DOE SKINS,

OF FRENCH AND AMERICAN MANUFACTURE,
And of the Latest and Most Approved Styles.

VESTINGS,

We have received an almost endless variety of Plain and Figured

Silks, Satins and Valencias,—of the very Latest Styles.

J. D. would invite the attention of Parents to his New Styles of

TWEEDS AND SATTINETS,

Suitable for Boys' Sacks or Business Coats, which he will make to order CHEAPER THAN CAN BE BOUGHT IN THE CITY BY THE DOZEN.

J. Dinegan, having made extensive arrangements for the Fall Trade, would simply add, that his present Stock is on a more

COMPREHENSIVE AND EXTENSIVE SCALE

Than at any former period, and that, engaging none but the BEST OF WORKMEN, the inhabitants of Quincy and the surrounding Villages

May rest assured that they can purchase their Clothing CHEAPER of him than at any other place in town.

Gentlemen's Furnishings.

J. D. intends keeping a very good assortment of FURNISHING GOODS.

P. S. The public should remember that DINEGAN keeps no Slop Work All that may be seen at his Store is of his own getting up, and all Garments bought of him are WARRANTED to Fit or no Sale.

For the Quincy Patriot.

AMERICA.

America's a wretched place,
Some folks pretend to say;
If so I wonder why such swarms
Are flocking on this way;
I wonder why they didn't think
'Twas best at home to stay.

I'm thinking that with all its faults,—
And it has some I know,—
A better place to find a friend,
Or shelter from a foe,
With all their ingenuity
They can't begin to show.

A better place to earn their bread,
If but a mind to try,
To educate their little ones,
And lay the shiners by,
They havn't found and can't begin
To find beneath the sky.

Yet some will take the liberty
Their freedom to misuse;
The hand that feeds and shelters them,
To heartlessly abuse;
For which they in most foreign lands,
Perchance their ears might loose

I love to see the foreigner
Seek comfort on our shore;
To enter, as they freely do,
Our ever open door;
I love to know my native land 's
A shelter for the poor.

But base ingratitude I hate,
And scorn the viper, knave,
Who strikes his venom to the hand
Outstretch'd from harm to save;
Th' ungrateful guest on freedom's shore
Is still to vice a slave.

F. M. Adlington, Weymouth.

HOUSEHOLD TREASURES.

What are they?—gold and silver,
Or what such ore can buy?
The pride of silken luxury—
Rich robes of Tyrian dye?
Guests that come thronging in
With lordly pomp and state?
Or thankless liveried serving man
To stand about the gate?

Or are they daintiest meats
Sent up on silver fine;
Or golden chased cups o'erbrimmed
With rich Falernian wine?
Or parchments setting forth
Broad lands our fathers held?
Parks for our deer, ponds for our fish,
And woods that may be felled?

No, no, they are not these? or else
God help the poor man's need!
Then, sitting 'mid his little ones,
He would be poor indeed!
They are not these! our household wealth
Belongs not to degree;
It is the love within our souls—
The children at our knee!

My heart is filled with gladness
When I behold how fair,
How bright are rich men's children,
With their thick golden hair!
For I know, 'mid countless treasure,
Gleaned from the east and west,
These living, loving human things
Are still the rich man's best!

But my heart o'erfloweth to mine eyes,
A prayer is on my tongue,
When I see the poor man's children—
The toiling, though the young—
Gathering with sunburnt hands
The dusty wayside flowers;
Alas! that pastime symboleth
Life's after, darker hours.

My heart o'erfloweth to mine eyes,
When I see the poor man stand,
After his daily work is done,
With children by the hand;—
And this he kisseth tenderly,
And that sweet names doth call—
For I know he has no treasure
Like those dear children small.

Oh, children young, I bless ye;
Ye keep such love alive!
And the home can ne'er be desolate
When love has room to thrive!
Oh, precious household treasures!
Life's sweetest, holiest claim—
The saviour blessed ye while on earth—
I bless ye in his name!

ANECDOTES.

An old lady, meeting a Cambridge man, asked him "how her nephew behaved himself?" "Truly, madam," says he, "he's a brave fellow and sticks close to Catherine Hall," (name of a College) "I vow," said she, "I feared as much; he was always hankering after the girls from a boy."

One Sunday, a lady called to her little boy who was tossing marbles on the side-walk, to come into the house. 'Don't you know you shouldn't be out there my son? Go into the back yard if you want to play marbles—it is Sunday.' 'Well, yes. But aint it Sunday in the back yard, mother?'

'Tom, you seem to gain flesh every day—the grocery business must agree with you. What did you weigh last?' 'Well, Simon, I really forget now, but it strikes me it was a pound of butter.'

'Twins, by the powers!' cried the horror-struck Irishman, as the nurse approached, bearing a new pledge of affection from his fruitful helpmate. 'Twins, hinny!' cried nurse, 'faith Murdoch, and it 's the blessed whiskey that makes ye see double this morning.'

MISCELLANY.

TOO HANDSOME.

It is quite possible for a man, or a woman either, to be too handsome. We do not pretend that this is an original remark, springing from our own sapient brain, because our conscience forces us to acknowledge the working. Nevertheless, it is an observation which few make, and which fewer still will confess to be true. Therefore, we intend to enter the lists in behalf of ugliness. From this declaration, it will doubtless be concluded that we are some old bachelor, ugly enough 'to frighten the crows,' as country children say; but, decidedly, such is not the case.

Having thus given out our thesis, it is our intention to illustrate it by a tale—an 'ower true tale,' as the annuals would write; and, moreover, we judge it best at once to acknowledge that it is a love tale—nothing but a common-place love-tale; no wonderful self-devotion, no 'heroism in humble life,' will be found therein; therefore, gentle reader, it is useless to seek it. And, after this exordium, we will begin.

Philip Heathcote lived in a country town, where he was the beau par excellence,—the Adonis, Apollo, Narcissus, of almost every young lady, from from fifteen to fifty; and, to tell the truth, Philip was indeed very handsome. We have no intention of describing categorically his eyes, nose, and mouth, because beauty is entirely a personal matter. It is seldom that two people agree on the subject. Each one has his or her ideal of perfection, and judges others to a certain extent as they approach to, or diverge from, this image, formed in each mind. Ugliness becomes beauty, and beauty ugliness, according to one's own fancy. There is no glamour so complete as that of a loving eye. Therefore, let each fair one picture our young hero as resembling her own, and she will like Philip Heathcote all the better.

Philip was one of those fortunate persons who seem born with talents for every thing. His conversation was winning enough to 'wile a bird off a bush'; he was 'a man of infinite humor,' as Shakespeare has it, and possessed that ever welcome quality of making the dullest party merry when he entered it. Then he was the best dancer, the best singer, the best flute player, for miles around; wrote poetry, composed songs, drew likenesses; in short, Philip was a pattern of perfection. His praise rang through the country round; none were insensible to it, save one, the very last he would have wished to be so—a young girl, named Margaret Lester.

With that peculiar contradiction which characterizes love, young Heathcote's heart:—if he had a heart, which some doubted—was given to one entirely the opposite of himself. Quiet, unassuming, not beautiful, only interesting, with no accomplishments, save a sweet voice, which would warble forever. Margaret Lester had yet stolen away all the love which the showy, fascinating, dashing Philip could bestow; and, wonderful to tell, was quite insensible to her prize. She was not in love with any one else—that was certain; and that the sweet, gentle Margaret was heartless—oh! that was quite impossible, too, but she did not care for Philip in the least. She never asked for his poetry; seldom sang with him; was perfectly happy to waltz with any one else; would quietly, without changing color, acknowledge his personal and mental qualities, and praise him with the greatest unconcern. So, for months and months, those two moved through the circles of country gaiety; meeting constantly, and furnishing for some time a grand subject for speculation.

In worldly matters both were equal; neither very rich nor very poor—well matched as the

Philip Heathcote lived in a country town, where he was the beau par excellence,—the Adonis, Apollo, Narcissus, of almost every young lady, from from fifteen to fifty; and, to tell the truth, Philip was indeed very handsome. We have no intention of describing categorically his eyes, nose, and mouth, because beauty is entirely a personal matter. It is seldom that two people agree on the subject. Ugliness becomes beauty, and beauty ugliness, according to one's own fancy. There is no glamour so complete as that of a loving eye. Therefore, let each fair one picture our young hero as resembling her own, and she will like Philip Heathcote all the better.

Philip was one of those fortunate persons who seem born with talents for every thing. His conversation was winning enough to 'wile a bird off a bush'; he was 'a man of infinite humor,' as Shakspeare has it, and possessed that ever welcome quality of making the dullest party merry when he entered it. Then he was the best dancer, the best singer, the best flute player, for miles around; wrote poetry, composed songs, drew likenesses; in short, Philip was a pattern of perfection. His praise rang through the country round; none were insensible to it, save one, the very last he would have wished to be so—a young girl, named Margaret Lester.

With that peculiar contradiction which characterizes love, young Heathcote's heart:—if he had a heart, which some doubted—was given to one entirely the opposite of himself. Quiet, una-suming, not beautiful, only interesting, with no accomplishments, save a sweet voice, which would warble forever. Margaret Lester had yet stolen away all the love which the showy, fascinating, dashing Philip could bestow; and, wonderful to tell, was quite insensible to her prize. She was not in love with any one else—that was certain; and that the sweet, gentle Margaret was heartless—oh! that was quite impossible, too, but she did not care for Philip in the least. She never asked for his poetry; seldom sang with him; was perfectly happy to waltz with any one else; would quietly, without changing color, acknowledge his personal and mental qualities, and praise him with the greatest unconcern. So, for months and months, those two moved through the circles of country gaiety; meeting constantly, and furnishing for some time a grand subject for speculation.

In worldly matters both were equal; neither very rich nor very poor—well matched as the gossips said. But it was useless; and Philip at last, mortified with the calm indifference which his homage won from the gentle girl, ceased all outward show of it; paid attention equally to every new or pretty face, and seemed determined to dazzle and charm without ever really loving or being loved.

Margaret was as apparently unmoved by her lover's dereliction, as by his previous adoration. Her real thoughts on the subject were only expressed to her mother, who naturally wished to see her only child settled.

'Why could you not like Philip Heathcote?' asked Mrs. Lester. 'You know, love, he has good prospects; every one admires him; he is very handsome, and is the life of all society wherever he goes.'

'That is the very reason he did not please me, dear mamma,' answered Margaret. 'I should not wish my husband to be so fascinating; I want more than mere outside qualities; and I should be inclined to distrust a man who was so very brilliant; he would never do for home. Don't you remember Beatrice, in 'Much Ado About Nothing,' when Don Pedro asks if she will have him for her husband? 'No,' she says; 'I should want another o' week days; your grace is too costly for every day wear.' And,' continued Miss Lester, laughing cheerfully, 'I think it is much the same with myself and young Heathcote—he is in truth, too handsome for me!'

Perhaps Margaret's feelings were natural. Every true-hearted woman likes to be proud of her lover, or rather to have one that she can rightly and justly feel proud of; there is no sensation more delicious or more unselfish than this. But we doubt very much if a woman, sincere, simple-hearted and good, as we wish to paint our Margaret, would feel love for a Philip Heathcote, the idol of a ball-room, the admired and admirer of all the vain and frivolous. That Philip had deeper qualities than these, was as yet unknown—such was his apparent character; and Margaret was right when she said that he was too handsome and fascinating for her.

Mrs. Lester and her daughter sat one morning at their work, when there was announced that bore of bores, a morning visitor; and one never particularly welcome at any time—the news-retailer of the place, a sort of feminine Paul Pry. Country society, alas! has not the blessing of London visiting—no dropping the acquaintance of these human barnacles. There was a suspicious twinkling in Mrs. Doddridge's little black eyes, which showed she was brimming over with news; and out the information came, at the earliest opportunity.

'Have you heard of the fire?'

'What fire?' said the ever sympathizing Mrs. Lester.

'What, not about the fire at Farmer Western's and young Mr. Heathcote, and his accident?' cried the delighted gossip, glancing meaningly at Miss Lester.

'I am sorry for it,' said Margaret quietly. 'What has happened to him?'

'I thought you must have known—but no; I forgot. Well, he is not quite killed;—almost.'

Both the ladies started; and, to their inquiries, Mr. Doddridge answered with a long story the substance of which separating truth from fiction, we will tell in our own words. Philip, coming home from a country ball, had seen that most fearful of all sights, especially in a lonely country place, a house on fire. He spurred his horse to the spot, and reached it with assistance, but too late. The house was wrapped in flames; and the farmer's aged mother was still within—no one thought of saving her. Heathcote, with a sudden and generous impulse, rushed into the burning mass, and they never thought to see him return, until he staggered forward, with his burden dead in his arms, and fell insensible on the ground. When he returned to consciousness, he was found to be fearfully burnt, one foot entirely crushed by a falling beam. The young, gay, handsome Philip, who had danced so merrily a few hours before, and charmed all, as was his wont, was taken home by the grey morning twilight, disfigured for life!

Margaret Lester's kind heart overflowed with unmingled pity at hearing this melancholy story of her former lover. And then his heroic and generous deed! She could not have believed him capable of such. Her tender conscience smote her for having misjudged him, and many slight instances of his kindly feeling rose to her mind, which showed he must have had a higher and better character beneath the one in which he publicly appeared. There is nothing so sweet or so all extenuating as the compassion of a gentle-hearted woman, though exercised towards a rejected, or even a faithless lover.

Many months did Philip lay on his lonely and desolate sick-bed, for he had no mother or sister to watch over him. Some few among those who had been so charmed with him sent to inquire after the poor young man, for a little time. But the interest and excitement of the event soon died away; and long before the invalid was able to crawl to the closed up garden of the old manor house where he lived, all had forsaken him. except one or two kind souls who sent him a book now and then out of charity. Among these was Mrs. Lester; and when at last the young man recovered, gratitude, or somewhat else, warmer still, led him thither the first day he left his home.

No one had seen him since his accident, except his medical attendant. Philip could not bear that his former friends should see how fearfully changed he was. His beautiful and classic features were scarcely recognizable, for the deep scars left in his face; and his finely moulded figure and elastic gait were changed into an incurable lameness. It was a fearful shock; such as none but a strong mind could bear. But Philip through his long and solitary illness, had thought much and deeply; and his external appearance was scarcely more changed than his mind. Nevertheless, with all his courage he could not repress many a bitter pang, as he waited alone in Mrs. Lester's drawing-room, and caught a glimpse of himself in the mirror which had so often beforetime reflected the graceful figure of the handsome Philip Heathcote. When the door opened, and Margaret entered, he could have shrunk anywhere from her view.

A hue, very slight, was in Margaret's usually colorless cheek; she looked once at the young man, and then advancing, took his hand in both hers, and said in a frank, earnest, friendly tone, that went to Philip's heart, 'I am very glad, indeed, to see you here again, Mr. Heathcote.'

There was no condolence, no allusion to his illness; she did not avoid looking at him, but spoke and smiled with true and kindly tact, as if nothing had happened, so that Philip's dread and embarrassment wore off imperceptibly. Once only, when he was engaged talking to Mrs. Lester, he caught Margaret's eyes fixed upon his face with deep expression. He thought, though he was not sure, that those sweet blue orbs were moist with tears; and the young man would have parted almost with life itself for one tear of affectionate pity from Margaret Lester.

He stayed a long time, and then went home, certainly happier than he had often been in the days of his bloom and gaiety. What Margaret thought of her old lover could not be known; she said very little; but that night she heard the old clock strike one before her eyes fairly closed in slumber.

Philip Heathcote's reappearance in society caused the usual nine day's wonder and excitement, and then all subsided. He was an altered man; his abundant flow of spirits was no more; he could no longer join the dance in which he had shone so brilliantly aforetime; he was often silent in company, and the belles, who had so often gazed delightedly on his handsome face, now passed him by with a slight recognition, or an audible, 'Poor fellow—how handsome he was once!' Philip had grown wiser through suffering; but still no one is ever quite insensible to the loss of personal attraction; and the 'has been' grated harshly on young Heathcote's feelings for a long time. He gradually withdrew from society, in a great measure, pleading as his reason the ill health which he really did still labor under; and at last his visits were almost entirely confined to Mrs. Lester's, where he met no altered looks or obtrusive condolence.

And now we must turn to Margaret. She too was changed; not outwardly, but in her own heart. Love, under the guise of pity, had stolen in there unawares. She had been perfectly indifferent to Philip, in his days of triumph; but when she saw him pale, feeble, thoughtful, without a single gay jest of sportive compliment to scatter round; treated with neglect, or else wounded by rude pity, Margaret's woman's heart gave way. She first felt sympathy, then interest, and so went through the regular gradations, until she loved Philip Heathcote with her whole soul. He, foolish man, humbled and self distrusting as he was, never saw this; yet he nourished his affection for Margaret in his heart's core, never dreaming that it could ever be returned.

'If she did not care for me in the old days,' he often thought, 'surely it is hopeless to imagine she could love me now—a poor, sick, lame, ugly fellow like me.' And he would look at himself with disgust; and turn away from the mirror with a bitter sigh. Ah! Philip Heathcote, with all his talents and brilliancy, still knew little of the depths of a woman's heart! We have heard of a man who broke the plighted troth of years, because a heavy affliction—it was deprivation of hearing—fell upon the lovely girl he was to have married; and we have also heard others of his sex justify him in so doing. Such love is not like woman's; she would only have clung the closer to her betrothed in his affliction.

Philip, in spite of his conviction of the entire hopelessness of winning Margaret's heart, still continued to hover about her unceasingly. He saw there was at least no other lover in the way, and that was one comfort. It was months before his eyes were opened to his error; and how that clearness of vision was effected, history sayeth not. Very few lovers can tell the precise moment when the blessed truth rushed upon their hearts, flooding them with delicious joy. To what hope—to what a new and blissful existence, did Philip awake when he knew that Margaret loved him! He counted all he had lost as nothing in comparison to the prize which his sufferings had won for him. Much he wondered at the change, not knowing that it was due to his altered character; for men look at the outward form, while women judge of the heart. But wonder and doubt were absorbed in intense happiness, for Margaret, the timid, retiring, but loving Margaret, was all his own.

Once more the town's talk was of Philip Heathcote and Margaret Lester. They were seen walking together; one had met them in the fields, another, coming home from Church; Mr. Heathcote was daily at the house; surely they must be engaged!—and this once the gossips were right—they were, indeed, affianced lovers; and in due time the old village Church beheld them made husband and wife. A few years passed, and the old manor-house rang with childish voices through all its desolate nooks; and Margaret and her husband might be seen oftentimes slowly pacing the dark alleys of the garden with a merry troop around them. Hand in hand Philip and Margaret were gliding down life's river, nor feared the coming of middle age, when each year brought new happiness. Had they altogether forgotten the days of their youth? Not quite; for once, when they sat watching the sports of their eldest son, Margaret said, with a mother's pride and fondness—

'Is not our boy handsome, Philip?—he will grow up almost as handsome as—'

'As his father once used to be,' interrupted Mr. Heathcote, with a smile, not quite devoid of bitterness. He was still not perfect—the vain man!

Margaret arose, clasped her arms around her husband's neck, and kissed his white forehead and still beautiful eyes with intense and wife-like affection.

'You are always handsome to me, my own Philip—there is no one like you, and if I were foolish once—'

'When you said I was too handsome!' cried the happy husband.

'There, do not remember those days—I did not love you then.'

'And now you do, my sweet Margaret, my dear wife,' said Philip Heathcote. 'And so I do not care in the least for being as ugly as an old satyr, since Margaret Lester can never again say that, I am a great deal 'too handsome for her.''

MEN AND THINGS AT THE CAPITOL.

A correspondent of the Boston Excelsior, writing from Washington under this head, relates the following incident which he witnessed at the last session of Congress:—

It was during the the Oregon discussion, when countrymen were constantly dropping in at the Capitol to see what was doing about the war. A couple of Virginians were leaning over the gallery, and it being their first appearance in the House of Representatives they evidently saw much that was "new and interesting." One of them was tall; the other decidedly short. The tall one was the best informed, though the short one had a great natural thirst for knowledge. The long one was pointing out the various ornaments of the Hall, from the clock at the main entrance all the way around to that curious piece of sculpture over the Speaker's chair, supposed to represent the American Eagle. From the ornamental they descended by easy stages to the useful, and so came to notice the members themselves.

"I wonder who that little shiny-headed old man is, down there to the right," said the short one.

"What, that one with the watery eyes and hunchy shoulders?'

"Yes."

"Don't know who that one is," returned the long one. "Guess he aint no great shakes. I've watched him this hour a'most. He sets there all the time, with his arms folded, like a marble statty. He aint got no papers on his desk. He says nothin to nobody nor nobody to him. He don't read, or write, or figger, nor seem to have any business at all upon his hands, like the other fellers. I reckon he's some new member that aint got acquainted here. Some thunderin whig cuss that couldn't arn his livin at home, and so they sent him here."

Just then a youngish looking man, with his long coal black hair parted up the middle, a la Signor Blitz, came in from the lobby and sauntered down towards the Speaker's chair. The moment he was noticed by the two Virginians they burst forth into extravagant exclamations of delight. "Ah, there he is!" "That's him!" "He's a screamer!" "He'll give it to 'em!" "Don't catch him napping in Congress!" and the like. The entrance of Bayley, from their own district, elicited a similar set of exclamations. At this moment, the sharp shrill cry of "Mr. Speaker-r-r," rang through the noisy hall like the crack of a rifle. The Virginians turned suddenly around.

"Je-hos-ophat, ef that little shiny-headed old man aint on his legs! Wonder what he can say. Guess he'll wish he'd sot still ef Hunter gets on his track; but what in creation are they all scampering about so for, you don't spect this stone consarn can catch fire, do ye?"

Our friends from Accomac were evidently astonished at the commotion below. The democratic members went trooping over to the whig side of the House; pages were passing chairs into the alleys, members came hurrying in from committee rooms, library, cake rooms, lobbies, suppreme court and Senate chamber, and in an instant the just-now scattered multitude were hanging in a dense black mass about the chair of the "little old man."

The ladies gallery, so lately deserted, became all at once resplendent with best bonnets and bright eyes; and the green baize doors of the lobby entrances were continually slamming as an eager multitude rushed through to gain a foothold on the other side.

The Virginians could make nothing of it; all they could see was a dwarfish old man, who, placing his clenched hands upon the desk before him, bent his body forward at an angle of forty five degrees, and forcibly ejected every sentence he uttered with a sudden jerk of the head. He used no jestures save this unpleasant jerk, and his voice was shrill and unmusical—sometimes almost startling in its tone of angry defiance, and sometimes sinking into low indistinct murmurings.

Our long Virginian wondered for the fiftieth time "who he could be," and all at once became inspired with the idea that he might ascertain by inquiring. He did inquire; but the listeners were anxious to catch every word of the speaker; and many were the 'hists' and 'pshaws' and 'pishes' the Accomac man received for his pains. Getting desperate, he hooked into a gentleman's button-hole, after the manner of Captain Cuttle, and would have an answer.

"That's Adams!" answered the gentleman, sharply and impatiently.

"Je-hos-ophat! what, not the one that was President?"

"Yes!"

"What! not John Quincy Adams of Massachusetts?"

"Yes! yes! YES! I tell you!" snapped the irrascible listener, turning his back upon his persevering tormentor.

"You, Jeff!" whispered the long one to his companion, "that's John Quincy Adams—John Quincy Adams of Massachusetts—who'd have thought it!" and the couple eyed him more intently than ever.

This was Mr. Adams's famous speech when he quoted scripture to prove our right to the whole of Oregon. The question was one of magnitude, and his posttion one of peculiar interest; but he never speaks without drawing a crowd. Indeed, he may be said to be the only man in the House who can command its undivided attention. He kept open house on New Year's day, and notwithstanding the many attractions at the Presidential mansion, there were probably as many people waited upon the "old man eloquent," as upon the President himself; many felt, perhaps, as I did whilst shaking his palsied hand, that it might be for the last time.

NEVER DESPAIR.

'Never despair,' says the millionaire, buttoning up his coat pockets, and addressing a shivering mendicant. 'Never despair,' says the prosperous banker through his buttery cheeks, to the ruined, bankrupt merchant. 'Never despair,' says the flourishing man to his less fortunate neighbor. It is a golden battle cry in the struggle with life; but while all appreciate, few have the courage to adopt it. 'I will not despair' is a declaration easier made than verified.

We remember one instance of two unfortunates kicking care and despondency to their progenitor the evil one, and doing so with success.

Two decayed young men of spirit, who had been chased into a gollop by want, all the way from the Mississippi to the Hudson river, arrived in New York one rainy Sunday morning in December. They were landing from a boat in which they had worked their passage, and sat down upon the end of the wharf.

'What shall we do for lodging,' enquired one of them.

'Don't know—do you?'

'No. Let's take a walk.'

Shabby and dirty, they strolled along Broadway, until they reached a mean looking drinking shop. Here they entered, imbibed their last sixpence in beer, and commenced reading the papers.

'Oh,' exclaimed one, as his eye glanced over the advertisements, '$25 are offered for the best New Year's Address for the carrier of this paper—all competitors to hand in their effusions by to-morrow evening.'

'Well,' said the other.

'I'll try for the prize.'

'You?'

'Even I. Landlord, can you lend a few sheets of paper, and pen and ink?'

The articles were furnished, and the scrivener worked in silence for four long hours, at the end of which time he shouted 'It's done.'

'Read it,' said his companion.

The matter was read and approved. It was carried to the office. The couple walked the streets all night and a great portion of the next day, until the time of the decision affecting the award of the prize.

The needy man entered the sanctum of the great committee, and emerged into the street the possessor of $25. Twenty were saved, and five were devoted to the payment of a week's very common board; the balance was invested in a very humble business—on a slender scale. It was prosperous; the light-hearted couple were permitted to reap the reward of unflagging industry and unconquerable perseverance. It is now seven years since the events we have narrated occurred, and now the firm is as well known as can be.

A despairing man is unfit for successful intercourse with the world. He cannot overthrow difficulties, nor combat dangers 'which retreat when boldly they are confronted.'

When the reverse engenders despair, and begets the gnawings of despondency, the victim is fit for criminal depredations or suicide. Every one's motto should be—if constitutional peculiarities will permit—'Never despair.'

The first mark of a gentleman is a proper regard for the opinions and feelings of others. A gentleman has feelings which he wants respected, and the same courtesy he is willing to extend to others.

SALUTATIONS. It is undoubtedly true, that much may be learned, as to the dispositions of a people, from the mode of their social addresses. In China they ask, 'have you eaten your rice?' for this article with them is an indispensable. If two Dutchmen meet in the morning, they wish each other a good appetite. In Cairo the inhabitants enquire—'How do you sweat?' since the want of perspiration is with them symptomatic of approaching fever. The Italian, or the Spaniard, asks, 'How does it stand?' A Frenchman enquires, 'How do you carry yourself?' The German, 'How do you find yourself?' The Englishman, 'How do you do?' In the three latter salutations we perceive the characteristic reference to—show, reflection, and activity. Frequently the Hollander asks, 'How do you fare?' Among the New England people the form somewhat varies. 'How are you?' is the usual mode of salutation.

A FERVENT ADMIRER. A clergyman who preached in the interior of Alabama chose for his text a passage of Scripture which had been variously interpreted. In concluding his sermon, he exclaimed, 'these are the conclusions I have arrived at after the most diligent study, but I must inform you that the commentators disagree with me.' A farmer, a great admirer of the parson's eloquence, had paid great attention to the discourse. He went home, filled a large bag with choice kidney potatoes and packed them off to the Rev. gentleman's house with the following note: 'Reverend and Dear Sur—You told us this mornin' as how common 'taters didn't agree with you. I hope as how choice kidneys does.'

ARISTOCRACY. It is related of General Foy, a distinguished French orator, that on one occasion, as he was entering, with much fervor, into a political discussion in the Chamber, and had just pronounced the word Aristocracy, a voice from the ministerial side asked him for a definition of it.—"Aristocracy," answered he, at once and calmly, 'Aristocracy, in the nineteenth century, is the league, the coalition, of those who wish to consume without producing, live without working, occupy all public places without being competent to fill them; seize upon all honors, without meriting them—that is Aristocracy.'

ÆTHERS.

The term æther is derived from the Greek aithein, to consume—signifying the element of fire existing in celestial space beyond the air. The exact period at which ether was discovered is uncertain. There are passages in the writings of some of the ancients which may be construed as referring to it but not so distinctly as to render the knowledge of it certain to them. The oldest of these references is by Raymond Lully of the thirteenth century; the second, by Bazil Valentine of the fifteenth century. In the year 1540, Valerius Cordus of Nuremburg, describes under the name of "oleum vitrioli dulce," an article, approximating to very impure sulph. ether.

The earliest period at which this fluid is distinctly noticed as ether,—so far as our information extends,—is in an article by Mr. Godfrey, in the Transactions of the Royal Society of London for 1730, in which certain experiments with it are detailed, and its refrigerating and inflammable properties exposed.

Thethers are limpid diaphanous fluids, of an exceedingly volatile character, and strong pungent odor. They are of various kinds, produced by the action of alcohol with different acids. Thus we have the sulphuric, acetic, nitric, nitriatic and chloric ether.

Chloric ether was prepared by Mr. Guthrie, in this country, in the year 1831. This liquid was subsequently examined by Liebig and Dumas. By the former distinguished chemist it has been styled the "Perchloride of Formyle," and by the latter, on account of the relation of its composition to formic acid, the "Chloroform."

This article, we are informed, has recently been employed as a substitute for Sulph. Ether, in producing etherization, both by Professor Simpson of Edinburg, and Mr. Bell of London. Its use is becoming quite popular with the medical and surgical professions on this side of the Atlantic. The only objection to a general use of the Chloric Ether, in its concentrated state, seems to be, its expensiveness. The Sulph. Ether is much cheaper.

There are some to whom the Sulph. Ether is exceedingly offensive. In such cases, the Chloric Ether removes the objection and becomes an excellent substitute. It operates in smaller quantities, in a more rapid manner, with less irritation of the lungs than Sulph. Ether, and has an exceedingly pleasant taste and fragrance. We invite those who dislike the Sulph. Ether, to call and try the Chloric.

THE SPIRIT OF THE AGE.

Upon this subject, a public lecture was given at the Odd Fellows' Lodge in this place, on the evening of the 12th inst., by George F. Beck, Esq. of Boston.

The utilitarian principles of the present day, were beautifully illustrated by the lecturer, and formed the groundwork of his address. His view of the subject was this—that the earnest and passionate pursuit of wealth, as the highest good, and the sedulous cultivation of all those minor qualities which render its attainment more easy, are calculated in an eminent degree to narrow and degrade the mind. To render it insensible to claims of a higher nature, and dead to all purer and nobler enjoyments, to turn this beautiful world into one vast counting room and work shop, and to substitute for the great book of nature, of which God is the author and publisher, the ledger and balance-sheet of man's devices.

Utility—the spirit of an unswerving and iron utility—he considered as the distinguishing feature of the age in which we live. That utility which elevates its votary to a pinnacle, and prostrates its opponent in a grave. That utility which has the pocket for its thermometer, and the ultimate results of which find their chosen home in the purse. In fine, that utility which seeks to reduce every thing in nature and morality to a "market valuation," which renders poetry disreputable, robs life of all its romance, and changes love into cupidity; which converts this world into an altar or mammon, and which invests the "almighty dollar" with a more potent and universal influence than the Almighty God.

The various follies and delusions of the age were most happily exposed and ridiculed, while the wonderful inventions and improvements were eulogized and admired. To the railroad and the telegraph Mr. Beck alluded in the most beautiful manner. Steam he pourtrayed as an overbearing autocrat, crushing and trampling upon all resistance, and electricity as a cunning Pope, circumventing where the other destroyed. Upon this topic the lecturer was peculiarly eloquent. "Steam and Electricity! Chariots of the body and the soul! Railways of matter and mind! The human brain, stirred into action by the demands of utility, acknowledges in these its greatest triumphs."

The lecture was truly an intellectual banquet; it was indeed a "feast of reason and a flow of soul." Fraught with truth, poetry, humor and pathos; fertile in thought, beautiful in diction and exuberant in fancy, it was a production which would reflect credit upon an alumnus of any literary institution, and coming from a self-made man challenges our admiration. We hope this is not the only opportunity we shall enjoy of listening to Mr. Beck, and would suggest for the good of the public that such lectures be given in some more spacious place than the Odd Fellows' Hall.

FINANCES OF MASSACHUSETTS. The financial condition of Massachusetts appears by the annual report of the Treasurer to be in the highest degree satisfactory.

The income for 1847 (not including $3,658 57 Jan 1.) was	$500,331 83
The expenditures for the same time were	478,755 63
Excess	$21,576 20
The revenue for 1848, is estimated at	498,134 77
The payments including $48,000 for the State Reform School at Westborough, at	480,000 00
Excess	$18,134 77
The property of the Commonwealth including Bonds and Mortgages of sundry Railroad Corporations for scrip loaned them, amounts to	7,708,395 51
Total debt, including 5,049, 555 56 for Railroad scrip	6,201,587 18
Excess	$1,506,808 33
Deduct Massachusetts School Fund, &c., specifically appropriated	875,822 18
Balance of Assets on accounts of ordinary revenue, Jan. 1, 1848,	$630,986 15

The stock owned by the Commonwealth in the Western Railroad Corporation, which, for some years was a charge upon the revenue of from twenty-five to fifty thousand dollars per annum, amounting in all to more than $200,000, now pays from thirty to forty thousand dollars per annum, clear profit. The excess of income after the present year is estimated at fifty thousand dollars, which it is supposed may be increased shortly by proceeds of sales of lands in Maine when the School Fund reaches its legal limits, viz: $1,000,000.

PISCATORY. About a fortnight since, Messrs. William Curtis and George Penniman of this town, with Maj. Ambrose Pearson, Caleb and Aaron Wood of Nashua, (N. H.) visited Merrimack, in that State, on a piscatory excursion, and sustained their elevated reputation as sportsmen. They angled for pickerel through the ice with the most happy success, and took an abundant supply, some of which they liberally bestowed on us. One of the pickerel, which may be taken as fair sample of the rest, weighed five and three quarters pounds. To piscivorous people, such sport must be quite bewitching. Although not particularly fond of piscation ourselves, still, we have quite an admiration for the "finny tribe," after they have once been subjected to culinary improvements.

We will merely add, if the pleasure of catching fish be tantamount to that of eating, then there is substantial enjoyment in angling.

NAMES IN BOSTON 200 YEARS AGO. In the records of births in the town of Boston, which occurred about the year 1640, the following amusing specimens occur;

Grace Beamsley, Mercy Beamsley, Deliverance Deck, Strange Beck, Free Grace Bendall, Reform Bendall, Hope-for Bendall, Seaborne Cotton, Fathergone Dinely, Return Gridley, Believe Gridley, Tremble Gridley, Hope Hawkins, Constance Milan, Patience Rice, Hopestill Vicall, Waitstill Winthrop, Posthumous Dutchfield, Honour Malone, Faith Munt, Joyliffe Rudoch, Temperance Sweet, New-grace Wilson, Satisfaction Belcher, Redemption Scott, Exercise Shattuck, Christian Stoddard, Remembrance Amery, Desire-the-Truth Akers, Purchase Gibson, Zurishaddai Browne, Pedajah Promort, Tabitha Bell.

TO DRIVE OFF RATS. These troublesome visitors are so annoying at times that persons are justified in using stratagem to cause them to retire to parts unknown. Mr. Charles Pierce of Milton, informs us of a very simple method which he used to effect this desirable end. He pulverised potash and strewed around their holes, threw some under the holes and rubbed some on the under part of the boards where they came through. A terrible squealing was heard among them that night, which he supposes was caused by the operation of the potash among their hair, or on their feet. He has not been troubled with them since. Mr. P. says people should not be too lavish of the potash, as old rats are not easily caught; one or two ounces will be enough for any common building, he thinks.

MEXICO. Gen. Cushing's Brigade with five pieces of artillery and eighty wagons has marched for San Angel, as is supposed. Perhaps the Masachusetts boys will soon have a taste of war. There is nothing further of interest.

BOSTON PILOT. This weekly journal commenced the year much improved in mechanical appearance; the heading is new and appropriate, and adds to its beauty. This newspaper is the best one in the country devoted to our adopted citizens, the Irish, and labors with a zeal worthy of all praise for that oppressed country. We regret the attempt to injure its influence by professed friends, and feel assured that it will result in the attempt alone, as a long-earned and justly merited praise and support cannot be estranged by selfish or ambitious efforts. We trust, however, that its publisher, P. Donahoe, Esq., is a little more attentive in sending his paper to subscribers than exchanging with us.

ENGINE AFFAIRS. A new Company has been formed to take charge of the Niagara Engine No. 1, of this town, preparatory to the improvements which are being made by Mr. Gilbert of Milton, by the substitution of his admirable works. Last Thursday evening the Company with friends met at their Engine House and partook of an excellent clam and oyster chowder, prepared for the occasion by the landlord of the Hancock House. The commencement war a good omen that they intend to be "always ready."

GENERAL COURT. In joint convention, Willis Phelps (dem.) was chosen a member of the Senate from Hampden County, in place of William B. Calhoun (whig) elected Secretary of the Commonwealth.

The Committee on the Judiciary was, by the Senate, instructed to consider the expediency of repealing the insolvent law of 1838, and all laws relating thereto.

A joint Committee has been appointed on the subject of removing the county seat of Norfolk from Dedham to Roxbury.

The Judiciary Committee was instructed to consider the subject to compel Railroad Corporations to establish station houses in the towns through which the roads are located, when so desired by the votes of a majority of the citizens.

The Legislature has hardly got in working order yet.

REDUCTION OF FARE. On Monday last, the fare was reduced on the Old Colony Railroad between Boston and South Braintree. The price of passenger tickets between this town and the city is now twenty cents—a package of twenty tickets may be purchased for three dollars and fifty cents, being seventeen and a half cents per ticket.

It will be observed on reference to our advertising columns, that the Old Colony Railroad have petitioned for authority to construct branches in Dorchester and Quincy and a double track from Boston to Braintree.

A COMPLIMENT. We learn from the New York Mirror, that the Board of Directors of the Charleston (S. C.) Mercantile Library Association, "in exercise of the power given them by the Constitution of the Association, have unanimously elected Freeman Hunt, Esq., as an honorary member," and at the same time paid a merited tribute to the ability displayed by him in the conduct of the Merchant's Magazine.

CONGRESS. The ten regiment bill has been under consideration in the Senate, and several prominent members have spoken upon it. But very little business has been transacted as yet, other than the reception of petitions and the introduction of resolutions, with the debate relative to the same.

FIRE ALARM. Last evening, soon after nine o'clock, a fire was discovered in the Bank building in town, occupied by the Cashier, who was absent with a portion of his family, leaving a servant girl and some of his small children at home. It took place in a clothes press, in the second story, and was probably caused by some person having gone there with a light. The clothes were destroyed and the building narrowly escaped.

OAK HALL, BOSTON. The stock remaining at this noted clothing mart is now being closed up rapidly, arrangements having been made to sell off every article on hand there, within the next fortnight, be the sacrifice what it may. Now is the time to get clothing at mere nominal rates, and rare bargains may be had at Oak Hall.

A cancer occupying one entire breast, was successfully removed from a woman in Philadelphia. She manifested no sensibility and says she felt no pain, as she was subjected to the action of chloric ether. The expensiveness of this article is now obviated, the price having been reduced fifty per cent. in Boston.

A man has been committed in Philadelphia, in default of three hundred dollars bail, on a charge of taking newspapers from the doors of subscribers after the carriers had left them.

The great Gaines case, which has been in the Courts for fourteen years, has been decided in favor of Mrs. Gaines. The result involves many millions of dollars.

"Union is not always strength," as Napier observed, when he saw the purser mix his rum with water.

The whole number of steamboats on the Mississippi and its branches, is about twelve hundred. The value of the commerce of those rivers is about double that of the foreign commerce of the United States.

A movement is in progress in Boston to establish a free library for the citizens.

Upwards of three thousand families in New York city have refused to admit the Bible into their houses, even when offered free.

The present number of ordained missionaries in the world is about twelve hundred; male and female assistants, twenty four hundred; total, three thousand six hundred.

On the morning of the 11th inst., the mercury fell to thirty seven degrees below zero at Montpelier, (Vt.,) and to from thirty six to thirty nine below, at Fryeburg, Maine.

The Collector at Barnstable has paid out to owners and crews of vessels engaged in cod fishing in that District, during the past season, $28,413 12.

Hon. J. W. Hornbeck, Member of Congress from Pennsylvania, is dead. He was a whig in politics.

The French keep up a strict blockade of the ports of Buenos Ayres.

A democratic State Convention in Indiana passed resolutions in favor of Gen. Cass for the Presidency.

Instructions have been sent to Gen. Scott to put the various mints in Mexico in operation for the coinage of United States dollars and half dollars. About twelve million dollars is the average annual coinage of those mints.

A counterfeit quarter Eagle has been discovered, so perfect that it was sawed in two to test it. The inside was silver and the gold only a thin shell.

The Boston Liberator publishes a call for an Anti-Sabbath Convention to be held at Boston on the 23d and 24th of March next.

A man lost his life in the woods in Lynn, last week, from exposure when intoxicated.

Ophelia Evans, a free woman of color, at New Orleans, has obtained a verdict of $2000 damages against several rich and worthy gentlemen, for beating and whipping her.

NOTICES.

SARSAPARILLA

AND

WILD CHERRY BITTERS.

THIS new and valuable extract of SARSAPARILLA and WILD CHERRY has been used with great success for the permanent removal of all such diseases as take their rise from an impure state of the blood; it promotes a healthy action of the Liver—strengthens the Nerves, and at once secures

HEALTH AND VIGOR

to the whole system. In all cases of

JAUNDICE, INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA, LOSS OF APPETITE, HABITUAL COSTIVENESS, SCROFULA, HEADACHE, LANGUOR,

and that

DEPRESSION OF SPIRITS,

which is so common a complaint in the SPRING AND SUMMER

season of the year, this Medicine has not its equal—and a single trial will convince the most incredulous of its peculiar virtues.

For further particulars the reader is referred to pamphlets which will be furnished by the Agents, showing the estimation which this valuable Medicine is held by those who have used it.

☞ CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC. ☜

Be particular and ask for Doct. Wood's Sarsaparilla Wild Cherry Bitters, and receive no other. This is the first preparation of these articles combined, ever offered to the public, and the great success attending its use has induced the unprincipled to counterfeit and imitate. As a preventive, see that the bottles have the words "Dr. Wood's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Bitters," pressed on the glass, and that each label on the bottle is signed by the proprietor, E. Quincy, Jan. 22. tf

To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in General Court assembled:

YOUR Petitioners, the Old Colony Railroad Corporation, respectfully pray that they may be authorized to locate and construct a Branch railroad in Quincy, in said Commonwealth, commencing at a certain point on the Old Colony Railroad on the southerly side of Neponset river and near the point where the Quincy Turnpike crosses said railroad, near said river, thence running westerly across the marshes and through or near a certain hill, called Mount Hope, to the Granite Railroad, a distance of about one and an eighth miles, with the right to connect with said Granite Railroad and to make arrangements by lease, purchase or otherwise, for the use of the same, and to make any other short branches or turn-outs in said Quincy which may be requisite to bring the granite business upon their line.

And your Petitioners further ask for authority to take and hold such land on each side of their railroad as shall be necessary or convenient to enable them to lay down a double track between the city of Boston and their junction with the Fall River Railroad in Braintree; also, that they may be authorized to make a short branch in Dorchester, in said Commonwealth, commencing south of Harrison Square to connect their line with deep water at Commercial Point. And as in duty bound your Petitioners will ever pray,

The Old Colony Railroad Corporation, by

E. H. DERBY, Committee.

Friends, Patrons, AND FELLOW CITIZENS,

I wish you all a Happy New Year!!

NOW for a little fun and nonsense. There is quite an excitement about town, among the profession, because

GEORGE B. NIGHTINGALE

has been SHOEING UP not more than half of creation, for the last eight years, with

BOOTS & SHOES.

Well, let 'em "go it." "Guess there wont be much of a shower after all," as the chap said when Noah wouldn't let him get into the ark,—calculate to keep doing so right strait along, every time. Why my dear "fellow critters," we don't mean to brag, but you undertake to take a look at OUR Boots and Shoes and the first you know you get your foot right strait in; there you are, stuck fast; then out comes the old pocket book with THE SHINERS; that's just what we want, and nothing else.—much better than credit; credit takes time to no purpose, oftentimes, and time, you know, is money. The pay down system is the only true one, after all,—the best remedy for corns and unpleasant dreams. The man that takes a pair of BOOTS or SHOES with one hand, and PULLS OUT THE CASH with the other, is independent; like all other tubs, he stands on his own bottoms; give me the man that shells out the stuff like a sheaf of wheat in cold weather and we'll set him on his taps in a giffy. I therefore advise all mankind, womankind, and every other kind that wears SHOE LEATHER, to CALL when they find themselves sailing about the UNDERSTANDINGS. The Doctors may tinker up the physical frame but I'll beat 'em hollow at repairing Damaged Soles (with the best material for such cases.)

P. S. Needn't be particular about knocking when you wish to come in; never mind for a little mud as we have it in abundance. Brooms are plenty and cheap for the tin.

With the money you can buy
Boots, Caps, Shoes—come and try;
Findings, also, made to use
For to make good Boots or Shoes.

When your Shoes are full of holes,
Or should need a pair of Soles,
I can mend them if you will
Just call in and pay the bill.

Samaritan Balm.

For the cure of Coughs, Colds, and Diseases of the Lungs!

ANOTHER evidence of the benefits derived from the use of this invaluable Medicine:

Boston, Nov. 1, 1847.

Messrs. Otis, Broaders & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen—Please send me by Express six dozen more of the "Samaritan Balm." Its virtues are fully established in our neighborhood, and I do not hesitate to say that the sale of it has been far greater than any new medicine I ever attempted to introduce. Of its benefits I can speak from actual experience, as being decidedly the best remedy for colds and diseases of the Lungs I ever tried. Last winter I was sorely afflicted with an attack of the "Bronchitis," when the good lady whose invention it is kindly prepared me a bottle which has completely cured me; and from the benefits I myself have personally derived from its use, I feel grateful that she has been prevailed upon to give so valuable a medicine to the world. Notwithstanding she has done it with the only wish to profit by it in a pecuniar point of view, I hope and trust she will reap a rich reward for her goodness towards suffering humanity. Yours, truly, D. BUGBEE.

Of the firm of GRANDIN, DUDLEY and BLAKE. No. 238 Washington St., corner of Central Court,

BOSTON,

TENDERS his services to the citizens of QUINCY in all the various branches of the

DENTAL ART,

And would respectfully announce that he has established an OFFICE in this place, at the residence of DOCT. LLOYD GOODENOW Hancock St., where he will give his personal attention to all who may desire his services, ONCE A MONTH

Dr Dudley proposes to visit this town on the FIRST MONDAY of each succeeding month and then to remain several days. During his absence orders may be left with Dr. GOODENOW, and will be punctually attended to on his return.

TESTIMONIALS:

This certifies that I am personally acquainted with DR DUDLEY of Boston, have examined his work, and seen him operate on the Teeth, and believe him to be worthy of confidence. I have known his partner, D S GRANDIN, M. D, for nearly twenty years as a scientific and skillful Dentist. For inserting artificial teeth in my estimation he has no superior.

G. WARE GAY, M. D.

Quincy, Nov. 11, 1847.

This may certify, that I have examined several specimens of Dental Plate work executed by Dr Dudley of Boston, which exhibit great skill and ingenuity. The teeth are incorruptable, and so closely imitate nature that it would be next to impossible to distinguish them from natural ones. Dr. Dudley has operated successfully on my own teeth to my great comfort, and in my presence upon those of others, and I can recommend him as an artist deserving of the confidence of the public.

LLOYD GOODNOW, M. D.

Quincy, Nov. 11, 1847.

Dr. Dudley extracts Teeth without pain when circumstances require it. Fills with pure Gold so as to preserve decayed teeth and prevent them from aching, and Inserts Mineral Teeth on gold and silver pivots without using wood, and on gold plate upon the SUCTION OR ATMOSPHERIC PRINCIPLE, from a single tooth to a whole sett, both with and without Gums.

POETRY

For the Quincy Patriot.

MY OWN.

TUNE—Jessie or the Flower of Dumblaine.

I roam'd o'er the highlands and search'd through the valley,
While seeking a lass to be bone of my bone,
When down by the river I saw my sweet Sally,
I woo'd her I won her and now she's my own.
And now she's my own, and now she's my own,
I woo'd her and won her and now she's my own.

Oh bright was the day when I met with my Sally,
Kind fortune befriending, her favor I won;
She blush'd when I hail'd her the rose of the valley,
And warmly entreated to call her my own.
To call her my own, to call her my own,
And warmly entreated to call her my own.

Oh who can describe the sweet charms of the maiden?
The sun on a fairer has never yet shone;
The echoes around with her praises are laden;
She's good as she's lovely, my dear one, my own.
My dear one, my own—my dear one, my own,
She's good as she's lovely, my dear one, my own.

Oh joy to the heart of her father and mother,
Who gave me their rose bud before it was blown;
The hills nor the valtes can't boast such another
As my dearest Sally—my beauty, my own.
My beauty, my own—my beauty, my own,
As my dearest Sally—my beauty, my own.

Oh bless'd be the day when beside the fair river,
Allur'd by her music, I found her alone;
Tho' fear of offending my heart caus'd to quiver,
I woo'd her, I won her, and now she's my own.
And now she's my own—and now she's my own,
I woo'd her, I won her, and now she's my own.

The joys of my heart since I won my sweet Sally,
To none but the true hearted lover are known;
Her sweetness diffuses a joy through the valley,
She's lov'd and she's honor'd, my true one, my own.
My true one, my own—my true one, my own,
She's lov'd and she's honor'd, my true one, my own.

PARAPHRASE OF A FRENCH MOTTO.

Aurora oft with rosy light,
May steal in glory on the sight—
The green leaves with the zephyrs dance,
The sunbeams on the waters glance—
The bud and blossom bless the eye,
Or breathe sweet incense to the sky—
But there is one to me more fair,
Than all these lovely things of air—
And yet I dare not tell her name,
Or whisper in her ear my flame—
For, ten to one, if I should do it,
She'd box my ears and make me rue it!

PETER PARLEY.

TO ***

And shall true love indeed be thus requited
For all its lengthen'd war of hope and fear?
Is this the thought that cheer'd the lonely year,
The meed of faith so firm, so fondly plighted?
What mildew or what canker worm hath blighted
The harvest of my joys in its full ear;
When sunshine smiled on all around—and near
Hope with her sickle stood and smiled delighted?
Now I can stand secure, and laugh at Fate,
For she hath dealt from out her deadly bow
The sharpest of her arrows—and the last.
Why should I court her smiles, or fear her hate,
When she hath spent her malice?—now I know
The bitterness of death itself is past!

A WINTER'S DAY.

Our life is but a Winter's day;
Some only breakfast, and away!
Others to dinner stay, and are full fed:
The oldest man but sups and goes to bed!
Large is his debt who lingers through the day;
Who goes the soonest, has the least to pay!

ANECDOTES.

A Kentucky roarer declares that since he has signed the tetotal pledge he has drank the Mississippi water by the gallon. 'Talk to me of a man eating a peck of dirt in a life time,' says he, 'why I have only been swallowing that sediment for a month, and am already chuck full of sand bars, snags, rafts, islands, sunken flat-boats, and never was healthier in my life.'

Not long since, two sailors, passing by a tailor's shop, observed a tailor at work with his waistcoat patched with different colors of cloth, when one of the tars cried out to the other, 'Look ye, Jack, did you ever see so many sorts of cabbage grow on one stump before?'

'O, mother,' said a little child, 'Mr S. does love aunt Lucy—he sits by her—he whispers to her, and he hugs her.' 'Why, Harry, your aunt does not suffer that, does she?' 'Suffer it, mother, no; she loves it.'

A captain in the navy, meeting a friend as he landed at Portsmouth, boasted that he had left his whole ships company the happiest fellows in the world. 'How so?' asked his friend. 'Why, I have just flogged seventeen, and they are happy it is over; and all the rest are happy that they have escaped.'

The servant of a Prussian officer one day met a croney who enquired of him how he got along with his fiery master. 'O, excellent!' answered the servant, 'we live on the most friendly terms, every morning we beat each other's coats, the only difference is he takes his off to be beaten, and I keep mine on.'

'Hiram, my boy,' said a tender father to his son, 'you must be more careful of yourself than you are. You have not the constitution of some.' 'Don't b'lieve it, dad—don't b leve a word on't. I've got the constitution of a horse. There ain't no break up or down to me. Dang it, if I don't b'lieve I've got the Constitution of the United States.'

An editor having written that the ladies frequently inquired at the Post Office as two back mails were expected, the devil set it up, 'Ladies call frequently at the Post Office, as two black males are expected.'

'Ma, what is revenge?' 'It is when your daddy scolds at me, and I hit him with the broom stick.'

MISCELLANY.

THE THANKLESS MAN.

There lived, 'once on a time,' in the early settlement of the goodly 'City of Elms,' one Joe Tompkins, a cobbler, who was remarkable for his small means and large family—(which calamities, by the bye, seem to be twin brothers)—verifying the old adage that 'Misfortunes never come single.' Now a better natured soul than Joe, never lived! he took the 'ups and dows of life' with a philosophy that would have been creditable to Diogenes—and if one of his kind-hearted neighbors sent him a bushel of potatoes, or a gown for his wife, or a frock for one of the little Tompkinses, the grin of satisfaction which he invariably wore, might be observed to enlarge a little, possibly—but otherwise, no particular evidence of thankfulness ever manifested itself. He might ejaculate to himself, 'Well that is nice!' or, 'it has come just in time!' but the oldest inhabitant had never known Joe to express his gratification at charities, in a single instance. It was therefore a common saying—'thankless as Joe Tompkins.

At last, during a season that promised a hard winter, it was ascertained that he had been unable to lay in even a stick of wood; and as all liked 'honest Joe,' measures were concocting for his relief. But one of his neighbors, whilst he felt a perfect willingness to assist the family, thought Joe manifested altogether too little gratitude for benefits received—and hit upon a plan which he conceived would 'bring it out, if he had one spark of it in him.' So certain was he of the success of his plan, that he wagered with an acquaintance, in a bet of five dollars, that he would make Joe Tompkins for once, a thankful man! Accordingly, the two proceeded to Joe's cabin, to test the experiment. Joe was found hard at work, cobbling an old pair of soles; he greeted his friends with his usual affability, and bade them be seated.

'Joe,' said Mr. B., 'I observed, in passing you shanty, that you had got no wood laid in! how do you expect to get through the winter?'

'I hardly know, neighbor B,' replied Joe, 'it takes all I can earn to feed the family, to say nothing about wood and clothing; and the Lord knows how we shall get through the cold days and nights'—and a tear gathered in his parental eye.

'Well, Joe,' said Mr. B., 'I have concluded to give you a cord of hickory wood from my own land!'

'You have!' exclaimed Joe, brightening up, 'well, well, we shall get along nicely then.'

'And I shall also draw it to your door, Joe,' said Mr. B. with earnestness.

'Well, I declare! Mr. B.,' responded Joe—'that will be first rate!'

'And I have ordered Tom Brown to saw it, and stow it away in your shed!' continued Mr. B. (beginning to doubt whether he should succeed in extracting the thanks of the incorrigible cobbler.)

'Better and better,' exclaimed Joe, as he plied his thread with a more hearty jerk—'we shall be as comfortable as bugs in a rug.'

There was a pause of a few moments, during which the betting party was telegraphing to each other by winks and nods, the issue of the game. At last, said Mr. B. as if summoning himself for a last effort—and looking Joe straight in the eye—'I have told the grocer to send you a barrel of the best flour!'

'Hoorah! hoorah!' screamed Joe, throwing down his work, and jumping up straight on the floor, 'was there ever such good luck? I vow I shall be a king right off,' and resuming his work, all was again silent.

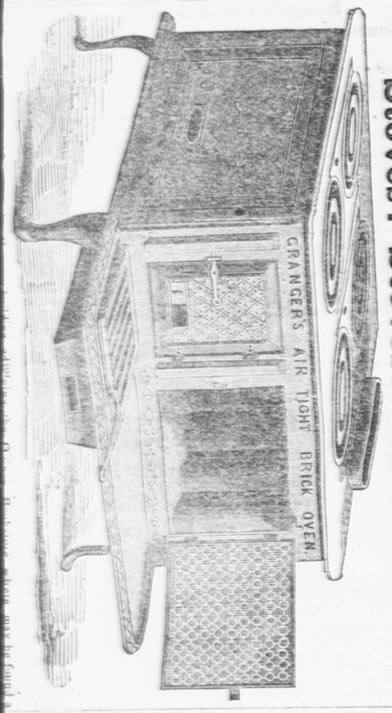

But Mr. B. had lost his patience, as well as his bet, and jumping up, in turn, he showered down on poor Joe, a perfect torrent of abuse

MISCELLANY.

THE THANKLESS MAN.

There lived, 'once on a time,' in the early settlement of the goodly 'City of Elms,' one Joe Tompkins, a cobbler, who was remarkable for his small means and large family—(which calamities, by the bye, seem to be twin brothers)—verifying the old adage that 'Misfortunes never come single.' Now a better natured soul than Joe, never lived! he took the 'ups and dows of life' with a philosophy that would have been creditable to Diogenes—and if one of his kind-hearted neighbors sent him a bushel of potatoes, or a gown for his wife, or a frock for one of the little Tompkinses, the grin of satisfaction which he invariably wore, might be observed to enlarge a little, possibly—but otherwise, no particular evidence of thankfulness ever manifested itself. He might ejaculate to himself, 'Well that is nice!' or, 'it has come just in time!' but the oldest inhabitant had never known Joe to express his gratification at charities, in a single instance. It was therefore a common saying—'thankless as Joe Tompkins.

At last, during a season that promised a hard winter, it was ascertained that he had been unable to lay in even a stick of wood; and as all liked 'honest Joe,' measures were concocting for his relief. But one of his neighbors, whilst he felt a perfect willingness to assist the family, thought Joe manifested altogether too little gratitude for benefits received—and hit upon a plan which he conceived would 'bring it out, if he had one spark of it in him.' So certain was he of the success of his plan, that he wagered with an acquaintance, in a bet of five dollars, that he would make Joe Tompkins for once, a thankful man! Accordingly, the two proceeded to Joe's cabin, to test the experiment. Joe was found hard at work, cobbling an old pair of soles; he greeted his friends with his usual affability, and bade them be seated.

'Joe,' said Mr. B., 'I observed, in passing you shanty, that you had got no wood laid in! how do you expect to get through the winter?'

'I hardly know, neighbor B,' replied Joe, 'it takes all I can earn to feed the family, to say nothing about wood and clothing; and the Lord knows how we shall get through the cold days and nights'—and a tear gathered in his parental eye.

'Well, Joe,' said Mr. B., 'I have concluded to give you a cord of hickory wood from my own land!'

'You have!' exclaimed Joe, brightening up, 'well, well, we shall get along nicely then.'

'And I shall also draw it to your door, Joe,' said Mr. B. with earnestness.

'Well, I declare! Mr. B.,' responded Joe—'that will be first rate!'

'And I have ordered Tom Brown to saw it, and stow it away in your shed!' continued Mr. B. (beginning to doubt whether he should succeed in extracting the thanks of the incorrigible cobbler.)

'Better and better,' exclaimed Joe, as he plied his thread with a more hearty jerk—'we shall be as comfortable as bugs in a rug.'

There was a pause of a few moments, during which the betting party was telegraphing to each other by winks and nods, the issue of the game. At last, said Mr. B. as if summoning himself for a last effort—and looking Joe straight in the eye—'I have told the grocer to send you a barrel of the best flour!'

'Hoorah! hoorah!' screamed Joe, throwing down his work, and jumping up straight on the floor, 'was there ever such good luck? I vow I shall be a king right off,' and resuming his work, all was again silent.

But Mr. B. had lost his patience, as well as his bet, and jumping up, in turn, he showered down on poor Joe, a perfect torrent of abuse for his want of gratitude, of which the following may be taken as a sample:—

'You good-for-nothing old fool! what do you mean by your utter want of thankfulness? who do you suppose is going to feed you and your hundred brats without a single token of gratitude from you! you thankless whelp! We'll have you carted to the Alms House, the whole batch of you!'

This unexpected fulmination of wrath, took poor Joe completely by surprise. He dropped his work, rolled up his eyes, and seemed perfectly aghast at the torrent of invective which had succeeded the glowing visions of wood and flour! At last, between his surprise and growing anger, (for he was totally unconscious of a want of thankfulness felt, if not uttered,) he turned upon Mr B. and summoning the little spunk which he possessed, replied—

'Mr B. if you came here to trifle with my poverty, you ought to be ashamed of yourself—and if you'll just keep your wood and flour to yourself, I shall be very much obliged to you. And with an air of injured innocence, he turned to his work.

'I've won the bet, by Jove!' exclaimed B., jumping up, and clapping his hands. 'You are welcome to the wood and flour, Joe—and you ought to be thankful for the lesson I've taught you.

'Well, well,' said Joe, (who had just begun to see through the plot) resuming his good nature, I'll remember this as long as I live—and I'm thankful it's no worse.' But to Joe's dying day, he never could 'get the hang' of expressing his thankfulness.

DEATH, NOT A PAINFUL PROCESS.

We think that most persons have been led to regard dying as a more painful change than it generally is; first, because they have found by what they experienced in themselves, and experienced in others, that sentient beings often struggle when in distress. But we may remark, that struggles are very far from being invariably signs of distress; muscular action and consciousness are two distinct things, often existing separately; and we have abundant reason to believe that in a great proportion of cases, those struggles of a dying man, which are so distressing to behold, are as entirely independent of consciousness as the struggles of a recently decapitated fowl. A second reason why men are led to regard dying as a very painful change, is because men often endure great pain without dying, and forgetting that like causes produce like effects only under similar circumstances, they infer that life cannot be destroyed without still greater pain. But the pains of death are much less than most persons have been led to believe and we doubt not that many persons who live to the age of puberty, undergo tenfold more misery than they would, did they understand correct views concerning the change. In all cases of dying, the individual suffers no pain after the sensibility of his nervous system is destroyed, often without much, and sometimes without any previous pain. Those who are struck dead by a stroke of lightning, those who are decapitated with one blow of the axe, and those who are instantly destroyed by a rush of blood to the brain, experience no pain in passing from a state of life to a dead state. One moment's expectation of being thus destroyed far exceeds in misery the pain during the act. Those who faint in having a little blood taken from the arm, or any other occasion, have already endured all the misery they ever would in this world, did they not again revive. Those who die of fevers and most other diseases, suffer their greatest pain as a general thing hours, or even days, before they expire. The sensibility of the nervous system becomes less and less acute under the same existing cause; and at the moment when their friends think them in the greatest distress, they are more at ease than they have been for many days previous; their disease, as far as respects their feelings, begins to act upon them like an opiate. Indeed, many are already dead, as it respects themselves, when ignorant bystanders are much the most to be pitied, not for the loss of a friend, but for the sympathizing anguish. Those diseases which destroy life without immediately affecting the nervous system, give rise to more pain than those that do affect the system so as to impair its sensibility. The most painful deaths which human beings inflict upon each other, are produced by the rack and faggot. The halter is not so cruel as either of these, but more savage than the axe. Horror and pain considered, it seems to us that we should choose a narcotic to either.—C. Knowlton, M. D.

A CALCULATION. If a young man, nineteen years of age, who drinks two glasses of liquor a day, at 6 1-4 cents a glass, and smokes two Spanish cigars at three cents each, will lay by the money, and at the end of the year invest it in the Savings Bank, or in some other secure way, and will continue to do it every year till he is thirty years of age, he will find that he has at that time, from that source alone, more than a thousand dollars. If he adds to this the sum that he may earn in the time that would be worse than wasted in obtaining and consuming these superfluities, he may safely calculate that he will have five hundred dollars more, making in all fifteen hundred dollars; enough to pay for a small farm.

Young man, choose. Will you, eleven years hence be a drunkard and a beggar; or will you be a temperate, industrious, respected and independent man?

HOME.

"I have friends whom I love, and would leave with regret,
But the love of my home, Oh! it is tender yet
There a sister reposes, unconscious in death,
'Twas there she first drew, there yielded her breath."

Home! 'tis the sacred depot of all that man holds dear in existence; the blessed spot where the unalloyed affections of the heart take root, spring up and flourish. Home! 'tis the beautiful abode of that unquenchable love which gives a soothing balm to the manifest ills of life, and binds up the broken tendrils of the heart. Home! 'tis the only fitting place of the way-worn and weary traveller to rest in tranquility from the fatigues of journey, for the enjoyment of that placid repose which so long has been denied. Home! 'tis where innocence and childhood, unstained by crime, and uncontaminated with the follies of the world, can luxuriate in the consciousness of chastity and goodness. Home! 'tis where the love of the devoted wife is hallowed by a faithful discharge of those marital duties which enchain the husband of her choice in the sacred bond of unity. Home! 'tis that endeared bright spec on the heart of man, where he may roam. Home! 'tis where FREEDOM unfurls her glorious banner, that justice may summons her votaries to the field. Home! 'tis that land of equal rights, where all can repair to the sanctuary of the ever-living God, and worship the Creator of the world in accordance with the dictates of conscience. Home! 'tis where WOMAN is treated as the equal of man, and enjoys the like rights and immunities in society. Home! its delights are no where so cheering as in that happy land where military despotism cannot neutralize law and over awe the government. On Columbia's soil the exile can rear himself a home, where gathering around his festive board his litule children and his wife he can, in peace and plenty smoke his pipe, and none dare molest him.

In that Country, where an impartial administration of the laws is sustained, and exact and equal justice meeted out to all—to the man of unbounded possessions as well as to him of tattered rags—the wanderer will ever find inducement to make it his permanent abode. Here, in this glorious land of the free and the brave, the 'stars and stripes' float upon every sea to guide the persecuted to our shores in safety—here when the chime of the Sabbath bell vibrates upon his ear, none will intercept his path as he bends his steps to the hallowed house of prayer.—Happy Country!—Blessed Home!

RULES FOR CONVERSATION.

Rattling knives and forks while eating, starting up and unrushing ceremoniously out of the room, stepping immediately before one who is looking intently at some object, pushing and jostling one without any apology, slapping any one familiarly on the shoulder, and calling him, in a mock affectionate style, 'my dear Doc,' 'my dear Prof,' and like names, scratching your head, poking your fingers in your ears, and affecting a lock of deep sagacity and solemn wisdom, are all out of place, and will ruin whatever reputation you may have for good breeding.

'Guard against them most sedulously. In company with others, say little about yourself. Never be such an egotist as to attempt to make yourself conspicuous by speaking ill of yourself. This is an expedient adopted by some people, to prove to bystanders their skill in self-knowledge. They are, however, among the vainest, proudest, and most ignorant of community.

'Never talks about trifles. Trifling conversation, such as the state of the weather, the style of the fashion, long, tedious, humdrum stories, which every little boy and girl of five years old can recite, are nauseous as ipecac to a sensible mind.

'Avoid slang phrases provincialisms, and technicalities. They are unpardonably vulgar. It is just as easy to talk grammatically as it is otherwise; to say 'in this place,' as to say 'in these diggins;' and far more becoming a gentleman.

'Avoid witticisms and repartees. They are no criterion of shrewdness, any more than interlarding one's speech with foreign phrases, and repeating the words, 'says he,' and 'says she,' and 'you know,' and 'you understand,' indicate a great mind.

'Robert Hall was capable of giving the bitterest repartee as you well know. He was unsuccessful in his courtship with Miss Steele, the distinguised poetess; and on a certain occasion, in company with some ladies and gentleman, one of the former remarked, 'Try us, Mr Hall, perhaps you'll not find our hearts all steel.' A moment's hesitation ensued, when, with a most withering frown, he replied. 'Perhaps not, but I shall find a face all brass.' He never indulged in it, however, only when compelled to it.'

MARRIAGE. Before making a regular engagement, ladies should consider whether the age of the young man who addresses you is suitable to yours—whether his pros-pects in life are such as to promise a comfortable home, suited to the station in which Providence has placed you; whether his education fits him for becoming your companion, counsellor, and friend. Never marry a men whom you cannot look up to with respect. Remember this, it is easy to 'love and obey' him whom you 'honor;' but wo be to her who ties herself for life to one whom she considers her inferior.

WIVES AND LADIES.

Dow, Jr., in one of his sermons says:—The kind of a wife you want is one of good morals, and knows how to mend trowsers—who can reconcile pealing potatoes with practical piety, who can waltz with the churn dash, and sing with the tea kettle—who understands broomology, and the true science of mopping—who can knit stockings without knitting her brows, and knit up her husband's 'ravelled sleeve of care'—who prefers sewing tears with a needle to sowing tears (scandal) with the tongue. Such is decidedly a better half. Take her if you can get her, when you find her—let her be up to the elbows in the suds of a wash tub, or picking geese in a cow stable.

My hearers—our text speaks of a lady before a tub. You may think it absurd, but let me assure you that a female can be a lady before a tub or in a kitchen, as well as in the drawing-room or parlor. What constitutes a lady? It is not the costly dress, paint for the cheeks, false hair, and still falser airs, but it is her general deportment—her intellectual endowments, and that evidence of virtue which command the respect and silent admiration of the world. She would be recognized as a lady at once—it matters not where or in what situation she be found—and be regarded as such—whether scorching bed-bugs with a hot poker, or hollering hallelujah at a camp-meeting. All that I have further to say, fellow bachelors, is, that when you marry, see that you get a lady inside and out—and who knows how to keep the pot boiling, and look well after her household. So mote it be.

THE DOCTORS AND THEIR PATIENTS. A traveller having occasion for medical advice, took a list of the physicians of the town where he happened to be, and called upon one of the most distinguished. As he approached the doctor's house, he found it surrounded by a crowd of people, whom he took for patients; but one of them said: 'I perceive that yon see us, which is not the case with every one who passes. Know, sir, that we are not living beings, but the ghosts of this doctor's patients, and we assemble here with thie view of warning people against trusting themselves in his hands.' 'O, thank you,' said the traveller, and on he went to the next physician's door. Here he found a similar crowd, who told him pretty much the same story. At another and another door, it was the same; until coming to the house of one of the least noted doctors in the town, he saw one ghost only in attendance. 'Ah,' thought the traveller, 'this ob-cure but worthy man who dwells here is certainly to be preferred to the rest—I will try him.' He accordingly consulted him—paid him a liberal fee—and rose to depart; but the doctor requested to know what friend had recommended to him so valuable a patient; upon which the stranger frankly related the discovery he had made, and complimented the doctor on the skill he must have exercised in making so few victims, while physicians of so much greater celebrity had sacrificed so many. 'Now, sir,' returned the doctor, 'since you have been so kind, I cannot do less than to requite your candor—I never had but one patient in my life before yourself.'

DRESS OF THE NEW ENGLANDERS. The boots and shoes worn by the earlier settlers of New England were course, clumped, square-toed, and adorned with enormous buckles. If any boots made their appearance, prodigious was the thumping as they passed up the aisles of the church; for a pair of boots was expected to last a man's life. The tops were short, but very wide; formed, one might suppose, with a special adaptation to rainy weather, collecting the water as it fell, and holding an ample bath for the feet and ankles.

The women, old and young, wore flannel gowns in winter. The young women wore, in the summer, wrappers or shepherdress; and about their ordinary business, did not wear stockings or shoes. They were usually contented with a calico gown; but they generally had a calimanco gown, another of camlet, and some had them made of poplin. The sleeves were short, and did not come below the elbow. On holidays, they wore one, two or three ruffles on each arm—the deepest of which were sometimes nine or ten inches. They wore long gloves coming up to the elbow. Round gowns had not then come in fashion; so they wore aprons. They generally had small, very small muffs, and some wore masks.

LAZINESS. Laziness has been the parent of all sins that have been committed since the morning of the creation. Eve was in a lazy fit at the time Satan tempted her; if Adam had kept her busy she would have kept out of mischief and we should all have been as innocent as lambkins. If the ante-deluvians had repented and commenced building arks when Noah preached to them, they might all have been saved; but they were too lazy to work, and so they were all drowned in the great catastrophe. The reason the Egyptians refused to let the Israelites go was because they were too lazy to make their own bricks, and wished to compel the Hebrews to do that work for them. The consequence was, you know, they were plagued greviously, and afterwards thrown into the Red Sea. Lazy people, in our own days, are constantly plaguing themselves, and are an everlasting plague and eyesore to others. The sight of a creeping, listless, indolent man or woman is misery to the thrifty and industrious.

A CHRISTMAS TALE. Whilst the generation was flourishing, there dwelt in what is now a famous city not a mile from Boston, an opulent widow lady, who once afforded a queer manifestation of that odd compound of incombatibles, called 'human nature.'

It was christmas eve, of one of those old fashioned winters which were so 'bitter cold.' The old lady put on an extra shawl, and as she hugged her shivering frame, she said to her faithful negro servant:

'It is a terrible cold night, Scip., I am afraid my poor neighbor, widow Green, must be suffering. Take the wheel barrow, Scip. Fill it full of wood. Pile on a good load, and tell the poor woman to keep herself warm and comfortable. But before you go, Scip, put some more wood on the fire, and make me a nice mug of flip.'

These orders were duly obeyed; and the old lady was thoroughly warmed, both inside and out. And now the trusty Scipio was about to depart on his errand of mercy, when his considerate mistress interposed again.

'Stop, Scip; you need not go now; the weather has moderated.

BODILY EXERCISE IN EARLY LIFE. To fetter the active motions of children, as soon as they have acquired the use of their limbs, is barbarous opposition of improving their minds and manners, is an insult to common sense. It may, indeed, be the way to train up elevated puppets for short lived prodigies of learning; but never to form healthy, well-informed and accomplished men and women. Every feeling individual must behold, with much heart-felt concern, poor little puny creatures of eight, ten or twelve years of age exhibited by their silly parents as proficients in learning, or as distinguised for their early proficiency in language, music, elocution or even some frivolous acquirement. The strength of the mind, as well as the body is exhausted, and the natural growth of both is checked by such untimely exertions.

A FEW WORDS FOR CHILDREN. If there is a boy in the school who has a club foot, don't let him know that you ever saw it. If there is a poor boy with ragged clothes, don't talk about rags when he is in hearing. If there is a lame boy, assign him some part of the game which does not require running. If there is a hungry one, give him a part of your dinner. If there is a dull one, help him to get his lesson. If there is a bright one, be not envious of him; for if one boy is proud of his talents, and another is envious of them, there are two great wrongs and no more talents than before. If a larger or stronger by has injured you, and is sorry for it, forgive him, and request the teacher not to punish him. All the schoo will show by their countenances how much better it is to have a great soul than a great fist.—Horace Mann.

PUSH ON. Let no man wax pale, therefore, because of opposition. Hardship is the native soil of manhood. He that cannot abide the storm without flinching or quailing, strips himself in the sunshine, and lies down by the way side, to be overlooked and forgotten.

He who but braces himself up to the struggle when the wind blows, gives up when they are done, and falls asleep in the stillness that follows.

Did you ever know any body to stick to any kind of business, no matter how unpromising, ten years at most who did not prosper? No matter how bad it might be at the beginning if he stuck to it earnestly and faithfully, and nothing else, no matter how hard he may have found it sometimes to keep his head above water, still, if he persevered, he always came out bright in the long run—didn't he.—John Neal.

A THOUGHT FOR EVERY DAY. We see not in life the end of human actions. The influence never dies. In ever widening circles it reaches beyond the grave. Death removes us from this to an eternal world; time determines what shall be our condition in that world. Every morning, when we go forth, we lay the moulding hand on our destiny; and at evening, when we have done, we have left a deathless impression upon our character. We touch not a wire but vibrates in eternity—a voice, but reports at the throne of God. Let youth, especially think of these things; and let every one remember that in this world character is in its formation state—it is a serious thing to think, to speak, to act.

TAKE CARE OF YOUR FEET. The circumstances in which wet feet and cold feet are most apt to cause disease, are when the person remains inactive, and where consequently there is nothing to counterbalance the unequal flow of blood which then takes place towards the internal parts; for it is well known that a person in ordinary health may walk about or work in open air with wet feet for hours together without injury, provided he puts on dry stockings immediately on coming home. It is therefore not the mere state of wetness that causes the evil, but the check on perspiration, and the unequal destribution of the blood to which the accompaning coldness gives rise.

An avaricious man is like barren sandy ground, which sucks in all the rain and dews with greediness and thirst; but yields no fruit to the inhabitants.

Too Precipitate. A gentleman in Penrith, (Scotland) whose house was much infested with cockroaches, got out of bed one night lately and after killing several, lay down again. He had scarcely got into a slumber, when he found underneath his head something that he imagined to be a beetle, which he seized with a shudder, and threw it across the room with great violence. He then discovered, but too late, that the supposed beetle was his watch seal, and that he had broken his watch to pieces by throwing it against the wall.

For the Quincy Patriot.

PUBLIC MEETING IN WEYMOUTH.

Mr. Editor—I send you the doings of a public meeting held at A. B. Wales's Hall, Weymouth Landing, on Wednesday evening, 19th inst.

Elias Richards was called to the chair, and John O. Foye was chosen Secretary. The object of the meeting was briefly stated by the Secretary, as follows:—to consider the importance of petitioning the Legislature for a law restricting the sale of fermented liquors in less quantities than twenty eight gallons; and that the County Commissioners be authorized to license one or more suitable persons in each town for the sale of spiritous liquors for medical purposes only.

The importance of the subject was urged by several members of the meeting, and it was voted to choose a Committee of four to draw up a petition and cause to be printed one thousand copies for general distribution. John P. Nash, Fisher A. Kingsbury, John O. Foye, and Peter H. Cushing were chosen to fill this Committee.

It was also voted to choose a Committee of three to prosecute any violation of the License Laws that may come to their knowledge. Ebenezer H. Richards, Charles A. Hobart and John Rolie were chosen to fill this Committee.

John O. Foye, Secretary.

An agent of the Virginia Bible Society states, that there are upwards of fifteen thousand families in Virginia without the Scriptures.

A man in Gardiner, Me.) has invented a machine for turning lasts, or any irregular form, which is said to be very simple.

The city of Mexico is nine thousand feet above the level of the sea; and in this locality narrow chests and diseased lungs are unknown; while from the extreme dilation of the atmosphere, animal substances never become putrid; notwithstanding its proximity to the equator and consequent high temperature.

The Legislature of Tennessee has nominated Gen. Taylor for President.

Hon. Jefferson Davis has been elected United States Senator by the Mississippi Legislature. He now holds the station by appointment of the Governor.

The whaling business at Nantucket has decreased fifteen sail since 1843. The voyages are said to be one third longer than they were twenty years ago, and the number of arrivals and departures are growing less and less.

Dr. Graham says, if this rule were strictly observed,—when the whole body, or any part of it is chilled, bring it to its natural feeling and warmth by degrees,—the frequent colds we experience in winter would, in a great measure, be prevented.

A New Hampshire paper says, John S. Wells, Esq., of Exeter, has been appointed Attorney General of that State.

The free white population of western Virginia, numbers eighty thousand more than that of eastern Virginia.

The officers and crew of A. N. Johnston have been exonerated from all blame for the explosion on that boat at an investigation just closed. The cause of the explosion is yet a mystery.

A new process has been brought into use in New York, by which wrought and cast iron, and steel, are soldered with as much facility and as little trouble as tin.

The criminal prosecutions in Suffolk county, for 1847, conducted by S. D. Parker, Esq., County Attorney, amounted to one thousand three hundred and twenty nine.

Three public schools in North Marshfield are now disbanded in consequence of the ravages of the scarlet fever, which has been fatal in several cases.

American newspapers are prohibited from circulation in the dominions of the Autocrat of all the Russias. They are too enlightening and independent in their character to be trusted among serfs.

Young women who are in the habit of reading newspapers, are the ones who have the best dispositions, and make the first rate of wives.

Maj. Bliss, the favorite Adjutant General of Gen. Taylor, has arrived at Washington.

The quiet city of Hartford was disturbed by a mob one night last week, to take violent satisfaction of the editor of the Charter Oak, for publishing an attack upon Lieut Woodhouse. Some damage was done to his office and dwelling.

Near the Barbadoes Islands is a huge white rock, which from the resemblance to a ship under full sail is called the "Ship Rock." A French frigate, falling in with this rock in the night time, mistook it for an English vessel, and commenced firing into it. The echoes of the cannonade were repeated so perfectly that they were also mistaken for the returning fire. The action continued until morning, when each party having received an equal amount of damage, it was thought best to discontinue the fight.

There are already one hundred orphans in the Girard College, and one of the large square apartments of the principal building has been arranged for their use as a school room.

Robert Morris, Jr., a young colored gentleman, a member of the Boston Bar, and a native of Salem, appeared as Counsel at the court of Common Pleas, in Boston, last week, and acquitted himself very creditably and with much ability.

The large coal house of the New Hampshire Iron Factory Company at Franconia (N. H.) containing 40,000 bushels of charcoal, took fire on the 12th inst. Only about ten thousand bushels of the coal could be saved. The loss will be about three thousand dollars.

John A. Green, Editor.

The Union Magazine—Israel Post, 140 Nassau St., New York. In the February number, just issued, of the Union Magazine we find an unusual variety of proze and poetry from a number of the most celebrated authors in America. We observe in the list of contributors, Mrs. Emma C. Embury, Mrs. Kirkland herself (the editress), Mrs. Jane C. Campbell, Mrs. Elizabeth Emmet, Mrs. C. Maria Sheldon, Miss H. F. Gould, Miss Ellen Elwood, Miss Augusta Browne, Mrs. E. F. Ellet, Evert A. Duyckinck, Alfred B. Street, W. Gilmore Simms, Rev. J. N. Danforth, Park Benjamin, Caleb Lyon, J. R. Orton and others. Street's article "Shawangunk Mountain," is very forcibly written. "Lillis Robinson and her Brother" by Mary S. F—— is also an exceedingly pathetic narrative. In the way of poetry, we specify Benjamin's "Dawn," "My Brown Hulan" by J. R. Orton, and "To a Bird Singing" by J. Clement. The embellishments are numerous, costly, and altogether admirable. The opening mezzotint by Sadd, entitled "Steps to Ruin," is really magnificent. The line engraving by Hinshelwood is also particularly meritorious; so is the colored fashion-plate; so are the eight wood-cut illustrating the text. These latter are quite an ornament to the magazine and greatly enhance its value.

Paper for Youth. We have received a neat little simi-monthly paper published at Concord, (N. H.) at fifty cents a year, called "Uncle Jesse's Gazette." Rev. J. W. Pollard is publisher, and E. B. Tripp, with whom have some acquaintance, is printer. Success to them.

The "John-Donkey." This paper only visits our sanctum occasionally. If the publishers will send the second and third numbers we can then judge better of the merits of the work.

Fall River Line to New York. In a few weeks the steamer Bay State will again return into the line, and in May, the magnificent new boat called the Empire State, still more costly than the Bay State, will also be placed on this route.

Important Decision. In a case before the Court of Common Pleas in Middlesex, Judge Wells decided that a pupil could not be removed from a public school for a bad character. Damages were given to the plaintiff, father of a girl so removed from a grammar school in Charlestown, on the ground that the worse a child's character, the more need of school influences to reform it.

Rights of Women. By a late act of the Vermont Legislature, all real estates, and rents, issues, and profits which may have belonged to a woman before marriage, or which she may inherit during marriage, are exempt from attachment or levy "for the sole debts of her husband, and no transfer of either made by the husband, will be valid, unless she shall freely sign the deed." Married women are also authorized to devise such property by will.

Skirmish with the Camanches. Advices from Gen. Wool to Dec. 20, states that Captain Lewis, of the Texan battalion, had started with seventeen men, and met a party of Indians, numbering about seventy, with whom a fight ensued, resulting in thirteen Indians killed, the number of wounded not known, when they took flight. The Texans took eighty horses, and released a number of captives, all of them women and children.

Fall River Railroad. The third annual meeting of the Fall River Railroad Company was held at Fall River on the 20th inst. After hearing the reports of the company, which were amply satisfactory, nine directors were chosen, as follows:—C. C. Gilbert of Boston, Royal Turner of Randolph, A. B. Borden, Jefferson Borden, Richard Borden, of Fall River, Peter H. Pierce, Middleboro', Nahum Stetson, Bridgewater, J. S. Tillinghast, New Bedford, J. C. Dodge, Boston.

Pauperism in Massachusetts. By the abstract of the returns of the overseers of the poor of Massachusetts for the year ending November 1st, 1847, prepared by the Secretary of the Commonwealth, it appears that the number of state paupers is 9005; that the number of state paupers who are foreigners is 7035!—that the number of paupers from England and Ireland is 6383; that the number of foreign paupers, who have come into the Commonwealth within one year, is 2501; that the proportion of paupers probably made so by intemperance in themselves or others is 8703; that the net amount of expense of supporting and relieving paupers is $347,411 19. Thus it appears that, during the year, our pauper list has been increased 2501 by the influx of foreigners.

General Court. The Legislature of the "Old Bay State" progress rather slowly in the transaction of public business. In glancing over the list of petitions, etc, offered the present week, we find only the following which may be interesting to our readers:—

Of the Neponset Bridge Corporation, for authority to regulate tolls on their bridge.

Of Isaac G. Blanchard and others that a part of Randolph may be set off to Stoughton.

Of the town of Worcester to be created a City.

Of the City of Roxbury, that the shire town of Norfolk County be removed from Dedham to that City.

The annual report of the Old Colony Railroad Corporation has been presented.

Ball at Town Hall. There will be amusement and recreation at Mr. John Cody's Ball to be given next Thursday evening. Mr. Gandsey, the celebrated blind piper, with his sons, who play on other instruments, furnish the music. Every body knows "Jonny Cody," who has lived in this town many years, and gained the friendship of all his acquaintances. He deserves a crowded house to cheer him as he advances in years. [See his advertisement.]

Congress. The Senate still continues the discussion of the ten regiment bill. To an enquiry, Gen. Cass replied, that Maj. Gen. Scott had been suspended from the command of the army in Mexico, and that Maj. Gen. Butler was now in that position as senior officer, also, that Gen. Worth had been released from arrest. The House still talk about the President's Message, and are daily calling for information from the Executive and the Cabinet about the war.

Mexico. Orders have been issued for assessing a tax of three millions of dollars for the support of the American army. Anaya, Ex-President of Mexico, a prisoner of war, has been released. Guerrilla bands continue their depredations. There is nothing indicative of peace, although plenty of rumors to that effect.

Leap Year. The Brattleboro' Eagle states that the ladies of Vernon, (Vt.) availing themselves of the time-honored prerogative of leap year, made arrangements for a dance recently, invited the gentlemen, gallanted them back and forth, and—paid the bills.

The whole number of inmates of the State Prison at Charlestown, at the commencement of the year 1847, was 254; at the commencement of the present year, 266—increase 12.

Rev E. H. Chapin of Boston, has been invited to become the Pastor of the Elizabeth street Universalist Society in New York city, at a yearly salery of $3000.

Gov. Shunk of Pennsylvania, has appointed Nimrod Strickland, Esq., editor of the West Chester Republican and Democrat, associate Judge of Chester county.

Sponges are believed to consist of excitable flesh full of small mouths, by which they absorb and eject water.

The Governor of Georgia has appointed Mr. V. Johnson as United States Senator, in place of Mr. Colquitt, resigned.

Insects are found in slate, and flies and ants in amber.

When you are addressing blockheads, be as grandiloquent as possible; for the less such people understand, the more profound they think you are.

The foreign news received last week is favorable in almost every particular. Both breadstuffs and cotton had slightly improved, and were tendiug upward.

A person in the States' Prisen at Thomaston, (Me.) last week, stabbed four other prisoners, while at work in the shoe-shop, one of them (a colored man) it is supposed mortally. His name is Spencer, and he has been in prison some years, for a murder.

Maryland has netted sixty-eight thousand dollars the last year for licenses to lottery venders.

A distressing death by Hydrophobia is reported in Philadelphia—a child of seven years bitten by a street cur.

Marble fire places should never be washed with soap-suds, but with a nice oiled cloth, and rubbed dry with a rag.

The cars have commenced running over the Cape Cod Branch Railroad as far as Wareham leaving the Old Colony depot with the Fall River train.

In regard to smell, and old English poet well remarked, that perfumers ought not to be considered as benfactors, for they did us no good; for that smells best which we cannot smell at all.

Ship Danvers (of Boston) Capt Grafton, has been chartered at New Orleans by Government, to carry troops to Vera Cruz at $3500 the trip.

Two young men in Carrolton, Kentucky, having quarrelled on a love matter, undertook to fight it out on the 16th inst, and on the fourth fire one of them had his thigh shattered.

NOTICES.

A meeting of the "Union Board" will be held at the house of Mr George Follet, next MONDAY EVENING, at six o'clock precisely.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in General Court assembled:

THE undersigned, Mayor of the City of Roxbury, in conformity to an Order of the City Council of the 13th day of Dec., 1847, respectfully represents, that in consequence of the vastly increased population of the towns in the northern, as compared with those in other portions of the County of Norfolk, and from the far greater facilities afforded by the existing and prospective means of intercommunication between Roxbury and the other towns in the County than they have with Dedham, a very large majority of the citizens who reside in the County, as well as the very considerable number of persons in the Counties of Suffolk and Middlesex, who are obliged to attend the Courts or visit the offices of the Clerk of those Courts, and those of the Register of Probate and Deeds and County Treasurer, could less expensively and more conveniently do so, if the Courts were holden and those Offices established in the City of Roxbury. Therefore the undersigned Mayor requests that said City may be constituted the County seat instead of Dedham. And as in duty bound will ever pray,

H. A. S. DEARBORN, Mayor

City of Roxbury, Jan. 4, 1848.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in General Court assembled, A. D., 1848:

THE undersigned, inhabitants of the town of Stoughton and others, would humbly represent to your honorable body, that by an alteration in the now established line between the towns of Stoughton and Randolph it would be to the advantage and convenience of many of the inhabitants of said towns; by such an alteration it would annex to the town of Stoughton from one hundred to one hundred and fifty acres of land from the town of Randolph, which would be beneficial to many of the inhabitants of both towns; as there has been located and made two new public roads from the main road in Stoughton leading from Boston to New Bedford, to the Fall River Railroad depot in Randolph, called the East Stoughton depot, as there would be a prospect if annexed to Stoughton of persons building on said lands; as the same is now situated there would be no advantage of schooling to such citizens as might settle thereon: said alterations prayed for by your petitioners are as follows—commencing at a certain point on the old established line between said towns by lands of Isaac G. Blanchard of Stoughton and Simeon Linfield of Randolph, fifty three rods and twenty links from a stone monument erected as a dividing line between said towns by the road near Isaac Smith's dwelling house in Stoughton—thence turning and running S. seventy two degrees, forty five minutes, E. about sixty eight rods on the dividing line of land of I. G. Blanchard of Stoughton, and Simeon Linfield of Randolph, through land of the heirs of Joel Briggs, deceased, to a certain point by the wall dividing the ladns of said heirs and Isaac Smith—from thence running S. forty seven degrees East one hundred and forty rods on the dividing line of lands of said heirs and Isaac Smith and I G Blanchard of Stoughton and Samuel Linfield and John Linfield of Randolph, until it comes to the centre of the Fall River Railroad track—from thence, one hundred and seventy one rods on the Fall River Railroad track, a southerly course, to where it comes to and intersects the old established line between said towns where it crosses the Fall River Railroad track. Your petitioners would humbly pray that all the lands included in the above described boundaries may be taken from the town of Randolph and annexed to the town of Stoughton.

ISAAC G BLANCHARD, and others.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in General Court assembled :

THE undersigned, Mayor of the City of Roxbury, in conformity to an Order of the City Council of the 13th day of Dec., 1847, respectfully represents, that in consequence of the vastly increased population of the towns in the northern, as compared with those in other portions of the County of Norfolk, and from the far greater facilities afforded by the existing and prospective means of intercommunication between Roxbury and the other towns in the County than they have with Dedham, a very large majority of the citizens who reside in the County, as well as the very considerable number of persons in the Counties of Suffolk and Middlesex, who are obliged to attend the Courts or visit the offices of the Clerk of those Courts, and those of the Register of Probate and Deeds and County Treasurer, could less expensively and more conveniently do so, if the Courts were holden and those Offices established in the City of Roxbury. Therefore the undersigned Mayor requests that said City may be constituted the County seat instead of Dedham. And as in duty bound will ever pray,

H. A. S. DEARBORN, Mayor

City of Roxbury, Jan. 4, 1848.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

In Senate, Jan. 19, 1848.

ON the Petition aforesaid, Ordered, That the petitioners cause an attested copy of their Petition with this Order thereon, to be served on the Clerks of the respective towns and cities of the County of Norfolk, and on the Chairman of the County Commissioners of said County, twenty days, at least, before the fifteenth day of February next, and to be published previous to said fifteenth day in each newspaper printed in said county, that all persons interested, may then appear, and show cause, if any they have, why the Prayer of said Petition should not be granted.

Sent down for concurrence.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in General Court assembled, A. D., 1848 :

THE undersigned, inhabitants of the town of Stoughton and others, would humbly represent to your honorable body, that by an alteration in the now established line between the towns of Stoughton and Randolph it would be to the advantage and convenience of many of the inhabitants of said towns; by such an alteration it would annex to the town of Stoughton from one hundred to one hundred and fifty acres of land from the town of Randolph, which would be beneficial to many of the inhabitants of both towns ; as there has been located and made two new public roads from the main road in Stoughton leading from Boston to New Bedford, to the Fall River Railroad depot in Randolph, called the East Stoughton depot, as there would be a prospect if annexed to Stoughton of persons building on said lands ; as the same is now situated there would be no advantage of schooling to such citizens as might settle thereon : said alterations prayed for by your petitioners are as follows—commencing at a certain point on the old established line between said towns by lands of Isaac G. Blanchard of Stoughton and Simeon Linfield of Randolph, fifty three rods and twenty links from a stone monument erected as a dividing line between said towns by the road near Isaac Smith's dwelling House in Stoughton—thence turning and running S. seventy two degrees, forty five minutes, E. about sixty eight rods on the dividing line of land of I. G. Blanchard of Stoughton, and Simeon Linfield of Randolph, through land of the heirs of Joel Briggs, deceased, to a certain point by the wall dividing the ladns of said heirs and Isaac Smith—from thence running S forty seven degrees East one hundred and forty rods on the dividing line of lands of said heirs and Isaac Smith and I G Blanchard of Stoughton and Samuel Linfield and John Linfield of Randolph, until it comes to the centre of the Fall River Railroad track—from thence one hundred and seventy one rods on the Fall River Railroad track, a southerly course, to where it comes to and intersects the old established line between said towns where it crosses the Fall River Railroad track. Your petitioners would humbly pray that all the lands included in the above described boundaries may be taken from the town of Randolph and annexed to the town of Stoughton.

ISAAC G BLANCHARD, and others.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

In Senate, Jan. 22d, 1848.

ON the Petition aforesaid, Ordered, That the Petitioners cause an attested copy of their Petition, with this order thereon, to be served on the Town Clerks of Randolph and Stoughton, and to be published in the Norfolk Democrat and Quincy Patriot, the said services to be fourteen days and the last of said publications to be seven days, at least, before the second Monday of February next, that all persons interested may then appear, and shew cause, if any they have why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in General Court assembled :

YOUR Petitioners, the Old Colony Railroad Corporation, respectfully pray that they may be authorized to locate and construct a Branch railroad in Quincy, in said Commonwealth, commencing at a certain point on the Old Colony Railroad on the southerly side of Neponset river and near the point where the Quincy Turnpike crosses said railroad, near said river, thence running westerly across the marshes and through or near a certain hill, called Mount Hope, to the Granite Railroad, a distance of about one and an eighth miles, with the right to connect with said Granite Railroad and to make arrangements by lease, purchase or otherwise, for the use of the same, and to make any other short branches or turn-outs in said Quincy which may be requisite to bring the granite business upon their line.

And your Petitioners further ask for authority to take and hold such land on each side of their railroad as shall be necessary or convenient to enable them to lay down a double track between the city of Boston and their junction with the Fall River Railroad in Braintree ; also, that they may be authorized to make a short branch in Dorchester, in said Commonwealth, commencing south of Harrison Square to connect their line with deep water at Commercial Point. And as in duty bound your Petitioners will ever pray,

SARSAPARILLA

AND

WILD CHERRY BITTERS.

THIS new and valuable extract of SARSAPARILLA and WILD CHERRY has been used with great success for the permanent removal of all such diseases as take their rise from an impure state of the blood ; it promotes a healthy action of the Liver—strengthens the Nerves, and at once secures

HEALTH AND VIGOR

to the whole system. In all cases of

JAUNDICE, INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA, LOSS OF APPETITE, HABITUAL COSTIVENESS, SCROFULA, HEADACHE, LANGUOR,

and that

DEPRESSION OF SPIRITS,

which is so common a complaint in the SPRING AND SUMMER

season of the year, this Medicine has not its equal—and a single trial will convince the most incredulous of its peculiar virtues.

For furthor particulars the reader is referred to pamphlets which will be furnished by the Agents, showing the estimation which this valuable Medicine is held by those who have used it.

☞ CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC. ☜

Be particular and ask for Doct. Wood's Sarsaparilla Wild Cherry Bitters, and receive no other. This is the first preparation of these articles combined, ever offered to the public, and the great success attending its use has induced the unprincipled to counterfeit and imitate. As a preventive, see that the bottles have the words "Dr. Wood's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Bitters," pressed on the glass, and that each label on the bottle is signed by the proptietor, E. Thornton, Jr., New Bedford.

Friends, Patrons, AND FELLOW CITIZENS,

I wish you all a Happy New Year ! !

NOW for a little fun and nonsense. There is quite an excitement about town, among the profession, because

GEORGE B. NIGHTINGALE

has been SHOEING UP not more than half of creation, for the last eight years, with

BOOTS & SHOES.

Well, let 'em "go it." "Guess there wont be much of a shower after all," as the chap said when Noah wouldn't let him get into the ark,—calculate to keep doing so right strait along, every time. Why my dear "fellow critters," we don't mean to brag, but you undertake to take a look at OUR Boots and Shoes and the first you know you get your foot right strait in ; there you are, stuck fast ; then out comes the old pocket book with THE SHINERS ; that's just what we want, and nothing else,—much better than credit ; credit takes time to no purpose, oftentimes, and time, you know, is money. The pay down system is the only true one, after all,—the best remedy for corns and unpleasant dreams. The man that takes a pair of BOOTS or SHOES with one hand, and PULLS OUT THE CASH with the other, is independent ; like all other tubs, he stands on his own bottoms ; give me the man that shells out the stuff like a sheaf of wheat in cold weather and we'll set him on his taps in a giffy. I therefore advise all mankind, womankind, and every other kind that wears SHOE LEATHER, to CALL when they find themselves ailing about the UNDERSTANDINGS. The Doctors may tinker up the physical frame but I'll beat 'em hollow at repairing Damaged Soles (with the best material for such cases.)

P. S. Needn't be particular about knocking when you wish to come in ; never mind for a little mud as we have it in abundance. Brooms are plenty and cheap for the tin.

With the money you can buy
Boots, Caps, Shoes—come and try ;
Findings, also, made to use
For to make good Boots or Shoes.

When your Shoes are full of holes,
Or should need a pair of Soles,
I can mend them if you will
Just call in and pay the bill.

For the cure of Coughs, Colds, and Diseases of the Lungs !

ANOTHER evidence of the benefits derived from the use of this invaluable Medicine :

Boston, Nov. 1, 1847.

Messrs. Otis, Broaders & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen—Please send me by Expresss six dozen more of the "Samaritan Balm." Its virtues are fully established in our neighborhood, and I do not hesitate to say that the sale of it has been greater than any new medicine I ever attempted to introduce. Of its benefits I can speak from actual experience, as being decidedly the best remedy for colds and diseases of the Lungs I ever tried. Last winter I was sorely afflicted with an attack of the "Bronchitis," when the good lady whose invention it is kindly prepared me a bottle which has completely cured me ; and from the benefits I myself have personally derived from its use, I feel grateful that she has been prevailed upon to give so valuable a medicine to the world. Notwithstanding she has done it without any wish to profit by it in a pecuniar, point of view, I hope and trust she will reap a rich reward for her goodness towards suffering humanity. Yours, truly, D. BUGBEE.

Pleasant Residence for Sale.

THE subscriber offers for sale his former residence, consisting of a country Cottage Dwelling-house, about one acre of excellent Land, with convenient Out-Buildings, and a never-failing Well of Water. Said house is thirty four feet square, contains eight rooms, and has been built but a few years, of the best materials. Upon the premises is a young Orchard of about seventy trees of the different varieties of fruits, selected with especial care, very thrifty, and in good bearing order. This place is quite pleasantly located on Granite Street, Quincy, and within three minutes walk of the Railroad Depot.

It will be sold at a bargain, and the payments made easy.

For further information apply to EDWARD HALL.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

VIEW OF BOSTON COMMON.

Written a long time ago by F. M. ADLINGTON, then a Boston boy.

I sat me on the *wishing stone
And gazed upon the scenery round ;
'Twas early day and I alone
Sweet solitude delightful found.

I gazed upon the steeple† tall,
That lifts its towering head on high ;
The firm built fabric tap'ring small
A pillar seem'd to prop the sky.

The stately dwellings wealth had raised
Next met my view, and thus I said
Tho' high by human pride appraised
Your beauties all must fade.

Tho' firm your fix'd foundations stand
And seem at time to mock,
The house that's built upon the sand
Cannot the floods of heaven withstand,
Like that upon the rock.

Each lofty tree whose spreading boughs
A cooling shade afford,
Its great creator's power avows
And owns its sovreign Lord.

The smoothe green plain, the distant hills,
My father's goodness prove ;
And my warm heart with pleasure fills—
With gratitude and love.

On this still morn the waveless stream
Now meets my roving eye,—
The mirror to each starry beam
That sparkles from the sky.

And now the burial ground appears—
There rest in silent peace the dead ;
How often in my infant years
I've shun'd the mournful place with dread.

There lie the relicks of my friends,
Their coverlid the grassy sod ;
There, dust with dust incorporate blends,
The spirits rise to meet their God.

Now comes the glorious light of heaven,
Sol's radient cart impetuous driven,
High o'er the flitting clouds ;
On yonder glittering vane behold
His burning light, where thinest gold
A baser substance shrouds

'Tis like that kind of charity
Which bad men use from policy,
To shield them from disgrace ;
'Tis like a whited sepulchre,
Where all without looks fair and pure,
While all within is base.

Now, as to gaze I turn me round,
An ancient dwelling meets my view ;
There Hancock dwelt, the statesman sound,
The patriot to his country true.

And now the State House's dome I see,
And see it with a freeman's pride ;
There stands the proof that I am free,
For there our chosen men decide

On what is just, and fit, and good,
To benefit the Commonwealth.
From my infantile days 't has stood
A monument of freedom's health.

Ye honored halls where Gray Beards join,
To guard what youthful courage gains ;
Bright may your lamps of honor shine,
'Till earth from its foundation wanes.

* A large rock on the high land of the Common, long since removed. The school-boys were in the habit of dancing around it, ascending to the top and wishing, and sometimes their wishes would be gratified—hence its name.

† Park Street Church,—then being finished.

BENEVOLENCE.

It is a little thing to give
A cup of water to the poor—
Or spare a morsel to relieve
A famished stranger at the door,
And yet these gifts rich blessings may
Pour on our heads ere life shall close,
And guide thro' earth's dark, devious way,
If multiplied should be our woes.

LIBERTY.

Freedom is
The brilliant gift of heaven, 'tis reason's self,
The kin of Deity.

ANECDOTES.

A worthy deacon in Vermont, recently, went to the store with his jug for some wine for the communion, and instead of calling for wine asked for "a little more of that oil." The store keeper filled the jug with oil, and no mistake, and the oil went upon the communion table and was partaken of by the church—no one wishing at that peculiar time to make the discovery known.

"You parley voo frongsay?" said a French fruit vender to a Yankee sailor who was perambulating the streets of Havre. "You parley voo de kiscade de plump into the mud?" replied Jack, as he planted a "feeler" between the two eyes of the Frenchman.

A Dutchman was relating his marvellous escape when thirteen of his companions were drowned by the upsetting of a boat, and he alone was saved "How did you escape?" asked one. "I tid not go in de pond," was the placid answer.

A man being asked if he would like to live forever, replied, that considering the state of the times, the cheating propensities of man, and the weakness of the Government he would not care to live more than half of it!

"I'm glad this coffee don't owe me anything," said a financier at his breakfast. "Why so?" inquired his wife. "Cause I don't believe it would ever settle," he replied.

GRAEFENBERG COMPANY'S OFFICE,

50 Broadway, New York, September 24th, 1847.

The very great increase of the GRAEFENBERG COMPANY'S business in New England, has rendered it necessary to re-organize the General Agency there. This is therefore to certify, that the NEW ENGLAND BRANCH OF THE GRAEFENBERG COMPANY, is now established at No. 154 Washington street, Boston, and that Mr. Edwin C. Barnes is duly appointed Secretary of said Branch; and that he is authorized to establish Local Depots, and to grant rights to vend the company's Medicines. Every Agent must have a certificate with the seal of the Company thereunto, signed by its Secretary and countersigned by the aforesaid Branch Secretary. No one is authorized to sell the Company's Medicines without such certificate. EDWARD BARTON, Secretary.

GRAEFENBERG MEDICINES.

The undersigned is fully prepared to establish a GRAEFENBERG DEPOT in all places of proper size in New England (except the State of Connecticut and that portion of Vermont west of the Green Mountains,) and also in the British Provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. Immediate application should be made either personally or by letter. As there will ordinarily be but one Depot in a town or village, the Agency will be very valuable.

The leading article to which public attention is invited is the GRAEFENBERG VEGETABLE PILLS, of which 30,000 boxes are sold each and every week. The following complaints yield with certainty to their power: Asthma, Bilious Complaints, Catarrh, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Erysipelas, Imperfect Digestion, Fluor Albus, Green Sickness, Heartburn, Headache, Jaundice, Liver Complaints, Rheumatism, and various diseases of the Stomach. In all CHRONIC COMPLAINTS the most implicit reliance may be placed upon them. Price 25 cents a box.

The names of the other Medicines are as follows:

THE CHILDREN'S PANACEA.

For summer complaints, dysentery, and all other affections of the stomach and bowels, it is infallible. Price 50 cents a bottle.

THE GRAEFENBERG SARSAPARILLA COMPOUND,

Warranted to make two quarts superior to any in the world. Price one dollar a bottle.

THE GREEN MOUNTAIN VEGETABLE OINTMENT.

Wherever inflammation exists, this ointment is a positive and speedy cure. Price 25 and 50 cents a box.

THE GRAEFENBERG EYE LOTION.

For disorders of the Eyes this Lotion has no equal. For violent inflammation, weakness, or foreign substances in the eyes, it is an unfailing remedy. Price 25 cents per bottle, with full directions.

THE GRAEFENBERG HEALTH BITTERS.

Sovereign to build up the enervated system, to restore the appetite and clear the skin. Price 25 cents a package.

THE CONSUMPTIVE'S BALM.

This most extraordinary article is infallible, positively, in Consumption, Bronchitis, and Bleeding at the Lungs. It is only sent as ordered at $5 the quart. Consumptives may be sure of finding in this article that which will not disappoint their hopes.

The Graefenberg Gazette, published by the Company for gratuitous distribution, may be had on application to any one of their numerous Agents.

MISCELLANY.

AUNT LAURA'S ROOM.

A few years ago I accepted an invitation to visit a young friend with whom I had become intimate at school, and who lived in a part of the country several hundred miles from where I resided. There was going to be a grand musical festival in the cathedral town near where her family resided, and they were anxious that I should arrive in time to be thoroughly rested before it took place, circumstances, however, prevented my reaching them till the very evening before the commencement of the festival; and though I was greeted with the warmest welcome, yet I was a good deal annoyed to find that my letter had not been received. They had naturally concluded that there was no probability of my making my appearance among them; and from the numerous party assembled, and the whisperings that I perceived going on between my friend Lucy Manners and her mother, I inferred that my accommodation for the night was not likely to be effected without inconvenience. I expressed my regret, but Mrs. Manners assured me that I should have her daughter's room, where I should be very comfortable; and Lucy said she and Anna would have no objection in the world to sleep in Aunt Laura's room.

'But why not put me there?' I inquired, 'and leave you possession of your own room? Is it haunted?' I added, seeing a look that I could not very well interpret, exchanged between them.

'Oh dear, no!' was the reply; 'but it is such a very gloomy place, we are not in the habit of putting strangers there.'

'If that is all,' I said, 'I am so tired it will make very little difference where I am shut up for the night, as I shall soon be in a sound sleep; and I suppose I may have a candle in the morning, if it is too dark to see to dress there without one?'

Lucy volunteered to be my companion during the night, as she said she thought I might feel rather nervous alone; and when the party deparated, about an hour after my arrival, we took our course up and down several flights of stairs and through some gloomy passages, till we entered the door of a large apartment, and my first exclamation was, 'What a very strange room.'

The floor was covered with black cloth, and the walls were hung with the same material; the window curtains were of black velvet, and the drapery of the bed was of a similar description; while the canopy was surmounted with bunches of sable plumes, which noded in the night breeze as we entered, for the window had been left open to make the fire burn up more quickly.

The counterpane was of black velvet, with a broad white border exactly resembling a pall, and the rest of the furniture was of the most sable hue.

'Poor Aunt Laura spent several years in this room,' said Lucy; 'and if you are not too tired I will tell you why, whilst we are curling our hair,'

So after we had seated ourselves by the blazing fire, I began by saying, 'I should have thought that melancholy looking gentleman had been the occupant of this room;" and I pointed to a small picture over the fire place of a very handsome, but extremely wretched-looking young man, who was leaning against a tree and gazing upon a river flowing before him, with what I thought a misanthropical and bitter look.

Lucy said that picture was not placed there in her aunt's days; and then I asked if her aunt were an old lady when immured here.

'Just three-and-twenty,' was the reply,' when she closed that door upon the world forever; and very handsome. Mamma met

GRAEFENBERG COMPANY'S OFFICE,
50 Broadway, New York, September 24th, 1847.

The very great increase of the GRAEFENBERG COMPANY'S business in New England, has rendered it necessary to re-organize the General Agency there. This is therefore to certify, that the NEW ENGLAND BRANCH OF THE GRAEFENBERG COMPANY, is now established at No. 154 Washington street, Boston, and that Mr. Edwin C. Barnes is duly appointed Secretary of said Branch: and that he is authorized to establish Local Depots, and to grant rights to vend the company's Medicines. Every Agent must have a certificate with the seal of the Company thereunto signed by its Secretary and countersigned by the aforesaid Branch Secretary. No one is authorized to sell the Company's Medicines without such certificate. EDWARD EARTON, Secretary.

GRAEFENBERG MEDICINES.

The undersigned is fully prepared to establish a GRAEFENBERG DEPOT in all places of proper size in New England (except the State of Connecticut and that portion of Vermont west of the Green Mountains,) and also in the British Provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. Immediate application should be made either personally or by letter. As there will ordinarily be but one Depot in a town or district, the Agency will be very valuable.

The leading article to which public attention is invited is the GRAEFENBERG VEGETABLE PILLS, of which 30,000 boxes are sold each and every week. The following complaints yield with certainty to their power: Asthma, Bilious Complaints, Catarrh, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Erysipelas, Imperfect Digestion, Fluor Albus, Green Sickness, Heartburn, Headache, Jaundice, Liver Complaints, Rheumatism, and various diseases of the Stomach. In all CHRONIC COMPLAINTS the most implicit reliance may be placed upon them. Price 25 cents a box.

The names of the other Medicines are as follows:

THE CHILDREN'S PANACEA.

For summer complaints, dysentery, and all other affections of the stomach and bowels, it is infallible. Price 50 cents a bottle.

THE GRAEFENBERG SARSAPARILLA COMPOUND,

Warranted to make two quarts superior to any in the world. Price one dollar a bottle.

THE GREEN MOUNTAIN VEGETABLE OINTMENT.

Wherever inflammation exists, this ointment is a positive and speedy cure. Price 25 and 50 cents a box.

THE GRAEFENBERG EYE LOTION.

For disorders of the Eyes this Lotion has no equal. For violent inflammation, weakness, or foreign substances in the eyes it is an unfailing remedy. Price 25 cents per bottle, with full directions.

THE GRAEFENBERG HEALTH BITTERS.

Sovereign to build up the enervated system, to restore the appetite and clear the skin. Price 25 cents a package.

THE CONSUMPTIVE'S BALM.

This most extraordinary article is infallible, positively, in Consumption, Bronchitis, and Bleeding at the Lungs. It is only sent as ordered at $5 the quart. Consumptives may be sure of finding in this article that which will not disappoint their hopes.

The Graefenberg Gazette, published by the Company for gratuitous distribution, may be had on application to any one of their numerous Agents.

MISCELLANY.

AUNT LAURA'S ROOM.

A few years ago I accepted an invitation to visit a young friend with whom I had become intimate at school, and who lived in a part of the country several hundred miles from where I resided. There was going to be a grand musical festival in the cathedral town near where her family resided, and they were anxious that I should arrive in time to be thoroughly rested before it took place, circumstances, however, prevented my reaching them till the very evening before the commencement of the festival; and though I was greeted with the warmest welcome, yet I was a good deal annoyed to find that my letter had not been received. They had naturally concluded that there was no probability of my making my appearance among them; and from the numerous party assembled, and the whisperings that I perceived going on between my friend Lucy Manners and her mother, I inferred that my accommodation for the night was not likely to be effected without inconvenience. I expressed my regret, but Mrs. Manners assured me that I should have her daughter's room, where I should be very comfortable; and Lucy said she and Anna would have no objection in the world to sleep in Aunt Laura's room.

'But why not put me there?' I inquired, 'and leave you possession of your own room? Is it haunted?' I added, seeing a look that I could not very well interpret, exchanged between them.

'Oh dear, no!' was the reply; 'but it is such a very gloomy place, we are not in the habit of putting strangers there.'

'If that is all,' I said, 'I am so tired it will make very little difference where I am shut up for the night, as I shall soon be in a sound sleep; and I suppose I may have a candle in the morning, if it is too dark to see to dress there without one?'

Lucy volunteered to be my companion during the night, as she said she thought I might feel rather nervous alone; and when the party deparated, about an hour after my arrival, we took our course up and down several flights of stairs and through some gloomy passages, till we entered the door of a large apartment, and my first exclamation was, 'What a very strange room.'

The floor was covered with black cloth, and the walls were hung with the same material; the window curtains were of black velvet, and the drapery of the bed was of a similar description; while the canopy was surmounted with bunches of sable plumes, which noded in the night breeze as we entered, for the window had been left open to make the fire burn up more quickly.

The counterpane was of black velvet, with a broad white border exactly resembling a pall, and the rest of the furniture was of the most sable hue.

'Poor Aunt Laura spent several years in this room,' said Lucy; 'and if you are not too tired I will tell you why, whilst we are curling our hair,'

So after we had seated ourselves by the blazing fire, I began by saying, 'I should have thought that melancholy looking gentleman had been the occupant of this room;' and I pointed to a small picture over the fire place of a very handsome, but extremely wretched-looking young man, who was leaning against a tree and gazing upon a river flowing before him, with what I thought a misanthropical and bitter look.

Lucy said that picture was not placed there in her aunt's days; and then I asked if her aunt were an old lady when immured here.

'Just three-and-twenty,' was the reply,' when she closed that door upon the world forever; and very handsome. Mamma met one day with an engraving, which she said reminded her so much of what Aunt Laura was on the day of mamma's marriage. She showed it to her, and told her so. I dare say you may have seen it; it is called the 'Bridesmaid,' and a lovely thing it is.

'Aunt Laura said that day had been a very wretched one to her. But I must first tell you what an odd will grandpa made. He was so afraid lest any one should marry his daughters for money, that he left this house and estate to them jointly so long as they were single; but they were to give up all their share of it whenever they married, and were to have no right to any of the property till they became widows, when it was again to be their home if they chose it.

'Now Aunt Laura was to be married a fortnight after mamma, and it was very natural she should be sad at the idea of this place being let to strangers for nobody knew how many years, and that neither she nor her sister could occupy it again till many sorrowful scenes had been passed through; but she was always very superstitious, and when at school she and a companion had one evening stolen out to have their fortunes told by a gipsey. Her companion's doom was destined to be an early death. She had long forgotten the prediction, but that morning the account of her friend's death had reached her, and she could not banish from her mind the words which the gipsey had addressed to herself, that 'between her being a bridesmaid and a bride, the interval would be very short, but betwen the bride and the widow, shorter still.'

'She tried to fancy that the spell was broken by her having officiated once as bridesmaid, when a little girl in India, before the prediction was uttered; but it was of no use, and she became unhappy. She was distressed, too, when she recollected how little she knew of Mr. Ashbourne, whom she should so soon promise to 'love, honor, and obey;' and she felt alarmed lest the cloud she so often saw on his brow should become settled there, and that she might not always be able to make him cheerful as she could at present.

'Neither mamma, nor my other aunts, nor their husbands, particularly liked Mr. Ashbourne, though there was nothing that could positively be said against him; but there was a moodiness and abstraction that never left him, except in Aunt Laura's presence. To others he always appeared as in that picture you were looking at just now.

'The marriage took place; but about a week after Mr. Ashbourne was taken ill at Harrowgate, where they had just arrived; and in less than another week Aunt Laura was a widow, and again the sole inhabitant of this house. Of course, her sisters came to see her, but she did not wish them to remain; and she very soon had this room and dressing-room fitted up as you now see, and never again left them.

'Mamma could not help fearing her mind was affected from her conduct in this respect, as well as from the strange account she gave of Mr. Ashbourne's becoming ill; nor was it for some years that this was explained satisfactorily. She said that, before their marriage Mr. Ashbourne had told her he thought no man could ever forgive his wife if he found she had any secrets which she did not impart to him; and so fearful was she of incurring his displeasure, that she had told him a great number of details, respecting the family affairs of her brothers-in-law, lest he should think she had wilfully kept him in the dark—so many, indeed, that she often had an uneasy feeling lest some unpleasant consequences should arise from her communicativeness.

'They had arrived in the evening at Harrowgate, and were quietly taking tea, and arraging their future tour, when the waiter entered and asked Mr. Ashbourne if his his name were Gifford, as a gentleman was inquiring for some one of that name. A negative answer was, of course, given, and the door closed, when Aunt Laura remarked—

'Gifford is very like Clifford.'

'Mr. Ashbourne's eyes actually flashed fire as he answered—

'What makes you think of Clifford?'

'Only,' she said, 'as it once happened to be my name it reminded me of it.'

'He rose and walked about the room in violent agitatien.

'When was this Laura?' said he. 'Speak, tell me! No more reserve, if you please, madam.'

She tried to calm him, saying, that as she was only two years old when her father changed his name to Fitzgerald, it really was a circumstance which rarely crossed her mind.

But he was not to be pacified. After all the pains he had been at to prevent any disclosures taking place after their marriage, to have the most hateful name in existence represented to him as once borne by her! She became terrified at his increasing violence.

'And your little brother—was he, too, a Clifford,'

She had to pause, for she said it had never occurred to her to think what his second name was; but it must have been Clifford, for she was only a baby when he died at school in England.

She described her husband as working himself up to perfect madness, and she was little short of it from grief at having so offended him, and never doubting that she had, indeed, been very wrong in never having told him. Before morning he was in a high fever. Medical assistance was called in, but in vain; it settled on the brain, and a few days terminated his wretched life.

'Aunt Laura never ceased to reproach herself as his murderer, and shut herself up here in hopeless dejection. After she had been in this wretched, voluntary captivity for six years, mamma had to come here, as we lost our dear father; and Aunt Laura gradually become interested in us little things, and her health and spirits improved as she brooded less intently over the melancholy past.

'When I was old enough to learn to write, she took great pains in teaching me, and one day she asked mamma if there was any desk about the house that I could be allowed to use There was a desk of Mr. Ashbourne's, which mamma thought was Aunt Laura's, and she brought it to her; it proved to be full of writings of one kind or other, and amongst them a manuscript, entitled, 'Skeich of my Miserable Life.'

'It began by describing the indulgence of his mother during his early childhood, his impetuosity of temper, and her encouragement to his always acting from the impulse of the moment, and never suffering him to be thwarted. He entered school a perfect tyrant; the timid feared him, and the desperate spirits rallied round him as a leader in everything daring or forbidden.

'He was about thirteen when the event occurred which gave a color to the whole of his future life.

'A river skirted one side of a large field, where they were often allowed to play; they were prohibited on any account whatever to bathe, except when a teacher was with them. And one winter's afternoon, when the boys was left to themselves, a timid little fellow, who had just come to school, was heard to say, that he wondered any one should think of forbidding it, as he should suppose no boy durst venture in for fear of getting out of his depth.

'This was enough for Ashbourne. Fear, he declared, was a word unknown to Hartford School; go into the water the little fellow should, therefore he might as well do it with a good grace.

'In vain the child protested his utter inability to swim, his dread of the cold, for he was still shivering from the change which he had experienced in coming to our climate from a hot one. All took Ashbourne's part against the stranger; they led him to an overhanging bank, told him he might have ten minutes to deliberate whether he would do it like a man or a criminal. His tears and entreaties but steeled their hearts the more against the cowardly spirit he evinced. Meanwhile the elder boys, all eager to show their bravery, were contending who should give the push, which they foresaw would be necessary to make him leave the bank.

'They drew lots upon this point; it fell upon Ashbourne; the ten minutes expired; there was a plunge and stifled shriek! The boys crowded to the bank, but nothing was to be seen.

'Ashbourne now first experienced the reality of such a thing as fear; he plunged into the water, but in vain; an hour passed, and still no trace of their little companion; in a few minutes they would be summoned to return to the house, and how were they to account for his absence?

'They joined hands and took a solemn oath never to betray Ashbourne, but to say they last saw Clifford (for you must already have guessed their unhappy victim to have been my little uncle) on the bank, whence he had either fallen or thrown himself into the water.

'Ashbourne then again plunged into the water, the alarm was given, and every assistance was procured as soon as possible. Ashbourne's exertions were prodigious; and after the search was abandoned he received from his master and teachers the most distinguished eulogiums upon his noble conduct, in risking his own life for that of a fellow creature almost a stranger to him, while pity for the sufferer seemed almost lost in the censures heaped upon him for his stupidity, carelessness, or disobedience, for they were at a loss to which to attribute his going into the water.

'Most of the neighboring gentry invited Ashbourne to their houses, and loaded him with every expression of esteem, and many of them with more substantial gifts; and his evident reluctance to speak of the occurrence was attributed to an amiable modesty, which shrinks from hearing its own praises.

'An account of his heroism was also sent to grandpapa, with the tidings of the very wilful way by which his son met with his death; for, of course, to the world it was necessary to make it appear that the boys were so well watched that no accident could happen to them except by their own choice.

'Grandpapa sent him a valuable ring as a token of gratitude, which, with other trinkets, was in the desk.

'Years, that seemed as if made of leaden moments, said the manuscript, had dragged themselves at last to a close, yet on looking back it seemed as if it were but the hour before that the trembling child had said—'You will be afraid to think of this on your death bed.'

'Life had had for him not one moment of enjoyment; the voice of conscience had never been for a moment hushed—sleeping or waking he saw the image of his drowned schoolfellow; and by every stranger he met he expected to hear his guilt proclaimed.

'No one, so far as it can be ascertained, ever broke his oath, and whether any of them have been haunted by the same terrors, as feeling that they were partakers in the crime, we, perhaps, shall never know in this world.'

'And your aunt,' I inquired, 'what effect had this disclosure upon her.'

'Oh, to her it was a most dreadful discovery,' said Lucy, 'to find she had actually been the wife of her brother's murderer! She lingered but a very short time; and my last recollection of her is the look of intense agony with which she was reading the shocking account. She was never well enough afterwards to allow any of us to be in the room with her; and mamma never likes to speak of her last days.'

Lucy and I sat up very late talking over the melancholy events connected with 'Aunt Laura's Room.' Nor did we say 'Good Night' until we had come to the decision that, although Mr. Ashbourne had certainly very sufficient reasons for wishing to know every particular of family history with which his wife could be connected, yet that we wondered she had not benefitted by his example, and inquired whether there were any reasons on his part, which, if disclosed at a subsequent period, might forever destroy that happiness to which she so confidently looked forward.

We resolved, however, that the warning should not be lost on ourselves.

KEEP AWAY.

The only safe course for a young man who would retain his virtue and his correct principles, is to keep away from temptation. How many have fallen who merely ventured to look at vice in her gaudy colors? Her temptation was too strong for them to resist. They partook of the fatal glass—snatched the gilded treasure, or gave themselves up to uncleanness.

None are secure who run in the way of sin—who can see how near they can venture to the threshold of vice, without entangling their feet in the net of the adversary.

Have you never heard the story of a gentleman who advertised for a coachman? If not, we will repeat it. Three applicants were admitted into his room. He pointed out to them a precipice, remarking—How near the edge of this can you drive me, without any danger of an upset?

The applicant replied—Within a hair's breadth.

How near can you drive me? inquired the gentleman, of a second applicant.

Within a hair's breadth, he replied.

As the third applicant was about leaving the room, supposing he had no chance of competing with the other two, the gentleman stopped him.

Let me hear what you have to say, said he.

Why, sir, I cannot compete with either of these; if I were to drive you, I would keep as far off as I possibly could.

You are the man for me, said the gentleman and he engaged him immediately.

In regard to vice, he only is safe who keeps away from temptation. Those who venture near, are often upset and destroyed. We can all point to individuals who are lost to virtue, who, when they took the first wrong step, intended never to take another. It was the voice of a pretended friend, it may be, which urged them on, only for once, but it proved their destruction.

Ye who are now safe—whose hearts are uncontaminated—listen to the voice of wisdom, and go not where there are strong allurements to vice. Keep away from the gambling table, the grog-shop, and the midnight party. Keep as far off as possible, and a life of integrity and virtue will assuredly be yours.

THE POWER OF AVARICE.

The following narrative refers to the senior partner in the great New York house which lately became bankrupt:—

In early life, Mr. Prime was an ostler, and was quite famous for the cleverness with which he handled the currycomb. He married a Miss ——, the offspring of some successful worshipper of the golden idol, and began to curry men instead of horses. When he had got under way and scraped together a few thousands, he actually got an invitation to a dinner party, where there were perhaps two or three gentlemen; though, as the dinner was given by a New York financier, of course the conversation was occupied with the all-absorbing topic of money making. Our hero was not a listener merely. He eagerly entered into the conversation, and closed some very shrewed remarks by observing, 'If I could borrow $5,000,I would double it in six months, and return the principal, with seven per cent interest.'

'What security can you give?' asked one of the party, a planter from Charleston.

'The word of an honest man,' said the adventurer. 'I have none other to offer at present.'

'You shall have the money,' said the planter.

Mr. Prime realized as he expected, and returned the loan. Years passed on, and the 'financial genius' earned his thousands and hundreds of thousands. He served his master faithfully, and verily he did not go without his reward. But the planter, in the mean time, had met with sad reverses. He was a poor man. He was on the verge of ruin in a worldly point of view. To save the remnant of his estate, he came to New York in order to make an effort to raise some money. He thought of Mr. P. He waited on the great New York broker. He asked a loan of $3,000; it would save him from utter destruction.

'What security?' demanded the Christian Shylock.

'Really, Mr. Prime, I must answer as you answered me. I have nothing to give but the word of an honest man.'

'Oh, that be d——d!' said the righteous banker. 'That won't go current in Wall st.'

The rich man retired from his business with a million, and 'died as a fool dieth,' committing suicide under the delusion that he was a poor man. Amid all his wealth, horrid images of want and famine haunted the man of gold.

A GENTLE REPROOF.

One day as Zachariah Hodgson was going to his daily avocations after breakfast, he purchased a fine large codfish, and sent it home, with directions to his wife to have it cooked for dinner. As no particular mode of cooking it was prescribed, the good woman well knew that, whether she boiled it or made it into a chowder, her husband would scold her when he came home. But she resolved to please him once, if possible, and therefore cooked portions of it in several different ways. She, also, with some little difficulty, procured an amphibious animal from a brook back of the house, and plumped it into the pot. In due time her husband came home; some covered dishes were placed on the table, and with a frowning, fault-finding look, the moody man commenced the conversation:

'Well, wife, did you get the fish I bought?'

'Yes, my dear.'

'I should like to know how you have cooked it. I will bet anything that you have spoiled it for my eating. [Taking off the cover.] I thought so. What in creation possessed you to fry it! I would as lief eat a boiled frog.'

'Why, my dear, I thought you loved it best fried.'

'You didn't think any such thing. You knew better—I never loved fried fish—why didn't you boil it?'

'My dear, the last time we had fresh fish, you know I boiled it, and you said you liked it best fried. But I have boiled some also.'

So saying, she lifted a cover, and lo! the shoulders of the cod nicely boiled, were neatly deposited in a dish, a sight of which would have made an epicure rejoice, but which only added to the ill-nature of her husband. Boiled fish! chips and porridge! If you had not been one of the most stupid of womankind, you would have made it into a chowder!'

His patient wife, with a smile, immediately placed a tureen before him containing an excellent chowder.

'My dear,' said she, 'I was resolved to please you. There is your favorite dish.'

'Favorite dish, indeed,' grumbled the discomfitted husband, 'I dare say it is an unpalatable wishy-washy mess. I would rather have a boiled frog than the whole of it.'

This was a common expression of his, and had been anticipated by his wife, who, as soon as the preference was expressed, uncovered a large dish near her husband, and there was a large bull-frog, of portentous dimensions, and pugnacious aspect stretched out at full length! Zachariah sprung from his chair, not a little frightened at the unexpected apparition.

'My dear,' said his wife, in a kind, entreating tone, 'I hope you will at length be able to make a dinner.'

Zachariah could not stand this. His surly mood was finally overcome, and he burst into a hearty laugh. He acknowledged that his wife was right and that he was wrong; and declared that she should never again have occasion to read him another lesson; and he was as good as his word.

A Woman with ten Husbands. There is now living in one of the chief towns of New Hampshire, a woman who has had ten husbands, all of whom are now living upon the best terms with her and each other. The woman is highly respected among her neighbors, who see nothing to censure, but much to approve. Strange as it may appear, an action for bigamy could not be sustained against her.

Several maiden ladies on reading the above instance of human depravity, lifted up their hands in pious horror, and gave utterance to various uncharitable invectives upon the head of the poor wife of half a score of husbands. Their jawing tackle was brought to sudden stand still, when they were informed that the lady referred to, was a Mrs. Husband, who lived very religiously and lawfully with Mr. Husband and nine little Husbands.

Absence of Mind. The following instances of absence of mind, actually occurred in Boston:

A lady called at a store in Hanover street, to make some purchases, and after remaining a short time, departed, taking with her an old broom, instead of her umbrella, and did not discover her mistake until she attempted to open it. She immediately returned and rectified the error, not a little mortified at the event.

A gentleman visiting a friend's house for the first time, after passing a very pleasant evening, rose to depart, taking with him a lighted lamp. On reaching the front steps, he very politely bid the company good night, when some of the inmates requested him to be good enough to leave the lamp. He probably thought he was going to bed.

TIGHT LACING AND RED NOSES. If a foolish girl, by dint of busk and bones, and squeezing and bracing, secures the conventional beauty of a wasp-waist, she is tolerably certain to gain an addition which she by no means bargained for, namely, a red nose, which in numberless instances, is produced by no other cause than the unnatural girth obstructing circulation, and causing stagnation of the blood, in that prominent and important feature. Often in assemblages of the fair, may be seen noses, faultless in form, but tinged with the abhorred hue, to which washes and cosmetics have been applied in wild despair; but alas, in vain! If the lovely owners could have known the cause, how speedily the effect would have vanished; for, surely, the most perverse admirer of a distorted spine and compressed lungs, would deem the acquirement of a dram drinker's nose too heavy a condition to be complied with.

HOW TO BE HAPPY. Do all the good you can. Whenever you hear of a poor widow, an orphan child, or aged man who is afflicted, pay that individual a visit, Do not hoard up all you earn; give a certain portion to the poor. Never get angry. If you are slandered or imposed upon, better suffer a little than retaliate and use harsh language. Be not proud or selfish. Think no more highly of yourself and your talents than you do of the capacities of others. Pay all you owe. Keep out of debt. Get not entangled in the meshes of law, avoid it as the sure way to ruin. Shun vicious pursuits and unprincipled associates. Honor the Sabbath, serve God and be devoted to truth and religion. Finally take some useful paper, pay for it in advance, and read it attentively; and our word for it, you will be happy. Peace and contentment will smile in your path, joy dance on your countenance, and every lane of life before you will be fraught with blessings rich and abundant.

GOOD MANNERS. Good manners are the blossom of good sense, and, may be added, of good feeling too; for, if the law of kindness be written in the heart, it will lead to that disinterestedness in little as well as great things—that desire to oblige, and attention to the gratification of others, which is the foundation of good manners.

FOREIGN. The Acadia arrived at Nantasket Rhoads on Monday night. The news is somewhat interesting. In England, money is easier. The Cotton market had been fluctuating, but had eventually declined. Flour and Indian corn had fallen. The manufacturing districts were more lively. Twenty-six new failures are reported as having occurred in England and in other parts of Europe, and in Calcutta and Bombay since the first of January.

The state of Ireland has improved so far as the suppression of outrages is concerned. The distress in the southern and western districts of Ireland is becoming more general and severe.

The health of the Queen of Spain is very feeble.

The British war steamer, Avenger, was wrecked on the north cost of Africa, December 20th, 270 persons on board were lost, with the exception of five.

LOUISIANA SENATOR. The Louisiana Legislature have made choice of Hon. Pierre Soule to represent that State in the United States Senate, for six years from the 4th of March, 1849, when Mr. Johnson's term will expire.

SHERIFF OF NORFOLK COUNTY. Thomas Adams, City Marshal of Roxbury, has been appointed Sheriff of this County, from the 8th inst, in place of J. N. E. Mann, of Dedham, who declines a reappointment.

STILL ANOTHER FIRE. A barn belonging to Mr. Job Faxon, of this town, was fired by an incendiary on Monday evening last, and entirely destroyed, together with about seven tons of hay, a wagon, pung, etc. The barn, we learn, was insured for one hundred dollars—loss estimated at about four hundred.

CONGRESS. The Senate is still engaged in discusing the ten regiment bill, and but very little other business has been transacted. The Vice President has announced his intention of being absent for some time, and Mr. Atcheson has been appointed President pro tem. The House has not yet disposed of the President's Message.

HARVARD UNIVERSITY. The Board of Overseers held a meetiner in the Senate Chamber on Thursday afternoon, His Excellency Governor Briggs, in the chair. The Board concurred in the election of Mr. Lewis Agassiz as professor of Geology, and quite a number of other appointments.

Rev. William A. Stearns was elected to fill the vacancy in the Board occasioned by the death of Rev. Dr. Codman.

FROM THE BRAZOS. A steamer arrived at New Orleans from the Brazos, which place she left on the 20th of January. A train of pack mules was captured on the 23d by a party of forty Mexicans, but the mules were all recovered by a party of six Americans who went in pursuit.

There is nothing later from the city of Mexico. At the last dates from Vera Cruz, an expedition was about to be fitted out against Oriziba, a town some sixty miles from Vera Cruz, to be commanded by Col. Bankhead. It was to be accompanied by a battery of mounted marine artillery, composed of a detachment of sailors, who promised themselves great delight from their cruise on shore.

BOYS' AND GIRLS' MAGAZINE. Number two of this little work, edited by "Mark Forrester", has been received. Its mechanical appearance is quite neat, and, with its illustrations, prepossessing. It furnishes a large amount of useful reading for the young, in a cheap form. Terms, one dollar per year. Bradbury & Guild, Boston, publishers.

A WILD ANIMAL SUCKLED BY A WOMAN. Some time since, a Bengal tigress belonging to Raymond & Warring's Menagerie, gave birth to a cub the male parent of which was a lion. The little cross-breed is alive and growing finely, a woman in New York city, who had lost her child, having taken it to raise at her breast! The step-mother to the half-lion and half-tiger, keeps her charge in a bureau drawer; and in the morning when her husband gets out of bed, he takes the little fellow out and places it in bed with his wife to suckle. This curious cross-breed is a male, its head and forepartes being a complete lion, while its body is striped and bears full resemblance to the tiger.

ADVERTISING. To many persons it is a mystery how certain dealers can sell their goods at prices so much less than their neighbors. A little inquiry would solve the mystery. For instance, one establishment requires ten dollars per day to pay the current expenses; if the sales amount to one hundred dollars per day, the profits, to prevent a losing business, must be equal to ten per cent. on the sales. Another establishment, in consequence of a judicious system of advertising, is crowded with customers "from early morn to dewey eve." Instead of one hundred dollars per day, the sales are ten times that amount; so that a profit of three per cent. on the sales would amply defray the expenses of the establishment and enrich the proprietors. Liberal fortunes have been the result of liberal advertising.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in General Court assembled, A. D., 1848:

THE undersigned, inhabitants of the town of Stoughton and others, would humbly represent to your honorable body, that by an alteration in the now established line between the towns of Stoughton and Randolph it would be to the advantage and convenience of many of the inhabitants of said towns; by such an alteration it would annex to the town of Stoughton from one hundred to one hundred and fifty acres of land from the town of Randolph, which would be beneficial to many of the inhabitants of both towns; as there has been located and made two new public roads from the main road in Stoughton leading from Boston to New Bedford, to the Fall River Railroad depot in Randolph, called the East Stoughton depot, as there would be a prospect if annexed to Stoughton of persons building on said lands; as the same is now situated there would be no advantage of schooling to such citizens as might settle thereon: said alterations prayed for by your petitioners are as follows—commencing at a certain point on the old established line between said towns by lands of Isaac G. Blanchard of Stoughton and Simeon Linfield of Randolph, fifty three rods and twenty links from a stone monument erected as a dividing line between said towns by the road near Isaac Smith's dwelling house in Stoughton—thence turning and running S. seventy two degrees, forty five minutes, E. about sixty eight rods on the dividing line of land of I. G. Blanchard of Stoughton, and Simeon Linfield of Randolph, through land of the heirs of Joel Briggs, deceased, to a certain point by the wall dividing the ladns of said heirs and Isaac Smith—from thence running S. forty seven degrees East one hundred and forty rods on the dividing line of lands of said heirs and Isaac Smith and I G. Blanchard of Stoughton and Samuel Linfield and John Linfield of Randolph, until it comes to the centre of the Fall River Railroad track—from thence one hundred and seventy one rods on the Fall River Railroad track, a southerly course, to where it comes to and intersects the old established line between said towns where it crosses the Fall River Railroad track. Your petitioners would humbly pray that all the lands included in the above described boundaries may be taken from the town of Randolph and annexed to the town of Stoughton.

ISAAC G BLANCHARD, and others.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

IN SENATE, Jan. 22d, 1848.

ON the Petition aforesaid, Ordered, That the Petitioners cause an attested copy of their Petition, with this order thereon, to be served on the Town Clerks of Randolph and Stoughton, and to be published in the Norfolk Democrat and Quincy Patriot, the said services to be fourteen days and the last of said publications to be seven days, at least, before the second Monday of February next, that all persons interested may then appear, and shew cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in General Court assembled:

YOUR Petitioners, the Old Colony Railroad Corporation, respectfully pray that they may be authorized to locate and construct a Branch railroad in Quincy, in said Commonwealth, commencing at a certain point on the Old Colony Railroad on the southerly side of Neponset river and near the point where the Quincy Turnpike crosses said railroad, near said river, thence running westerly across the marshes and through or near a certain hill, called Mount Hope, to the Granite Railroad, a distance of about one and an eighth miles, with the right to connect with said Granite Railroad and to make arrangements by lease, purchase or otherwise, for the use of the same, and to make any other short branches or turn-outs in said Quincy which may be requisite to bring the granite business upon their line.

And your Petitioners further ask for authority to take and hold such land on each side of their railroad as shall be necessary or convenient to enable them to lay down a double track between the city of Boston and their junction with the Fall River Railroad in Braintree; also, that they may be authorized to make a short branch in Dorchester, in said Commonwealth, commencing south of Harrison Square to connect their line with deep water at Commercial Point. And as in duty bound your Petitioners will ever pray,

The Old Colony Railroad Corporation, by

E. H. DERBY, Committee.

Quincy, Oct. 23. tf

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in General Court assembled, A. D., 1848 :

THE undersigned, inhabitants of the town of Stoughton and others, would humbly represent to your honorable body, that by an alteration in the now established line between the towns of Stoughton and Randolph it would be to the advantage and convenience of many of the inhabitants of said towns ; by such an alteration it would annex to the town of Stoughton from one hundred to one hundred and fifty acres of land from the town of Randolph, which would be beneficial to many of the inhabitants of both towns ; as there has been located and made two new public roads from the main road in Stoughton leading from Boston to New Bedford, to the Fall River Railroad depot in Randolph, called the East Stoughton depot, as there would be a prospect if annexed to Stoughton of persons building on said lands ; as the same is now situated there would be no advantage of schooling to such citizens as might settle thereon : said alterations prayed for by your petitioners are as follows—commencing at a certain point on the old established line between said towns by lands of Isaac G. Blanchard of Stoughton and Simeon Linfield of Randolph, fifty three rods and twenty links from a stone monument erected as a dividing line between said towns by the road near Isaac Smith's dwelling house in Stoughton—thence turning and running S. seventy two degrees, forty five minutes, E. about sixty eight rods on the dividing line of land of I. G. Blanchard of Stoughton, and Simeon Linfield of Randolph, through land of the heirs of Joel Briggs, deceased, to a certain point by the wall dividing the ladns of said heirs and Isaac Smith—from thence running S. forty seven degrees East one hundred and forty rods on the dividing line of lands of said heirs and Isaac Smith and I G Blanchard of Stoughton and Samuel Linfield and John Linfield of Randolph, until it comes to the centre of the Fall River Railroad track—from thence,one hundred and seventy one rods on the Fall River Railroad track, a southerly course, to where it comes to and intersects the old established line between said towns where it crosses the Fall River Railroad track. Your petitioners would humbly pray that all the lands included in the above described boundaries may be taken from the town of Randolph and annexed to the town of Stoughton.

ISAAC G. BLANCHARD, and others.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

IN SENATE, Jan. 22d, 1848.

ON the Petition aforesaid, Ordered, That the Petitioners cause an attested copy of their Petition, with this order thereon, to be served on the Town Clerks of Randolph and Stoughton, and to be published in the Norfolk Democrat and Quincy Patriot, the said services to be fourteen days and the last of said publications to be seven days, at least, before the second Monday of February next, that all persons interested may then appear, and shew cause, if any they have why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. Sent down for concurrence.

To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in General Court assembled :

YOUR Petitioners, the Old Colony Railroad Corporation, respectfully pray that they may be authorized to locate and construct a Branch railroad in Quincy, in said Commonwealth, commencing at a certain point on the Old Colony Railroad on the southerly side of Neponset river and near the point where the Quincy Turnpike crosses said railroad, near said river, thence running westerly across the marshes and through or near a certain hill, called Mount Hope, to the Granite Railroad, a distance of about one and an eighth miles, with the right to connect with said Granite Railroad and to make arrangements by lease, purchase or otherwise, for the use of the same, and to make any other short branches or turn-outs in said Quincy which may be requisite to bring the granite business upon their line.

And your Petitioners further ask for authority to take and hold such land on each side of their railroad as shall be necessary or convenient to enable them to lay down a double track between the city of Boston and their junction with the Fall River Railroad in Braintree; also, that they may be authorized to make a short branch in Dorchester, in said Commonwealth, commencing south of Harrison Square to connect their line with deep water at Commercial Point. And as in duty bound your Petitioners will ever pray,

The Old Colony Railroad Corporation, by

E. H. DERBY, Committee.

Boston, Jan. 14th, 1848.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

IN SENATE, Jan 20, 1848.

ON the Petition aforesaid, Ordered, That the Petitioners cause an attested copy of their Petition with this Order thereon, to be served upon the Clerks of the City of Boston and the towns of Dorchester, Quincy, Braintree, and to be published three times in the Boston Courier and in the Quincy Patriot, five days, at least, before—and the three services to be seven days, at least, before the NINTH day of February next, that all persons interested, may then appear, and shew cause, if any they have, why the Prayer of said Petition should not be granted.

Sent down for concurrence.

Friends, Patrons,
AND
FELLOW CITIZENS,
I wish you all a Happy New Year ! !

NOW for a little fun and nonsense. There is quite an excitement about town, among the profession, because

GEORGE B. NIGHTINGALE

has been SHOEING UP not more than half of creation, for the last eight years, with

BOOTS & SHOES.

Well, let 'em "go it." "Guess there wont be much of a shower after all," as the chap said when Noah wouldn't let him get into the ark,—calculate to keep doing so right strait along, every time. Why my dear "fellow critters," we don't mean to brag, but you undertake to take a look at OUR Boots and Shoes and the first you know you get your foot right strait in ; there you are, stuck fast; then out comes the old pocket book with THE SHINERS ; that's just what we want, and nothing else,—much better than credit ; credit takes time to no purpose, oftentimes, and time, you know, is money. The pay down system is the only true one, after all,—the best remedy for corns and unpleasant dreams. The man that takes a pair of BOOTS or SHOES with one hand, and PULLS OUT THE CASH with the other, is independent ; like all other tubs, he stands on his own bottoms ; give me the man that shells out the stuff like a sheaf of wheat in cold weather and we'll set him on his taps in a giffy. I therefore advise all mankind, womankind, and every other kind that wears SHOE LEATHER, to CALL when they find themselves ailing about the UNDERSTANDINGS. The Doctors may tinker up the physical frame but I'll beat 'em hollow at repairing Damaged Soles (with the best material for such cases)

P. S. Needn't be particular about knocking when you wish to come in ; never mind for a little mud as we have it in abundance. Brooms are plenty and cheap for the tin.

With the money you can buy
Boots, Caps, Shoes—come and try ;
Findings, also, made to use
For to make good Boots or Shoes.

When your Shoes are full of holes,
Or should need a pair of Soles,
I can mend them if you will
Just call in and pay the bill.

Pleasant Residence for Sale.

THE subscriber offers for sale his former residence, consisting of a country Cottage Dwelling-house, about one acre of excellent Land, with convenient Out-Buildings, and a never-failing Well of Water. Said house is thirty four feet square, contains eight rooms, and has been built but a few years, of the best materials. Upon the premises is a young Orchard of about seventy trees of the different varieties of fruits, selected with especial care, very thrifty, and in good bearing order. This place is quite pleasantly located on Granite Street, Quincy, and within three minutes walk of the Railroad Depot.

It will be sold at a bargain, and the payments made easy.

For further information apply to House to Let.

PART of a Dwelling-house, situate in the central part of Quincy, near the Stone Meeting-house, and for several years past, occupied by Miss S. S. Marsh, partly as a dwelling and partly as a Milliner's Shop, consisting of seven rooms and in good condition.

Also—Two other chambers adjoining, lately occupied by the Quincy Temperance Society, which will be let with the same, or separately.

The house is well situated to accommodate a gentleman doing business in Quincy, or doing business in the city of Boston and wishing to reside with his family in the country, being within about twenty rods of the Depot of the Old Colony Rail Road.

Also—A new building now finishing in said Quincy, adjoining the Bookstore of C. Gill & Co., calculated for small Stores, or places of business, designed for two tenements, consisting of two rooms on the lower floor and two chambers to each tenement, being one of the best locations for business in the town of Quincy.

Application may be made at the Store of JOSIAH BRIGHAM & Co., near the premises.

Quincy, July 24. tf

For Sale,

A NEW COTTAGE HOUSE and one fourth of an acre of Land, on Washington Street, built to order, of the best material, and finished in the most thorough manner. The above is about three minutes' walk from the Old Colony Railroad Depot and is a rare chance for an investment. Price $1600 dollars.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

LINES ON THE DEATH OF MY OLD MASTER, HUBBARD OLIVER.

Farewell, my good old master,
Thy maker calls thee home;
For thee there is a better world
Where death can never come.

My faithful, good old master,
While I thy merits scan,
I feel thou hast not left behind
A kinder, better man.

Most honest in thy calling,
Most faithful to the trust;
For thee there is reserved a place
Among the truly just.

For seven years my master,
And constant to the end;
You were a father to my youth,
A kind and generous friend.

Nor can I e'er forget thee,
While I on earth remain,
And hope that whither thou art gone
Our souls may meet again.

F. M. ADLINGTON, Weymouth.

BEARDS.

On manhood, when the race was young,
The Beard in unshown beauty sprung,
And nations felt what poets sung—
Man's great and matchless majesty.

But manhood saw another sight,
When Fashion bade each luckless wight
With lather make himself a fright,
And use the keen edged cutlery.

With napkin near his glass arrayed,
Each man then drew his razor blade,
While soap and brush a lather made,
To hide the dreadful butchery.

And whiter yet that face shall grow,
When, all the glorious beard laid low,
His glass a woman's face shall show,
Shorn of its manly majesty.

The razor glides. Before it fall
Mustachio and imperial—
The stately beard and whiskers, all
The victims of its treachery.

Ah! few continue to be men,
For many even glory, when
Each day the soapy foam again
Is made their manhood's sepulchre.

IT.

The pronoun IT is a comical word,
It is sometimes amusing, it is often absurd,
It is large, it is small, it is round, it is square,
It rains, and it snows—it is foul, it is fair,
It is black, it is white—it is long, it is short,
It is every thing, almost, and then it is naught,
It is true—it's a lie, it isn't! it is!
Indeed the word it is a humbug and—QUIZ.

THE LOAFER.

I knew by the smoke that so lazily curled
From his lips 'twas a loafer I happened to meet,
And I said 'if a nuisance there be in this world,
'Tis smoking cigars in a frequented street.'
'Twas night, and the ladies were numerous around,
And in many an eye shone the glittering tear,
But the loafer puffed on and I heard not a sound,
Save the short hacking cough of each smoke smitten dear.

ANECDOTES.

'What are we to think of Adam?' asked a country preacher of a new convert.

'Nothing,' replied the latter, contemptuously.

'Nothing,' echoed the clerical wight in surprise.

'Nothing,' repeated the new convert, in a decided tone; 'cause, when he committed the original sin he thought nothing of us!'

'Boy, why don't you go to school?' 'Cause, sir, daddy is afeared that if I learns everything now, I shan't have anything to learn ven I has to go to the 'cademy.'

'Oh, dear! Mr. Foster, you jest when you say that my babe is the handsomest one you have ever seen—you must be soft-soaping it.'

'Well, madam, I thought it needed soap of some kind.'

'Please sir, I don't think Mr. Doseum takes his physic reg'lar,' said a doctor's boy to his employer. 'How so?' 'Cause he's getting well so precious fast.'

A lady having read a poem, which terminated abruptly, with the subject apparently unfinished, perceived two Latin words at the end, "cetera desunt," and inquired their meaning of a gentleman present. "They signify literally, (he replied) the rest is not decent.

A little girl about four years old, who had never seen much of divine service, was taken to church She saw the clergyman open his book, and heard him say 'Let us sing,' and immediately, in compliance with his request, the little creature struck up loud and merrily the comical song of 'Old Dan Tucker.'

At a hotel, a bill of fare was handed to an old gentleman from the country as he was taking his seat at the dinner table. He very deliberately put on his specs, and glancing his eye over the contents, folded it up and put it in his pocket, remarking to the waiter that he hadn't time to read it then, but would look it over after dinner.

"Let me alone, you ugly wretch!" said a pretty young girl, the other evening to a fop who was sitting close to her side. "I did'nt touch you," he replied. "Well, if you havn't done it yet, you're going to!" said she.

'Aint it wicked to rob a hen roost, Jim?' 'That 's a great moral question, Sam; we have not time to argue it; hand down another pullet.'

ANOTHER evidence of the benefits derived from the use of this invaluable Medicine:

Boston, Nov. 1, 1847.

Messrs. Otis, Broaders & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen—Please send me by Expresss six dozen more of the "Samaritan Balm." Its virtues are fully established in our neighborhood, and I do not hesitate to say that the sale of it has been far greater than any new medicine I ever attempted to introduce. Of its benefits I can speak from actual experience, as being decidedly the best remedy for colds and diseases of the Lungs I ever tried. Last winter I was sorely afflicted with an attack of the "Bronchitis," when the good lady whose invention it is kindly prepared me a bottle which has completely cured me; and from the benefits I myself have personally derived from its use, I feel grateful that she has been prevailed upon to give so valuable a medicine to the world. Notwithstanding she has done it without any wish to profit by it in a pecuniary point of view, I hope and trust she will reap a rich reward for her goodness towards suffering humanity. Yours, truly, D. BUGBEE.

☞Price one dollar per bottle—six bottles for five dollars.

MISCELLANY.

MISTAKING A PERSON.

The breakfast table at Greenbank had been waiting full half an hour, its little mistress having been an unusual loiterer; but her fond parent, Mr. Duncan, thought there was some excuse for it this morning—it was too sultry for any living thing to be in haste—and he quietly continued his loitering upon the shaded verandah. Soon a bird-like voice called 'Papa, papa' just behind him, and as he turned, a pair of rosy lips met his own, and a little maiden begged an easily accorded forgiveness for keeping him so long from his office.

Mr. Duncan's summer residence, the scene upon which our sketch is opened, was situated just above the highlands in a picturesque curve of the Hudson, whose bright waters laved the foot of its grassy lawn. Wealth and exquise taste had made it a little Paradise, and on her seventeenth birth day, Carrie had been installed its mistress.

Mr. Duncan's son, Edward, a recent graduate from one of the Philadelphia Medical Schools, but who as yet had shown little energy in his profession, was already an occupant of the breakfast room when Carrie and her father entered. The Greenbank post bag was unusually well filled that morning, but all the letters seemed to be for Mr. Duncan. 'Is there not one for me, Papa? not even a note?' asked Carrie.

Yes there was one—the very last in the pile, and Carrie was soon engrossed in its contents. Presently with a shout of joy she bade her father and brother listen to a portion of its contents, conveying the promise of a visit from Louise, one of her dearest school friends. 'I have a positive longing for Greenbank,' ran the extract. 'You cannot tell how I loathe the bustle and selfish display of the watering places. I almost wish that I was penniless, if so I had a home and kind friends to love me as you have, Carrie. I did not envy you at school when you bore away the prize from us all, but I was forced to leave the room lest my convulsed features and tearful eyes should betray the feelings of the lonely orphan as she witnessed the kind caresses of the father upon his successful and happy child. Do not let me make you sad though, dear; I know I shall be happy with you.'

Carrie's kind little heart was too full to go on, and Ned broke the momentary pause with —, Well! and when will this paragon, Miss Fletcher, appear? Give me timely notice, for I must be off; I never could survive playing the gallant to a city Miss for six long weeks.'

'And hear this, in return for your civil observation,' said his sister, the smile restored to her bright face—'I know I shall not like your brother, even though so kind to you. I remember too well the sneers at woman-kind in general, which you used to read me from his letters. I imagine him very haughty, and, expecting him to look upon me with disdain, I shall first declare war.'

Edward Duncan could not help feeling slightly piqued, for he was not a little vain, and knew the beauty as well as the haughtiness of Miss Fletcher. So he finally yielded to his sisters solicitation and promised to make himself a martyr to his brotherly kindness for one whole week.

Happy Carrie then continued the letter—to herself be it known—'And so you are really engaged to Edward Morris, with your father's consent! Once more I must envy you. I never expect to be loved for myself alone, and distrusting every one, have almost resolved not to marry. I shall rejoice to meet your friend. He makes you a long visit does he not? And I hope, through your representation, he will think more favorable of me than do most of those whom I meet.' This, then,

DR. A. S. DUDLEY,

Of the firm of GRANDIN, DUDLEY and BLAKE, No. 238 Washington St., corner of Central Court,

BOSTON;

TENDERS his services to the citizens of QUINCY in all the various branches of the

DENTAL ART,

And would respectfully announce that he has established an OFFICE in this place, at the residence of DOCT. LLOYD GOODENOW, Hancock St., where he will give his personal attention to all who may desire his services, ONCE A MONTH.

Dr. Dudley proposes to visit this town on the FIRST MONDAY of each succeeding month and then to remain several days. During his absence orders may be left with Dr. GOODENOW, and will be punctually attended to on his return.

TESTIMONIALS.

This certifies that I am personally acquainted with DR. DUDLEY of Boston, have examined his work, and seen him operate on the Teeth, and believe him to be worthy of confidence. I have known his partner, D. S. GRANDIN, M. D., for nearly twenty years as a scientific and skillful Dentist. For inserting artificial teeth in my estimation he has no superior.

G. WARE GAY, M. D.

Quincy, Nov. 11, 1847.

This may certify, that I have examined several specimens of Dental Plate work executed by Dr. Dudley of Boston, which exhibit great skill and ingenuity. The teeth are incorruptable, and so closely imitate nature that it would be next to impossible to distinguish them from natural ones. Dr. Dudley has operated successfully on my own teeth to my great comfort, and in my presence upon those of others, and I can recommend him as an artist deserving of the confidence of the public.

LLOYD GOODNOW, M. D.

Quincy, Nov. 11, 1847.

Dr. Dudley extracts Teeth without pain when circumstances require it, Fills with pure Gold so as to preserve decayed teeth and prevent them from aching, and Inserts Mineral Teeth on gold and silver pivots without using wood, and on gold plate upon the SUCTION OR ATMOSPHERIC PRINCIPLE, from a single tooth to a whole sett, both with and without Gums.

MISCELLANY.

MISTAKING A PERSON.

The breakfast table at Greenbank had been waiting full half an hour, its little mistress having been an unusual lotterer; but her fond parent, Mr. Duncan, thought there was some excuse for it this morning—it was too sultry for any living thing to be in haste—and he quietly continued his loitering upon the shaded verandah. Soon a bird-like voice called 'Papa, papa' just behind him, and as he turned, a pair of rosy lips met his own, and a little maiden begged an easily accorded forgiveness for keeping him so long from his office

Mr. Duncan's summer residence, the scene upon which our sketch is opened, was situated just above the highlands in a picturesque curve of the Hudson, whose bright waters laved the foot of its grassy lawn. Wealth and exquise taste had made it a little Paradise, and on her seventeenth birth day, Carrie had been installed its mistress.

Mr. Duncan's son, Edward, a recent graduate from one of the Philadelphia Medical Schools, but who as yet had shown little energy in his profession, was already an occupant of the breakfast room when Carrie and her father entered. The Greenbank post bag was unusually well filled that morning, but all the letters seemed to be for Mr. Duncan. 'Is there not one for me, Papa? not even a note?' asked Carrie.

Yes there was one—the very last in the pile, and Carrie was soon engrossed in its contents. Presently with a shout of joy she bade her father and brother listen to a portion of its contents, conveying the promise of a visit from Louise, one of her dearest school friends. 'I have a positive longing for Greenbank,' ran the extract. 'You cannot tell how I loathe the bustle and selfish display of the watering places. I almost wish that I was penniless, if so I had a home and kind friends to love me as you have, Carrie. I did not envy you at school when you bore away the prize from us all, but I was forced to leave the room lest my convulsed features and tearful eyes should betray the feelings of the lonely orphan as she witnessed the kind caresses of the father upon his successful and happy child. Do not let me make you sad though, dear; I know I shall be happy with you.'

Carrie's kind little heart was too full to go on, and Ned broke the momentary pause with —, Well! and when will this paragon, Miss Fletcher, appear? Give me timely notice, for I must be off; I never could survive playing the gallant to a city Miss for six long weeks.'

'And hear this, in return for your civil observation,' said his sister, the smile restored to her bright face—'I know I shall not like your brother, even though so kind to you. I remember too well the sneers at woman-kind in general, which you used to read me from his letters. I imagine him very haughty, and, expecting him to look upon me with disdain, I shall first declare war.'

Edward Duncan could not help feeling slightly piqued, for he was not a little vain, and knew the beauty as well as the haughtiness of Miss Fletcher. So he finally yielded to his sisters solicitation and promised to make himself a martyr to his brotherly kindness for one whole week.

Happy Carrie then continued the letter—to herself be it known—'And so you are really engaged to Edward Morris, with your father's consent! Once more I must envy you. I never expect to be loved for myself alone, and distrusting every one, have almost resolved not to marry. I shall rejoice to meet your friend. He makes you a long visit does he not? And I hope, through your representation, he will think more favorable of me than do most of those whom I meet.' This, then, was the reason why Carrie's heart beat so fast while she inspected for the last time the room next to her brother's, to be sure all was right. From ten till three how long the hours were!

At last the dinner bell rang, and with it came Edward Morris, who clasped his betrothed to his heart with a lover's earnestness, Brother Ned wisely keeping aloof, but joining them in time for dessert. The afternoon passed pleasantly away, and as twilight slowly mantled the heavens, Ned made the welcome announcement that the evening boat was in sight. A few minutes more and the lady friends warmly embraced each other, Carrie, losing no time in presenting her brother. When the party had reached the drawing room, and Miss Fletcher had laid aside her bonnet, what a feeling of disappointment came over poor Ned! Spite of his raillery, he had formed an ideal of perfect loveliness, and now the faint light of a shaded lamp revealed a face bearing no resemblance to the creature of his imagination. Her eyes were dull and heavy, her hair sadly disarranged, and she wore a dark gray, clumsy and ungraceful, travelling dress. Even Carrie was puzzled, and thought her friend was much changed.

A wretched headache, of which she complained, excused the traveller for the night, and she was scarcely out of sight, ere Ned commenced a pretty severe raillery in the presence of his sister. 'At least Edward, she is not ironical,' replied his sister, 'and I consider your last remark as unworthy one who should know what is due to his sister's friend and his father's guest.' Carrie spoke with warmth, and her brother, who loved her—next to himself—begged forgiveness.

It was quite late before Carrie bade her lover adieu, and then after a short visit to the room of her sleeping visitor, upon whose forehead she imprinted a warm kiss, she sought her pillow recalling the whispered words of love, so dear to the maiden.

The little French clock chimed one—two—three, and as it ceased she awoke with a start. A burning hand was upon her own, and with a wild shriek she sprang to the floor. Louise was beside her, but her eyes had an unnatural light, and her arm was upraised while she muttered in a low mournful tone—'The moonlight scorches me—it fell upon my forehead and pierced me to my very brain. Will you not take it away, dear lady? you look kind and gentle.'

Mrs. Pratt, the good housekeeper, who was aroused by Carrie's cry, instantly understood that Louise was in the delirium of a fever, and went quietly to the invalid, soothed her with kind words, and led her from the room. The first gray light of dawn struggled through the heavy clouds when Edward Morris was summoned to the room. It was a moment of anxious suspense, but at length the young physician released the wrist and exclaimed, 'We must be prompt or assistance will be of no avail.' Not a sound came from the lips of the sufferer as they bared her beautiful arm, and the sharp click of the lancet was followed by a crimson stream. The amendment was but transitory. Poor Louise! all haughtiness, all reserve had passed away.

An hour later, Morris summoned his friend, who was still sleeping, to a hurried consultation. Edward saw the danger at a glance, and with that knowledge came a yearning to save, even if he gave life for life. 'She must not—shall not die,' he whispered in a husky voice to Morris, who stood by her bedside. It seemed a sacrifice as those glossy curls fell one by one, and Carrie received them, her tears glistening like pearls as they fell upon the silken threads. And so that weary week crept by. At times the invalid lay in a dull stupor, but oftener her wild ravings brought tears to the eyes of those that listened. She spoke of her orhpan loneliness, and then would pray to die that she might find rest beside her parents in the quiet grave.

At length the crisis came, and after an agony of suspense she was pronounced out of danger, if carefully nursed. Edward Duncan spoke no word; he cast one look at the sufferer, and then went forth alone under the clear star-light. There were beaded drops upon his forehead, but the night dew had not fallen there; and when he had breathed a prayer of thanksgiving for the life which had been spared to them, he pressed to his lips a long tress of dark glossy hair, and placed it again near his heart.

From that day the fever spell was broken, but it was many days before Louise could leave her room. At length, leaning upon good Mr. Duncan's arm, Louise slowly entered the parlor where Edward was the only occupant, Morris having been called to the city a few days before. The evening passed pleasantly away, Louise making the odd mistake of calling Edward, Mr. Morris. When Carrie had left Louise for the night, she found Ned pacing the drawing-room in no very quiet mood. 'I have a favor to ask, Carrie,' said he, 'and first you must not laugh at the confession I make,' said he, as his sister entered. 'I love Miss Fletcher, and am determined to win her if possible. The favor I wish is that you should favor the supposition I think she entertains I am Mr. Morris.'

Ned spoke rapidly and earnestly—his whole manner seemed altered, and Carrie was astonished—delighted. She easily comprehended what she had not before noticed, and needed no urging to consent to the ruse. She promised to put papa on his guard, telling him it was a plan to perplex her friend, and Mrs. Pratt would consent in an instant. The next morning Louise joined them at the breakfast table. Mr. Duncan seemed in unusually good spirits. Mrs. Pratt would keep smiling without apparent reason—and yet Carrie found it easier than she supposed, to hear her brother addressed as Mr. Morris; while Louise had no idea that she was the heroine of a family romance.

Three weeks glided away. Edward Morris had returned, and sharing the mystery, kindly consented to loan his name and reputation for the time being. Ned discovered a thousand new graces in Miss Fletcher, but grew wonderfully abstracted. Louise wondered why Mr. Morris was always left as her escort, and thought Mr. Duncan the most devoted of brothers. The time of her visit had been twice extended and two whole months had flown.

One day while Carrie had gone out with her father, Louise, alone in the parlor, was wrapped in sorrow thinking of the 'life of vanity and vexation' which she must lead after separating from her friend, and recalling, event by event, her whole past life. But one thing startled her—she could not drive from her thoughts the image of Edward Morris. The truth at length burst upon her. She loved with deep and passionate devotedness the betrothed husband of her friend. Madness and ingratitude. 'I go to-morrow,' thought she, 'and ere we meet again they will be united, while I will be cold and proud, hiding my sorrow as before.' Poor child, the woman overcame the heroine; and as the tears gushed through her fingers, she sobbed a weary heart-broken moan upon her lonely lot.

Edward Duncan had just returned, and he sprang gaily upon the verandah, his heart beating high at the thought meeting her whom he loved, and as he passed the long windows, a glance revealed her lying in her mournful musing. Her face was concealed, but the first low sob from her burdened heart roused new thoughts within his own. He forgot the deception he had used, and knowing only that she was in sorrow and that he loved her tenderly, he in a moment knelt beside her, and clasping that hand still wet with tears, he poured forth his earnest and passionate love.

How did his heart sink within him when the hand was coldly withdrawn, and Louise Fletcher, with flashing eye and curling lip, reproved him for his treachery; ay, and insult; he, bound to her friends, dared to pour such an avowal in her ears. The reproof recalled Edward to his folly. He told her all, and pleaded his love as an excuse. Was he forgiven?

Oh how the tide of gladness swelled in the breast of Louise Fletcher, when she began to realize the tale to which she listened. Soon the grating of the carriage wheels announced the return of Carrie and her father, and Edward led the shrinking, blushing Louise towards them, a new claimant for a father's and a sister's love.

POPPING THE QUESTION.

Among the men what dire divisions rise,
For "Union" one, and one "No Union" cries,
Shame on the sex that such disputes begin;
Ladies are all for union—to a MAN.

The following, from 'Every One's Own Book,' contains some suggestions on a subject in respect to which good advice is particularly desirable.

There is nothing more appalling to a modest and sensitive young man, than asking the girl he loves to marry him, and there are few who do not find their moral courage tasked to the uttermost.

Many a man would lead a forlorne hope without a breach, and 'seek the bubble reputation at the cannon's mouth,' trembles at the idea of asking a woman the question which is to decide his fate. Ladies may congratulate themselves that nature and custom have made them the responding party.

In a matter which men have always found so terrible, yet which, in one way or other, they have always contrived in some awkward way to accomplish; it is not easy to give instructions suitable to their emergency.

A man naturally conforms to the disposition of the woman he admires. If she be serious, he will approach the awful subject with due solemnity—if gay and lively, he will make it an excellent joke—if softly sentimental, he must woo her in a strain of high wrought romance, and if severely practical, he relies upon straight forward common sense.

There is one maxim of universal application. Never lose an opportunity. What can a woman think of a lover who neglects one? Women cannot make direct advances but they use infinite tact in giving men occasion to make them. In every case it is fair to presume that when a woman gives a man an opportunity she expects him to improve it; and though he may tremble, and feel his pulse throbbing and tingling through every limb; though his heart fills up his throat, and his tongue cleaves to the roof of his mouth, yet the awful question must be asked—the fearful task accomplished.

In the country, the lover is taking a romantic walk by moonlight, with the lady of his love—talks of the beauty of the scenery, the harmony of nature, and exclaims—

'Ah! Julia, how happy would existence prove, if I always had such a companion.'

She sighs, and leans more fondly on the arm that tremblingly supports her.

'My dearest Julia, be mine forever?'

This is a settler, and the answer ever so inaudible, makes or undoes him quite.

'Take pity on a forlorn bachelor,' says another, in a manner which may be either jest or earnest—'Marry me at once and put me out of my misery.'

'With all my heart, whenever you are ready,' replies the laughing fair one. A joke carried thus far is easily made earnest.

A point is often carried by taking a thing for granted. A gentleman who has been paying attention to a lady, says—

'Well, Mary, when is the happy day?'

'What day, pray? she asks with a conscious blush.

'Why, everybody knows we are going to get married, and it might as well be one thing as another; so when shall it be?'

Cornered in this fashion, there is no retreat. 'Jane, I love you! Will you marry me?' would be somewhat abrupt, and a frankly given 'Yes!' would be short and sweet for an answer.

'Ellen, one word from you would make me the happiest man in the universe.'

'I should be cruel not to speak it then, unless it is a very hard one.'

'It is a word of three letters and answer the question—Will you have me?'

The lady of course says 'Yes,' unless she happens to prefer a word of two letters, and answers 'No.'

And so this interesting and terrible process, in practice as simple as it is in theory, is varied in a hundred ways, according to circumstances and the various dispositions.

One timid gentleman asks—'Have you any objection to changing your name?' and follows this up with another which clenches its significance—'How will mine suit you?'

Another asks—'Will you tell me what I most wish to know?'

'Yes, if I can.'

'The happy day when we will be married.'

Another says—'My Eliza, we must do what all the world evidently expect we shall.'

'All the world is very impertinent.'

'I know it—but it can't be helped. When shall I tell the parson to be ready?'

As a general thing, a gentleman need never be refused. Every woman, except a heartless coquette, finds the means of discouraging a man whom she does not intend to have, before the matter comes to the point of declaration.

CLOCKS AND NEWSPAPERS.

The following excellent article is from the Oswego Palladium, but, as the almanac makers say, is calculated for almost any meridian:—

Some of our readers may recollect the story about the Yankee clock pedlar and the Western emigrant. The latter was poor and could not afford to purchase the clock which the former had to sell. Besides, he was afraid of getting bit by the Yankee. The pedlar employed all sorts of means to effect a sale, but it was no go. The settler had made up his mind not to purchase; said he had no use for a clock; that he had always done without it, and could in future. The Yankee proposed leaving it; but no, he would not have it upon any terms. The Yankee now started off, but he had not been gone long before he returned, saying that his horse was sick, the roads bad, and his load so heavy that he wanted the privilege of leaving one of his clocks until his return. The settler finally consented, on condition that he should not be asked to buy it when he did come back.

The clock was put in motion and it proved a very great convenience—of course it did. The good housewife regulated all her business by it. The meat was put into the pot at a certain hour; the dinner was on the table just as the clock struck twelve; at nine o'clock the family retired, and rose as the clock struck five. The neighbors came to the house to learn the time. In short, nothing was done about the house without consulting the clock.

At length the pedlar returned to obtain the timepiece. He was in a great hurry now, however, as he had a great way to go that day. But such an uproar as there was in the house, had never before been kicked up. The settler's wife declared she could not get along without the clock; that she would never know when to do anything; the children, too, commenced crying, and begged their father not to let the clock go. The result was, the clock was purchased.

But what has all this to do with newspapers? the reader will ask. Well, we'll tell you.

There are many families in the country in which there is no paper taken. They have always got along without one, and they cannot see why they are not just as well off as those who do take them.

If such persons would receive and read a good newspaper one year they would be satisfied of its value, and few of them could be induced to part with it upon any condition. The good housewife would say she couldn't get along without the paper, and the children would cry at the bare thought that they could no longer read it. We dare say we have subscribers upon our books who would'nt part with the Palladium for twice the amount of the subscription.

At all events we recommend to families in which there is no paper taken, to subscribe forthwith. Try the experiment. Allow the clock to be put up; and if, at the end of the year, you want it taken down, it will be done without hesitation.

GOING TO BED.

Going to bed we have always considered as one of the most sober, serious and solemn operations which a man can be engaged in during the whole twenty-four hours. With a young lady it is altogether a different sort of thing. When bed time arrives, she strips up stairs with a candle in her hand, and—if she has had a pleasant company during the evening—with some agreeable ideas in her head.

The candle is placed on the toilet, and her luxuriant hair speedily emancipated from the thraldom of pins and combs. If she usually wears 'water curles,' or uses the 'iron,' her hair is brushed carefully from her forehead, and the whole mass compactly secured; if not, why then her lovely tresses are soon hid in innumerable bits of paper. This task accomplished, a night-cap makes its appearance, edged may be with plain muslin, or may be with levy lace which hides all, save her own sweet countenance. As soon as she ties the strings, probably She takes a peep in her glass, and half smiles, half blushes at what she sees. The light is out—her fair, delicate form gently presses the couch—and like a dear, innocent, lovely creature as she is, she falls gently into sleep, with a sweet smile on her still sweeter face. A man, of course, under the same circumstances, acts quite differently. Every movement in his chamber indicates the coarse, rough mould of his fallen nature. When all is ready, he snuffs the candle out with his fingers like a cannibal, and then jumps into bed like a savage. For a few minutes he thinks of all the peccadiloes he may have committed through the day—vows a vow to amend soon—groans, turns over—stretches himself—then all is silent—and then the heavy breathing of the slumber.

CURIOUS PROPERTIES OF NUMBER NINE. It is not a little remarkable, that the figure 9, if multiplied by itself, or any number below itself, the figures composing the product, if added together, make 9; thus: 9 times 2 are 18; 1 and 8 are 9; 3 times 9 are 27; 2 and 7 are 9; and so on. Also, if you set down any number of figures in a line, and then reverse them, or mix them as you like, only taking care that you use the same figures, and then substract the lesser number from the greater, the difference is always divisible by 9, without any remainder; thus, for example:

6207491583 reversed.

9)2144455488 difference.

238272832

Again, 8351947026
1906473258 mixed.

9)6445473768 difference.

716163752

Or, if a number taken consists of three figures, then those three figures reversed, substract the lesser from the greater, and the difference will not only be divisible by 9 without any remainder, but the figures composing the quotient will be alike; thus.

563	891	804
365	198	408
9)198	9)693	9)396

SKATING. If we had a family of boys, they should, at the proper age, learn themselves the art of skating, not only as an innocent amusement but as an important branch of self-educament. Skating is to winter what bathing is to summer, one of the best medicines of the season. The clear, bracing, purifying and saturating winds seem to blow away the causes of dullness and ennervation, while the glow lively exercise serve to give fresh velocity to the whole physical and mental machinery and kindles new vigor to the entire system. All these benefits to health does this manly exercise confer, and, to the young at least, sport to boot. It would have been well if our puritan ancestors, during their sojurn in Holland, had caught the dutchmen's love of skating and had perpetuated it in their descendants of all ages.

NATIONAL CONTRASTS. In a noisy mob, two handsome young women, who were very much alarmed, threw themselves into the arms of two gentlemen standing near for safety. One of the gentlemen, an Irishman, immediately gave her who had flown to him for protection quite a hearty embrace, by way, as he said, of encouraging the poor crature. The other, an Englishman, immediately put his hands in his pocket to guard them. Two officers, observing a fine girl in a milliner's shop, the one an Irishman, proposed to go in and buy a watch-ribbon, in order to get a nearer view of her. 'Hoot mon,' says his northern friend, 'there's nae occasion to waste siller, let us gang in and speer if she can give us twa sixpences for a shilling.' It is notorious, that in one of the Duke of Marlborough's battles, the Irish brigade, on advancing to the charge, threw away their knapsacks, and every thing which tended to encumber them, all which were carefully picked up by the Scotch regiment that followed to support them.

A MONKEY'S REVENGE. A monkey tied to a stake, was robbed by the Johnny crows (in the West Indies) of his food, and he conceived the following plan of punishing the thieves. He feigned death, and lay perfectly motionless on the ground near the stake. The birds approached by degrees, and got near enough to steal his food, which he allowed them to do. This he repeated several times, till they became so bold as to come within the reach of his claws. He calculated his distance, and laid hold of one of them. Death was not his plan of punishment. He was more refined in his cruelty; he plucked every feather out of the bird, and then let him go and show himself to his companions.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, FEB. 12, 1848.

John A. Green, Editor.

TOWN MEETING. The inhabitants of this town assembled at the Lyceum Room last Monday afternoon for the transaction of business. Mr. Joseph W. Robertson was chosen Moderator. Upon the Order of Notice served on the town relative to changing the County seat from Dedham to Roxbury, it was voted, almost unanimously, that—

"The Town of Quincy are opposed to the change of location of the County buildings from Dedham to Roxbury, and that the Town, through their Selectmen, remonstrate before the Legislature against such removal."

No action was taken upon the third article in the Warrant, which related to the petition of the Old Colony Railroad Corporation. It was voted, after a good deal of debate, to purchase three hundred feet of Leading Hose to be attached to the Tiger Engine. Messrs. Frederic A. Lapham, William Curtis and David M. Brown, with the three Selectmen, were appointed to purchase the same. It was also voted to authorize the Committee on the repairs of the Niagara Engine to purchase a new engine to take the place of the Niagara. There was an average attendance at the meeting.

We are of opinion that a more liberal feeling should be extended to the firemen than has been generally manifested. It cannot be expected that men who have very little property of their own to defend, will perform all the arduous duties of enginemen without compensation, unless they are allowed some privileges, or their services are appreciated in some other way than by flings in town meeting about "engine scrapes," and other hard rubs.

VALENTINES.—SOMETHING NEW. Messrs. C. Gill & Co., as will be seen by their advertisement, are prepared to furnish ladies and gentlemen with all sorts of tender and love-fraught missives for the anniversary of St. Valentine's day. This is a new feature for our quiet town, and as these missives,—adapted to the expression of friendship, happiness, and love,—can be sent to their destination without trouble to the purchaser, we doubt not that the Quincy Bookstore will be thronged with the votaries of Cupid. Ladies, of course, will not forget that it is leap year.

NOMINATION. Hon. Charles E. Forbes of the Common Pleas Court, has received and accepted the appointment to fill the vacancy upon the Bench of the Supreme Court, occasioned by the death of Judge Hubbard. He will enter upon the duties of his office on Monday.

AN AMERICAN PACHA. A letter from Constantinople, says that "a decoration in diamonds of a Turkish Order of Honor, such as is given to Pachas of two tails, is actually in the hands of our Legation for Professor Morse, from the Sultan, in return for the view of his Telegraph. It will arrive in America with a Royal diploma at the same time."

SONGS FOR THE PEOPLE. The first and second numbers of a monthly publication with this title have been received. It is issued at Philadelphia by George B. Zieber & Co., and is an elegant work, got up in a splendid manner, with good engravings, and contains some choice old songs, set to music. Albert G. Emerick, Professor of Music, is the editor. Each number contains forty eight pages, and the price of the work is three dollars per year. Those wanting music, in an attractive and convenient form, should order this cheap and beautiful work.

FORTIFICATIONS. The following items in the appropriation bill, include all the appropriations for fortifications for New England:

Defensive works, Narrows Penobscot River, Me. $10,000; Repairs of Fort Preble, Portland, Me., 9,000; Repairs of Fort Scammel, Portland, Me., 10,000; Repairs on Governor's Island, Boston, 15,000; Fort Warren, Boston, 30,000; Fort Adams, Newport, (R. I.) 20,000; Rebuilding Fort Trumbull, New London, (Ct.) 10,000; Protection of the Great Brewster Island and security and defence of the principal ship channels into Boston, Mass., 40,000.

A HARD CASE. Mr. Zebulon Paine of Conway, who was convicted in 1846, of having procured the burning of a barn, and sent to the state prison for eight years, has been pardoned by the Governor after serving fourteen months of his term, and has returned to his family,—his complete innocence having been established by the confessions of a boy by whose false testimony Mr. P. was convicted. Who is to remunerate him for this great wrong? Upon the same testimony by which he was imprisoned, Mr. Paine might have been hung; in that event it would have been somewhat difficult to have made him any requital.

ATTEMPT AT ROBBERY. Last Saturday evening an attempt was made to rob Mr. Hayter, the musician, who, accompanied by his daughter, was passing over the Dorchester turnpike in a sleigh. The ruffians had dragged him from the vehicle, and one was stamping on him, when the screams of Miss H. brought assistance. Two Irishmen were arrested and given into the hand of the South Boston watch last subsequently they were given in charge of an officer of this County, to be dealt with as justice may demand.

CALIFORNIA. An extract of a letter from Monterey, capitol of California, says—"Emigration is constantly pouring in. These emigrants will settle the destiny of California, without regard to any conditions or treaty stipulations. Were the United States to attempt put California back into the arms of Mexico, she would not stay put there; she would rebound to her present position, and our flag would fly again where it how does."

"THE CHILDREN OF THE PHALANSTERY." This is the title of a neat little ninepenny pamphlet, issued by Ticknor & Co., Boston. It is a familiar dialogue on Education, by F. Cantegrel, translated by Francis Geo. Shaw, Esq.,—an illustration of the Fourierite system of education. The theory of Fourier is very beautiful; whether it is practicable or not let each one read and judge for himself.

WHIG NATIONAL CONVENTION. A meeting of the whig members of Congress has determined that the National Convention for the nomination of candidates for the Presidency and Vice Presidency, shall be held at Philadelphia on the 7th of June next.

CONGRESS. The ten regiment bill seems to be the order of the day, as yet, in the Senate. A bill to establish a territorial government in Oregon has been reported. A bill extending the provisions of the act granting half pay to widows of volunteer militia, to widows of soldiers of the regular army, has been passed. The Vice President has resumed the Chair. The bill to increase the Medical staff of the army has passed. In the House, joint resolutions complimenting Gen. Taylor, and the army under him, for the victory of Buena Vista, and directing the presentation of a gold medal to Gen. Taylor, have been passed, and in the Senate referred to a Committee. A petition has been presented by Mr. King of Mass., signed by nine thousand members of the Society of Friends, citizens of six States, praying Congress to legislate in favor of Peace. Quite an animated debate ensued on a motion to lay on the table.

LEGISLATURE. There is but very little in the journal of proceedings of this body of general interest. The following Petitions, among a great many others, have been presented and referred:—

Of the People's Bank in Roxbury for increase of capital; of the New Bedford and Taunton, and Fall River Railroad Companies, for leave to connect their roads. Also, remonstrances of the towns of Franklin, Quincy, and Sharon, against the removal of the county seat of Norfolk County, from Dedham to Roxbury.

MASSAPOAG HOUSE. This is the name of a new, large and well arranged hotel, opened in Canton the 3d inst, under the superintendence of Samuel T. Willard, Esq., whose gentlemanly deportment and kind attention towards his visitors has secured him the reputation as one of the best of Landlords in the "Old Bay State." All lovers of pleasure and recreation who wish to enjoy themselves, and participate in a rich treat, should give him a call.

We see it stated that the Unitarian Society of that town intend to give a grand public Tea-party at his house on Monday night, the 14th inst, as a donation to aid and encourage the worthy "mine host" in the sphere of duty for which he is so well qualified in every respect. Tickets fifty cents, including dancing and supper.

TYROLEAN CONCERT. It will be seen by referring to our advertising columns that the Hauser Family, who have been singing with great success in Boston and the towns around, and who gave a concert here on Monday last which was attended by some of our most respectable families, propose another for Wednesday night. They advertise to perform on a new instrument which is said to be worth the price of admission. Let them be heard.

A CONTENTED MAN. Rev. Mr. Kimball, of Verona, (N. Y.) where he has a salary of four hundred dollars, has lately received a call from a Church in New York City, with a salary of fifteen hundred dollars; and although very earnestly pressed to accept the city pulpit, has declined absolutely.

A GENERAL RISING. At a wedding party in the Church, at Bath, (Me.) the Minister made this request: "those who wish to be married will please arise;" whereupon the heads of a bevy of young girls handsome and otherwise, shot up, they taking the remark as general, which was only intended for the contracting parties, and being fully convinced of the evils of single blessedness.

MOLASSES. A correspondent of the Boston Post says that a large portion of the molasses received from Cuba contains a considerable quantity of lime. The lime is employed to keep the molasses sweet and to neutralize the acid in that which has become sour. He says:

"For many family uses molasses thus acted upon is not probably injurious, though its sweetening effect is doubtless diminished; but for those purposes to which it is applied in the arts it is seriously injured. For distillation, particularly, the presence of lime is in the highest degree prejudicial, and impairs the value of molasses from ten to thirty per cent."

MEXICO. A letter dated Jan. 13th, says, there has been no treaty concluded, but the whole subject rests with the United States—the Government of Mexico is willing to make a treaty, and are prepared, and are strong enough to sustain it. The brigade of Gen. Cushing is at San Angel. No movement of troops can take place till the 1st of Feb., as they are without the necessary clothing. The quartermaster's department has now about one thousand men and women engaged in making clothing for the soldiers, and they will be at least until that time before a sufficient quantity will be ready. At last accounts Santa Anna was at Tehuacan, in the State of Puebla.

DEAD BODIES ARRIVED. The ship Windsor Castle has arrived at Boston with the remains of Col. Ransom, killed in the battle of Chepultepec; Lieut. Col. Martin Scott, of the sixth Infantry; and Capt. Thompson, of the ninth Infantry. The remains of Col. Ransom were removed to Connecticut, and the others will be carried to the tomb, without much military parade.

The remains of Capt. Felt are expected by the barque Orion, which probably sailed from New Orleans the last of January.

A DANGEROUS EXPERIMENT. A young man is now confined in the Pennsylvania hospital, by a blow received from a woman whom he was endeavoring to defend from the brutality of her husband.

DAGUERREOTYPES. We would direct the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Wadsworth's Daguerreotype Establishment in Franklin Hall.

COW POX. A case of varioloid having recently occurred in this town, it should remind every one that an "ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure." Those wishing protection against the small pox, can obtain a genuine vaccination, with the pure kine pox virus, at Dr. Bugbee's Office, Hancock House.

CHOWDER. Crane, at the "Palo Alto," serves up clam chowder this afternoon and evening.

It appears that May next has now been fixed upon by the Millerites as the time of the Second Advent, when, according to their calculations, the world will be just 6000 years old.

At a town meeting held in Milton, on Monday last, it was voted, unanimously to oppose the petition of H. A. S. Dearborn for the removal of the county seat of Norfolk from Dedham to Roxbury.

Four young rogues, from twelve to sixteen years of age, were arrested at Worcester on the 31st ult, for thefts committed in various parts of the town.

Hon. James A. Pearce has been re-elected to represent the state of Maryland in the Senate of the United States, for six years from the 4th of March, 1849.

The Greenfield Democrat denies that the screw nuts on the railroad bridge near Athol were made of cast iron, and insists that the nuts were removed before the bridge fell, and that that removal was the cause of its fall.

The special session of the Legislature of Iowa has been adjourned sine die. The House refused to the last to go into convention for the election of United States Senators or Judges, and the State is therefore unrepresented in the upper branch of Congress.

They are murdering their children in Eengland, to get the funeral fee from the burial club. The English papers give it as a fact.

The number of free letters that pass through the Post Office of the United States is estimated by the Postmaster General at about five millions per annum.

The amount of specie imported and entered at the Custom House at Boston during the week ending Feb 5, was $17,675. The amount exported during the week was $2,659. The import at the port of New York during the week was $20,000, and the export $93,422.

It is ascertained beyond a doubt, the Washington Whig says, that General Scott has been recalled at his own request.

A witness in court recently described what he called a dark transaction thus—when I see a blind black man, in a dark cellar, with a dark lantern, looking for a blind black cat; that, in my opinion, is a very dark transaction.

The Cherokee Advocate is now entirely in the hands of the Indians. It is an Indian paper, including all persons employed in the office.

A large number of vessels are now employed conveying saw-dust to Charlestown, for packing ice.

Probably one hundred or more runaway slaves arrive in Boston every year. Many are provided for there, and others proceed to Canada.

Judge McLean has written a letter condemnatory of the Mexican war and of the measures to raise money to carry it on.

Accustom your children from infancy to speak the truth; and this they will do, if not prevented by others.

Washington city appropriates about four thousand dollars a year for public schools. Roxbury, with less than half her population, spends about twenty five thousand dollars.

The richest man in St. Thomas, one of the principle ports in the West Indies, is a negro. He is worth not less than three millions of dollars,—acquired by trafficing in his brethren.

Dr. Holland says—"If persons are always supposing that they are liable to a certain distemper, the nerves will so act on the part, that it is very likely to come upon them."

"He is a man, and no mistake! Nature made him with her sleeves rolled up," was the description of Henry Clay by a Western man.

A great fire occurred at Toronto, Canada, on the 1st of February, which destroyed twenty three houses, seventeen of them taverns.

During the year 1847, sixteen persons were killed and sixteen seriously injured on the Worcester Railroad.

A patent has been taken out in England for making paper for the building of houses, bridges, ships, boats, and all sorts of wheel carriages, chairs, etc, either entirely of paper, or to cover wood and iron.

The American officers at Matamoras, have taken measures to introduce a liberal system of education there, under instructions from Washington.

The Philadelphia Saturday Courier has been sold at auction for fifteen thousand dollars.

Two bills of indictment have been found against Nathan Ewing, for assaulting and attempting to kill two tutors of Yale College. No bill was found against the other person arrested.

Col. Fremont's sentence is very slight—suspension for a short period.

Richard D. Rice, editor of the Augusta Age, has been nominated Judge of the District Court of Maine.

A stream of scolding, as long as from sun to sun, never yet had any other effect on children than to render them wholly regardless of what is said to them.

The Supreme Court of Michigan has decided that a note must be presented for payment and be refused, before notice of protest is a proper notice of dishonor.

Upwards of eighteen thousand dollars has been sent to this country by a Society in Europe, for the purpose of propagating the Roman Catholic faith in the United States.

Baton Rouge, an old town on the east bank of the Mississippi, about one hundred miles above New Orleans, is now the capitol of Louisiana. The State Prison is there, and an arsenal with barracks, and a hospital, belonging to the United States.

Mrs. Desbrisay, who was sick at Lynn last November, on her way from Canada West to St. John, has not been heard of since. Any information will be gratefully received by S. G. Deblois, Boston, or C. A. Hardinge, St. John, (N. B.)

The greater part of the mills at Fall River have stopped, owing to a disagreement about wages.

There has been a recent discovery of a girl disguised as a soldier, in the garrison at Fort Mann.

The Queen of England will again make her subjects happy, some time in March or April.

An orator out West spoke an hour and a half and "was sensible to the last," says an editor.

Congress has now been in session two months, and it would be difficult to tell what single step has been taken towards accomplishing the proper objects of legislation.

Prince Jerome Bonaparte wants France to give him a pension, for life, of thirty thousand dollars per annum.

A double coat has been invented in England, so arranged as to form a dress coat one side out, and a weather proof travelling coat the other side.

Commodore Ridgely died at Philadelphia last week, of the gout in the stomach.

An extensive broadcloth manufactory has been erected at West Troy.

Life is too short to be frittered away in trifles. Let no moment pass unemployed. Sleep for the renewal of exhausted nature, awake to live to the duties of life. Beware of over-indulgence. Intemperance brings no recreation, but serves only to exhaust the powers of both body and mind.

Friends, Patrons, AND FELLOW CITIZENS,

I wish you all a Happy New Year!!

NOW for a little fun and nonsense. There is quite an excitement about town, among the profession, because

GEORGE B. NIGHTINGALE

has been SHOEING UP not more than half of creation, for the last eight years, with

BOOTS & SHOES.

Well, let 'em "go it." "Guess there wont be much of a shower after all," as the chap said when Noah wouldn't let him get into the ark,—calculate to keep doing so right strait along, every time. Why my dear "fellow critters," we don't mean to brag, but you undertake to take a look at OUR Boots and Shoes and the first you know you get your foot right strait in; there you are, stuck fast; then out comes the old pocket book with THE SHINERS; that's just what we want, and nothing else,—much better than credit; credit takes time to no purpose, oftentimes, and time, you know, is money. The pay down system is the only true one, after all,—the best remedy for corns and unpleasant dreams. The man that takes a pair of BOOTS or SHOES with one hand, and PULLS OUT THE CASH with the other, is independent; like all other tubs, he stands on his own bottoms; give me the man that shells out the stuff, like a sheaf of wheat in cold weather and we'll set him on his taps in a giffy. I therefore advise all mankind, womankind, and every other kind that wears SHOE LEATHER, to CALL when they find themselves ailing about the UNDERSTANDINGS. The Doctors may tinker up the physical frame but I'll beat 'em hollow at repairing Damaged Soles (with the best material for such cases.)

P. S. Needn't be particular about knocking when you wish to come in; never mind for a little mud as we have it in abundance. Brooms are plenty and cheap for the tin.

With the money you can buy
Boots, Caps, Shoes—come and try;
Findings, also, made to use
For to make good Boots or Shoes.

When your Shoes are full of holes,
Or should need a pair of Soles,
I can mend them if you will
Just call in and pay the bill.

GEORGE B. NIGHTINGALE.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

'TIS LOVE THAT BRIGHTENS EV'RY SCENE.

How pleasant 'tis at even tide
To rove a pretty maid beside,
To pluck the flowers of every hue,
And slily steal a kiss or two.

Then arm in arm to saunter round
'Till some delightful spot is found,
Where sparkling waters bubbling run,
Now gilded by the setting sun.

There on some rock that's smooth and neat,
Your kerchief spread for beauty's seat,
Your arm around the fair one's waist,
Her yielding hand in yours embraced.

While at her feet the streamlet plays,
And beauty seems to challenge praise,
Let your kind words like water flow,—
Love if sincere the art will show.

But if no love is in your breast,
If heartlessly the maid 's caress'd,
Not even such a scene as this
Can give the soul a moment's bliss.

'Tis love that brightens every scene,
Illumes the blue and tints the green,
And makes the waters as they roll,
A cheering nectar to the soul.

F. M. ADLINGTON, Weymouth.

WEDDED LOVE.

Addressed by a young wife to a desponding husband.

Come, rouse thee, dearest!—'tis not well
To let thy spirit brood
Thus darkly o'er the cares that swell
Life's current to a flood;
As brooks, and torrents, rivers, all,
Increase the gulf in which they fall,
Such thoughts, by gathering up the rills
Of lesser grief, spread real ills;
And with their gloomy shades conceal
The landmarks hope would else reveal.

Come, rouse thee, now!—I know thy mind,
And would its strength awaken;
Proud, gifted, noble, ardent, kind—
Strange thou shouldst be thus shaken!
But rouse afresh each energy,
And be what heaven intended thee;
Throw from thy thoughts this weary weight,
And prove thy spirit firmly great:
I would not see thee bend below
The angry storms of earthly wo.

Full well I know the generous soul
Which warms thee into life,
Each spring which can its power control,
Familiar to thy wife;
For deem'st thou she could stoop to bind
Her fate unto a common mind?
The eagle-like ambition, nursed
From childhood in her heart, had first
Consumed with its Promethean flame
The shrine that sunk her so to shame.

Then rouse thee, dearest! from the dream
That letters now thy powers:
Shake off this gloom—Hope sheds a beam
To gild each cloud which lowers;
And though at present seems so far
The wished for goal, the guiding star,
With peaceful ray, would light thee on Until its bounds be won;—
That quenchless ray, thou'lt ever prove,
Is fond, undying, WEDDED LOVE!

UNREQUITED LOVE.

The flower when crushed will send perfume,
The riven tree may sprout again,
And spring will raise to life and bloom
Bleak autumn's melancholy train;
But human hearts whene'er they feel
The frosts of unrequited love,
No earthly power the wound can heal,
Till death the malady remove.

ANECDOTES.

'Hallo, Jim, where did you get that cloak?' 'Oh, I 'annexed' it, and I'm going to 'hold and occupy' it. I'm going to 'acquire' a dress coat somehow, if I can, and establish 'a territorial government' over a dozen silver spoons I picked up last night. It 's destiny—it 's Anglo Saxonism

'How high was the horse?' asked the counsel of a witness. 'Fourteen feet.' 'You mean hands, do you 'not?' 'What did I say?' 'Fourteen feet.' 'Did I? Then, by Jove, I'll stick to it.'

A modest young lady, desiring a leg of a chicken at table, said she would take that part "which ought to be dressed in pantaloons." A young man opposite immediately called for that part "which usually wears the bustle."

Much attention has been paid to the rearing of poultry at the west, and the method now in use of hatching chickens is considered far superior to the Egyptian one of hatching them in ovens. It is simply to fill a barrel with eggs, head it up, and set a hen upon the bung

'Is your horse fast?' inquired a man of a Vermont horse-dealer. 'Beats all creation.' 'Good bottom?' 'He's all bottom. Why I've drove him so far in one day, that it took two days to get him back again!'

'Did you ever go to a military ball?' asked a lisping maid the other night of an old veteran. 'No, my dear,' growled the old veteran, "in the war I had a military ball come to me—and what d'ye think! It took my leg off.'

A good story is told of a deacon, a member of Congress, who on new year's day went the round of calls on distinguished persons at the capitol, and returned quite glib of tongue and flushed of countenance. 'Did you drink the apple toddy at ——'s?' inquired one. 'Oh no,' said the deacon, 'I am president of a temperance society; but I took some of his custards and found them delicious!' The deacon had made a slight mistake; the custards were a beverage called "egg-nogg," served in small glasses.

ANOTHER evidence of the benefits derived from the use of this invaluable Medicine:

Boston, Nov. 1, 1847.

Messrs. Otis, Broaders & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen—Please send me by Express six dozen more of the "Samritan Balm"? Its virtues are fully established in our neighborhood, and I do not hesitate to say that the sale of it has been far greater than any new medicine I ever attempted to introduce. Of its benefits I can speak from actual experience, as being decidedly the best remedy for colds and diseases of the Lungs I ever tried. Last winter I was sorely afflicted with an attack of the "Bronchitis," when the good lady whose invention it is kindly prepared me a bottle which has completely cured me; and from the benefits I myself have personally derived from its use, I feel grateful that she has been prevailed upon to give so valuable a medicine to the world. Notwithstanding she has done it without any wish to profit by it in a pecuniary point of view, I hope and trust she will reap a rich reward for her goodness towards suffering humanity. Yours, truly, D. BUGBEE.

MISCELLANY.

A STORY OF A LEAP YEAR.

Sam Smith sat at home, on New Year's day, in dishabille. His beard was unshaved, his hair was uncombed, his boots were unblacked, and he was leaning back in picturesque attitude, with his heels against the mantlepiece, smoking a cigar. Sam thought to himself that it was leap year, and how glorious it would be if the ladies could only be induced to pop the question, in accordance with their ancient privileges. As he sat watching the smoke which so gracefully curled, his fancy glowed with the idea. How delightful it would be to have the dear creatures fondling on him, and with tender glances endeavoring to do the agreeable! As he meditated his heart softened, and he began to feel a squeamish, womanish sensibility diffuse itself over his feelings, and, thought he would faint with propriety the first time a young lady should squeeze his hand.

'Rap, rap, rap,' sounded at the door. 'Mercy,' exclaimed he, 'if here isn't Miss Jones, and I all in dishabille, and looking like a fright—goodness gracious! I must go, right away, and fix myself up.'

As he left the room Miss Jones entered, and with a composed air intimated that she would wait. Miss Susan Jones was a firm believer in woman's rights, and now that the season was propitious, she determined to take advantage thereof, and do a little courting on her own hook. It was one of woman's privileges, which had been usurped by the tyrant, man, and she was determined to assert her rights, in spite of the hollow formalities of a false system of society.

Meanwhile, with a palpitating heart, Sam Smith went through a series of personal adornments. The last twist was given to his collar, the last curl to his whiskers, and, with white cambric in hand, he descended to the parlor. Miss Jones rushed to receive him, and, grasping his hand with fervor, said: 'Dearest, how beautiful you look,' accompanying her words with a glance of undisguised admiration.

'Spare the blushes of a modest young man,' said Sam, applying his cambric to his face to hide his confusion.

'Nay, my love, why so coy?' said Susan; 'turn not away those lovely eyes, dark as the jet, but sparkling as the diamond. Listen to the vows of fond affection. Here let us rest,' said she, drawing him to a sofa; 'here, with my arm round thee, will I protest my true affection.

'Leave me, oh, leave,' murmured Sam, 'think of my youth, my inexperience—spare, oh spare, my palpitating heart.'

'Leave thee,' said Susan, pressing him closer to her, 'never, until the story of restless nights, of unquiet days, of aspiration, fond emotions, and undying love, is laid before thee. Know that for years I have nursed for thee a secret passion. Need I tell how each manly beauty moved me; how I worshipped like a sun-flower in the lurid light of those scarlet tresses; how my fond heart was entrapped in the meshes of those magnificent whiskers; how I was willing to yield up to the government of that imperial; thy manners, so modest, so delicate, enchanted me—joy to me—for thy joy was my joy. My heart is thine—take it—take it—but first let me snatch one kiss from those ruby lips.'

The over-wrought feelings of the delicate youth were too strong, and he fainted from excess of joy. Meanwhile the enamored maiden hung fondly over him, and—

Slowly the eyes of Samuel Smith opened—he gazed wildly around him—then meeting the ardent gaze of his 'lover,' he blushed deeply, and behind his kerchief faintly faltered out, 'ask my pa.'

MISCELLANY.

A STORY OF A LEAP YEAR.

Sam Smith sat at home, on New Year's day, in dishabille. His beard was unshaved, his hair was uncombed, his boots were unblacked, and he was leaning back in picturesque attitude, with his heels against the mantlepiece, smoking a cigar. Sam thought to himself that it was leap year, and how glorious it would be if the ladies could only be induced to pop the question, in accordance with their ancient privileges. As he sat watching the smoke which so gracefully curled, his fancy glowed with the idea. How delightful it would be to have the dear creatures fondling on him, and with tender glances endeavoring to do the agreeable! As he meditated his heart softened, and he began to feel a squeamish, womanish sensibility diffuse itself over his feelings, and, thought he would faint with propriety the first time a young lady should squeeze his hand.

'Rap, rap, rap,' sounded at the door. 'Mercy,' exclaimed he, 'if here isn't Miss Jones, and I all in dishabille, and looking like a fright—goodness gracious! I must go, right away, and fix myself up.'

As he left the room Miss Jones entered, and with a composed air intimated that she would wait. Miss Susan Jones was a firm believer in woman's rights, and now that the season was propitious, she determined to take advantage thereof, and do a little courting on her own hook. It was one of woman's privileges, which had been usurped by the tyrant, man, and she was determined to assert her rights, in spite of the hollow formalities of a false system of society.

Meanwhile, with a palpitating heart, Sam Smith went through a series of personal adornments. The last twist was given to his collar, the last curl to his whiskers, and, with white cambric in hand, he descended to the parlor. Miss Jones rushed to receive him, and, grasping his hand with fervor, said: 'Dearest, how beautiful you look,' accompanying her words with a glance of undisguised admiration.

'Spare the blushes of a modest young man,' said Sam, applying his cambric to his face to hide his confusion.

'Nay, my love, why so coy?' said Susan; 'turn not away those lovely eyes, dark as the jet, but sparkling as the diamond. Listen to the vows of fond affection. Here let us rest,' said she, drawing him to a sofa; 'here, with my arm round thee, will I protest my true affection.

'Leave me, oh, leave,' murmured Sam, 'think of my youth, my inexperience—spare, oh spare, my palpitating heart.'

'Leave thee,' said Susan, pressing him closer to her, 'never, until the story of restless nights, of unquiet days, of aspiration, fond emotions, and undying love, is laid before thee. Know that for years I have nursed for thee a secret passion. Need I tell how each manly beauty moved me; how I worshipped like a sun-flower in the lurid light of those scarlet tresses; how my fond heart was entrapped in the meshes of those magnificent whiskers; how I was willing to yield up to the government of that imperial; thy manners, so modest, so delicate, enchanted me—joy to me—for thy joy was my joy. My heart is thine—take it—take it—but first let me snatch one kiss from those ruby lips.'

The over-wrought feelings of the delicate youth were too strong, and he fainted from excess of joy. Meanwhile the enamored maiden hung fondly over him, and—

Slowly the eyes of Samuel Smith opened—he gazed wildly around him—then meeting the ardent gaze of his 'lover,' he blushed deeply, and behind his kerchief faintly faltered out, 'ask my pa.'

THREE MINUTES BY THE WATCH.

Blunders by Irish waiters, of the most curious and laughable character, are as common as bricks; but the most laughable one we have heard of since the waiter scooped out the watermelon and served up the beautiful green rind, is a little misunderstanding, that occurred at one of our principal hotels, a few days since, to a very particular English gent, with a very short tailed coat, a large number of plaits on his pants, a considerable amount of drab cloth gaiters, a remarkably small cane, and yellow gloves. He had just arrived from the commercial emporium of Great Britain and Ireland, via Boston, New York, and a number of other small towns and villagers. He approached the breakfast table, prepared to make a decided impression on the American public and give them a pretty fair idea of un Englias en voyage, and after selecting a situation possible for the accomplishment of his purposes, beckoned a waiter to him and stuck his eye-glass in his eye—not the waiter's eye, but his own individual organ. After surveying him a moment he addressed him with 'Are-a there-e any English waiters 'e-re?'

'Which sir?' inquired the waiter.

'English waiters—don't you 'ere me?'

'Oh, yis sir; of coorse I do. Plinty of 'em sir. What 'ud ye plase to take for yer breakfast, sir?'

'You're not an English waiter, sir!' replied the gent.

'Oh, yis sir; I don't speak a devil a word besides English, exceptin' Irish; but I'm a lawful subjec of Queen Victory.'

'Well, then, if I can't get an English servant to wait upon me, I must take an Irish one.'

'Yis sir,' said the lawful subject of Her Gracious Majesty, Queen Victory.'

'Well, then, get me a couple of eggs and boil them precisely three minutes, not one bubble more, and a cup of coffee—beef steak, very rare, and some toast.'

'Yis sir,' said the waiter, and started off.

'And recollect, three minutes for the eggs,' said the gent, calling him back.

'Yis sir,' said the waiter.

The gent disposed himself to the best advantage and awaited the arrival of the eggs. Upon cracking the shells they were as hard as a lapstone, and with the utmost indignation he turned upon the waiter and inquired of him if he had not directed him to boil them three minutes.

'Yis sir,' replied the waiter, 'I did sir—I counted them myself.'

[illegible] meditated his heart softened, claimed the gent, with as much surprise as he had just heard that Louis Phillippe had suggested the propriety of divorcing Albert from Victoria, and marrying her to one of his own sons.

'Divil a once, sir,' said the Irishman, 'divil a one to look at. What should I be afther looking at the clock for all this time?'

'Why this is too much, positively!' said the gent. 'Here, you stupid fellow, take my watch and go into the kitchen, and boil me a couple of eggs just three minutes with it.'

'Yis sir,' said the waiter, taking the watch.

'Do you understand now?' inquired the gent.

'Of coorse, sir,' was the reply, and off he started.

At the expiration of the three minutes appeared the waiter with the breakfast, and on the plate with the eggs the watch was deposited. As the gent was about to take up the watch, the waiter stopped him by exclaiming, 'Take care, sir; you will burn your fingers, it's hot sir.'

'What's hot?' inquired the gent.

'The watch, sir.'

'The watch,' echoed the gent.

'Yis sir; sure didn't ye tell me to bile the eggs with it three minutes, and didn't I do it?'

'What!' said the horror-stricken gent, starting up, 'boiled the watch!'

'Yis sir, three minutes.'

The gent, like the watch, was completely done, and seizing his gold lever, he made a speedy exit, uttering curses loud and deep, and tossing his watch from hand to hand, as a boy would a hot potatoe to cool it.

WITHOUT A PARALLEL. On the 27th January, 1848, in the city of Norwich, was living an aged gentleman, the progenitor of five generations, all now living. He was born on Sunday—his wife was born on Sunday—and his eldest child on Sunday; and he had a child born on every day in the week, commencing with Sunday morning and ending on Saturday night. All the first born of the five successive generations were born on Sunday—all are males, and all bear the same name, and all are now living. Of these, the last born is the son of the fourth child of her parents. The eldest of the five generations is ninety-six years of age—the youngest is between two and three months, so that the distance which separates the two extremes is but little less than a century.

ECCENTRIC COURTSHIP. Lorenzo Dow was preaching at Washington in June, 1830, and at the close of a religious meeting he observed that he was inclined to matrimony. If any lady in his congregation had similar inclinations she was requested to rise. A lady, a little advanced in life, gave the required intimation. Lorenzo visited her; she became his wife, and shared her fortune with him.

MORTGAGES.

The practice of giving mortgages of personal property, by debtors to their creditors, extensively prevails throughout this State, and either from a want of knowledge of the law respecting them, or from carelessness in the observance of the law applicable to this class of securities, they become the source of much litigation.

By the 5th section of the 74th chapter of the Revised Statutes, no mortgage of personal property is valid, except as between the parties to it, unless the mortgage be recorded by the clerk of the town where the mortgagor resides, or the property be delivered over to the mortgagee and the possession of it retained by him. It is further provided by 2d section of the 72d chapter of the statues of 1843, that in case the property is suffered to remain in the possession of the mortgagor, the mortgage in order to render it valid as against third persons, must not only be recorded by the clerk of the town where the mortgagor resides at the time of the making of the mortgage, but also by the clerk of the town in which he transacts his principal business. For instance, suppose A., who resides in Petersham, and is a trader or manufacturer in Athol, his principal place of business, mortgages his personal property to B. retaining possession of the mortgaged property B. must have his mortgage recorded in both the towns, to render it valid against any subsequent attaching creditors of A. or any bona fide purchasers.

The 1st section of the statutes last above cited, provides that the right of the mortgagor, or his assigns to the mortgaged property, shall not be forfeited until six days after the mortgagee, or his assigns, shall have given written notice to the mortgagor, or the person in possession of the property, claiming the same, of his intention to foreclose the mortgage for a breach of the condition thereof, and caused a copy of the notice to be recorded in the town clerk's office where the mortgage is recorded.

Personal property that is mortgaged, may be attached by the creditors of the mortgagor, and held in precisely the same manner, as if it were not mortgaged, provided the attaching creditor shall pay or tender to the mortgagee or his assigns the amount due on the mortgage within twenty-four hours after the same is demanded. Revised Statutes chapter 90, section 78.

It is the duty of the mortgagee, or person holding the property, in making the demand of the money due him on the mortgage, to state, in writing, a [illegible] the property is liable to him, which statement must be signed and sworn to as being just and true, and delivered to the attaching creditor or officer.

If the mortgagee knows of the attachment and would avail himself of the security of his mortgage upon the property so attached, he must make the demand for the amount due him upon the mortgage four days at least before the sitting of the Court to which the writ is returnable. If he omit to do this, he will lose his security upon the property and the attaching creditor will hold it. But if the mortgagee should not know of the existence of the attachment uutil after the time above mentioned he must make his statement, under oath, as above specified, at such time as the court, before whom the writ is pending, shall direct. And if he should not know of the attachment till after the final adjournment of the Court, at the term when judgment shall be made, such statement and demand may be made by the mortgagee or his assigns at any time within three months after such attachment shall come to his knowledge; such time, however, not to exceed one year from the rendition of such judgment.—Rev. Stat. ch. 90, sect. 79, and Statutes of 1843, ch. 72, sect. 3.

If the mortgagee shall demand and receive more than the amount justly due to him upon the mortgage, he shall be liable for the excess with twelve per cent. interest.—Rev. Stat ch. 90, sec. 80.

These are the principle statute provisions now in force in relation to mortgages of personal property, and they should be understood by all who may have occasion to have or receive securities of this description.

CHOICE OF A PROFESSION.

Many parents have sons, whom, when they arrive at years of discretion, they are uncertain what to do with. For instance, a respectable mechanic has a good, stout, hearty, well-disposed son, whom he wishes to bring up to respectability. If he is in easy circumstances, he somehow or other seems to think that his son must be brought up to some higher business than a mechanic. He therefore concludes that he must send him to college and make him a lawyer, a doctor, or a clergyman, and the honest, well-meaning parent labors hard to earn money to pay the expenses of a collegiate education, for the purpose of making him respectable, to make him take a higher rank in the world than that of a mechanic. Here is a great mistake. When the boy leaves college, what is he to do? He is then just qualified for nothing. He turns pedagogue for a while. He beats learning into the youthful progeny; but few, very few, think of pursuing the business of a schoolmaster as a permanent profession. After continuing it for a year or two, he quits it, and then commences the study of one of the learned professions. Here are three or four years spent in preparing to become a professional man, at an additional expense to his father. He at last is admitted to the bar, or receives the degree of M. D., or is licensed to preach. The next thing is to get a living by the profession he has chosen, and this is not so easy a matter. All the learned professions are full to overflowing, and there seems to be no room for new beginners. The consequence is, that the young aspirant for eminence drags along without getting business enough to pay the rent of an office. Year after year he toils, or would toil, if he had anything to do, without making half enough to pay his own expenses. To be sure, there are some whose superior intellect and commanding talents will enable them to rise at once to eminence and to command a business which will render them independent; but such cases are few and far between.

When such do occur, the superiority of mental power will shine out beforehand and should be fostered. But the propensity which some mechanics have of bringing their sons up at college to make them more respectable, we think to be a great error. It is injuring his son more than benefitting him, unless some extraordinary mental energy displays itself in the youth. He goes through college, and thence, " Proceeding soon a graduated dunce,"

he is just fitted for—what? He has spent the best part of his youthful days in qualifying himself for a profession from which he cannot gain a living, or at least a very scanty one.

In our humble opinion, as the professions now are, we would say to mechanics, and indeed to professional men, in ninety cases out of a hundred, give your sons a good education and then put them as apprentices to some respectable business. They will then, as soon as their term of apprenticeship is expired, be independent, capable of earning an honest living at once. The profession of a mechanic is daily becoming more and more respectable, thanks to the good sense and good judgement of the present age; and it can no longer be thrown out as a mark of reproach, 'you are a mechanic. It is, on the contrary, an honor.

As the question has been recently discussed among a few mechanics, what they should do with their sons, we would repeat, give them a good education and then bring them up as mechanics or farmers, if you wish to insure them a comfortable, honorable and independent living and station in society.

DRESS AND DRESSING.

It is folly for persons to inveigh against find fault with nature for giving such beautiful tints to flowers. What they should aim at is, to educate the taste of those over whom they have control, and to make them, by an early exercise, arrive at a knowledge of what is becoming to themselves and pleasing to others, according to their station and their means. There is ample verge and room enough for attractive dressing within the circle of every class of society. The servant may dress becomingly without encroaching upon the domains of her mistress; and the mistress may dress very neatly without fear of being confounded with her servant. These distinctions, if persons early pay that care and attention to their apparel which is desirable, will show themselves without an effort. The tailor, indeed, has a great deal to do with the dress; but there are a variety of little matters which are not in his department, and it is in these minutiæ that the taste of the wearer is shown. So with the female dress; it is not the milliner that gives grace, and elegance, and neatness to the wearer, but the wearer herself; and the art of doing this is not acquired in a short time—it does not come to the call, but is rather the imperceptible result of a good education, which commences in early life, and which adapts itself to the after situation of life—in wealth or poverty youth or age. The amount of time expended in the process may often seem great, and yet, if not excessive, it is well repaid in the pleasure and satisfaction that it gives, and the general effect it produces. The sleep that restores the exhausted frame is not more renovating to the body than the act of arraying it for the duties of the day, which not only occupies, but amuses the mind—dissipates ennui—stimulates it to exertion—and prepares it for entering on the daily round of labor or occupation.

TOUGH STORY ABOUT A NEGRO. It is stated in an Augusta, Georgia, paper, that a negro man of that place, of middling age and size, weighing about 150 pounds, in the short space of two hours, at the usual hour for breakfast, ate and drank the enormous quantity of provisions comprized in the following list, viz: 13 cat-fish, 2 shad, 1 1-2 dozen biscuit, 40 flat cakes, 1 1-2 lb. butter, 6 links sausages, 23 eggs, 30 ears of corn, 4 chickens, 2 slices of beef-steak and 2 of liver, 1 gallon back bone stew, 1 large plate rice, 19 cups of coffee, and 1 pint of brandy. The inconvenience attending this experiment was so trifling, that he immediately walked to another part of the city and ate 17 watermelons, expressing a desire to partake of more could they have been found. It may be proper to add, in connection with the above, and it would seem strange too, that as regards his ordinary habits of eating and drinking, he is remarkably abstemious.

Women have more strength in their looks than we have in our laws, and more power in their tears than we have in our arguments.

A GIZZARD FOR A SOUL. Two Vermonters, one of whom stuttered badly, contracted together for a quantity of fencing rails, and the agreement was that they should be paid for in advance, to be delivered in good quality and condition, and at a very low price. The rails were delivered to the stutterer by the other, and shortly after they met at a militia muster, when the following dialogue took place:

'Hallo, Joe! Well, you got the rails didn't ye?'

'Y-ye-yes! and be darned to ye! You ch-ch-cheated me most aw-aw-all-firedly, d-darn ye!'

'Why, what's the matter, Joe? Wa'n't they good ones?'

'G-g-good ones? I g-guess they was! You p-p-promised to send p-p-pine ones, and wh-wh-when they c-e-'ome they w-was all he-'emlock! And b-b-besides, you agreed they sh-should all be st-straight, and they are as cr-crooked as your le-legs, you b-blasted cheat, you!'

'Never mind, Joe, come over toworrow, and mother'll give you a calf's runet to make it up.'

'Go to g-g-grass with your r-run-runnet and your m-m-mother too. She's as st-stingy as T-time in the p-p primer, and you're jest like her. I t-tell you what 'tis, Sam, when you was b-born, the old m-m-man found he could b-buy a g-gizzard two cents ch-cheaper than a s-soul, and s-so he thonght he'd m-m-m-'ake a g-g-gizzard do! S-so you ha-haven't got no s-soul, but a d-darn'd mean g-g-gizzard!'

TAKING A RUM SWEAT. Every body, almost, has heard of a 'rum sweat,' and ordinary modus operandi. It is a favorite and sovereign remedy with many amateur practitioners for a 'bad cold.' We heard lately of a new method of getting up the steam which we must tell—we are bound to. Not a hundred miles from the thriving town of Athol, Massachusetts, there lives a mahogany faced man whose daily potations are somewhat stronger than catnip tea. He has been known to toddle under the weight of a 'stone in his hat,' any day these number of years. Yet the man is not bereft of all self-respect, but demeans himself as well as he is able, and not unfrequently indulges in the luxury of a clean shirt. It was to provide and array himself with one of these useful articles one bright Sunday morning, that this son of Baccus built a rousing warm fire in the stove, and fastened his door to promote the comfort and security of the operation. Being thus prepared, he leisurely stripped himself, and taking the primitive garment alluded to [illegible] to it. He had managed to get one arm into the sleeve, and was trying to discover an opening for the head when he lost his perpendicular, and began to step back—and back he went, endeavoring vainly to stop himself, or 'see out'—that hot stove being precisely in range—till his bare and shrinking calves came in contact, and he took a square seat upon its top! He roared and roasted; he legged and baked; he screamed and fricaseed, till his door was burst from its fastenings, and he dragged from his dreadful seat, writhing and bellowing with agony. Many a long night he groaned and cursed, and many a torturing remedy did the doctors apply before he recovered.

THE FEMALE TEMPER. No trait of character is more valuable in a female than the possession of a sweet temper. Home can never be made happy without it. It is like the flowers that spring up in our pathway, reviving and cheering us. Let a man go home at night, wearied and worn by the toils of the day, and how soothing is a word dictated by a kind disposition. It is sun-shine falling on the heart. He is happy, and the cares of life are forgotten. A sweet temper has a soothing influence over the minds of a whole family. Where it is found in the wife and mother, you observe kindness and love predominating over the natural feelings of a bad heart. Smiles, kind words and looks characterize the children, and peace and love have their dwellings there. Study, then, to acquire and retain a sweet temper. It is more valuable than gold, it captivates more than beauty; and to the close of life it retains all its freshness and power.

ENERGY OF CHARACTER. Energy of character is the philosopher's stone of this life, and should be engraved upon every heart—it is that which has peopled the temple of fame—drawn the veil from science, and developed the wondrous powers of nature. With it, men become good and great. Without, no great enterprise ever has or ever will be accomplished. Give a man energy of character and he is made, put him where you will. He will rise in spite every obstacle. If he fall once, he will try again; no opposition can beat him down. Energy of character is the true secret whereby men in every age of the world, have arrived at eminence and distinction.

ICELAND. The punishment of capital crimes in Iceland is death; and the criminal is not hanged, but beheaded. It is a fact, however, that for many years, no Icelander has been found who would undertake the office of executioner, so that it was necessary for the very few who have been sentenced to suffer death, to be conveyed to Norway, to receive the punishment for their crimes. The common mode of punishing offences of a less heinous kind, is either by whipping, or close confinement and hard labor in the Tringhuns, or House of Correction, for certain years, or for life.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, FEB. 19, 1848.

John A. Green, Editor.

HON. JOSEPH RICHARDS. This name has been erased from the register of the living, but the memory of an honest man will forever remain emblazoned in the affections of friends. Our correspondent in his obituary notice has truthfully spoken of the character of the deceased, and we have no disposition to lengthen or dwell on the memory of departed worth, as it saddens the soul. He was indeed an upright man—a citizen, truly valued, estimable and beloved—a neighbor kindly in good offices—a faithful, fast and judicious friend. But he has left us, gone to the place prepared for all the living, and our only consolation should be to imitate his virtues, and in the language of Divine inspiration, which the closing moments of his existence beautifully illustrated—"Be ye also ready."

SLEIGH RIDES. The excellent sleighing for several days past has been richly enjoyed. Heaven has bountifully granted to the creatures of earth who enjoy such sources of gratification, a delightful season of recreation. The Hancock House in this town, has been literally "crammed," and the "landlord" has been well paid for his labors. Whoever generously treats his patrons, and George understands that business, will always have a full house. A good fare is what we like, and we guess others are of the same opinion.

THE COMET. A semi-occasional paper with this title, issued at Dedham by Herman Mann, Esq., has reached us. This is its twenty-third appearance, and unlike comets in general, which are said to be the forerunners of war, it is dead set against—the Mexican War. It is also decidedly opposed to the removal of the "Granite Court House from Dedham to Roxbury." There is another peculiarity about this "Comet"—it "can be made to appear to order, when a sufficiency of the proper material is furnished, whereby to lengthen its tail."

PUB. DOC. We are obliged to our friend, Hon. J. Q. Adams, for the slight perusal of public documents which he has sent us, but must inform him that the Quincy Lyceum exists, technically speaking, only in the name,—less than twenty-five members composing the once flourishing and most useful institution of the kind ever instituted. We will willingly send to the few members of the Lyceum the documents that may be sent to our care, for our friend's sake, but they are of no particular benefit to ourselves.

DICK CROWNINGSHIELD AND ZACHARY TAYLOR. We have received a cogent little tract of twelve pages, entitled, "Dick Crowningshield, the assassin, and Zachary Taylor, the soldier: the difference." The contrast is drawn in the most impressive manner. Mr. Wright does not believe that "one murder makes a villain, millions a hero,' but he thinks that the wholesale murderer is the most guilty of all.

LECTURE ON PEACE. A correspondent wishes us to give notice that Henry C. Wright will address the people of Quincy on Sunday evening, on the subject of peace, at the Town Hall, commencing at half past six o'clock.

Mr. Wright will address the people of Weymouth Landing on Sunday.

POLITICAL LIFE. Louis Joseph Papineau in 1836 was speaker of the Canadian parliament, with a majority of twenty to one at his back. In 1837 he was an outlaw, with £1000 on his head. In 1838 he was to be put to death untried if found in Canada. In 1847 he fulminated once more his anathemas against colonial rule. In 1848 he will be the successor of Sir Allen McNab, the hero of Fort Schlossler, as speaker of the third united parliament of Canada. Such are the vagaries of political life.

SHOCKING DEATH. Mrs. Lanman of Norwich, (Ct.) widow of the late Judge Lanman, was burned to death on the 11th inst, by her clothes taking fire at the grate. She was about seventy years of age. She left four children by a former marriage, of whom Park Benjamin, Esq., of New York is one.

DRESSING SALOON. When our friends visit the city and wish a clean shave and their hair shampooed in good style, they cannot do better than to visit Julius Spitz's Saloon, 154 Washington street. His incomparable hair fluid is one of the best articles for the purpose in use, and to those who are troubled with the headache it is an infallable remedy.

CONGRESS. The ten regiment bill is still the theme for speeches in the Senate. A memorial from Midshipman Rodgers, praying compensation for services rendered in the war with Mexico, has been presented and referred; also, a memorial against prosecuting the war, from the citizens of Ohio and Michigan. Resolutions from the House, proposing thanks to Gen. Scott, have been passed, 46 yeas to 1 nay—Mr. Hale of New Hampshire. The House has got the war loan bill under discussion, now that they have got through with the message. Mr. Hale of Mass., proposed an amendment, that no portion of the money granted should hereafter be expended in the prosecution of the war. A vote was taken on this subject—ayes 23, noes 118. A message from the President states that no peace propositions have been received from Mexico since September 6th. Mr. Grinnell, of this State, from the Committee of Commerce, has reported a bill to establish a collection district of Wareham, Mass.—also, a bill to change the location of certain lighthouses and buoys.

SINGULAR MALFORMATION. Dr. E. F. Clarke of Portland, (Me.) states in a newspaper, that on a post mortem examination of the late Rev. Jason Whitman, who died of pleurisy, the heart was found in the right cavity of the thorax, its apex inclined to the right, the two lobes of the left lung filling the left cavity. The right lung had only two lobes, the place of the third being occupied by the heart. The liver was in the left side, its reversed form suited to the left hypochondrium. The position of the stomach was reversed, the small end to the left, the large towards the right side—the latter, with the spleen, occupying the usual place of the liver. The large intestines were in the left side of the abdomen, passing from the left to the right. The sigmoid flexture was in the left side. The great omentum was wanting. All the organs of the abdomen were healthy, but reversed.

LEGISLATURE. Resolves, recommending Congress to pass a law authorizing a direct tax to pay the expenses of the war; also, that no further supplies should be granted, and that the American forces should be immediately withdrawn, were introduced in the House last Saturday, which were ordered to be printed. A petition for the repeal of the usury laws has been presented. In Convention of the two Houses Messrs Ebenezer Bradbury and John Branning have been elected Directors of the Western Railroad for two years. So near as we can judge, a majority of the towns in this County have remonstrated against the removal of the County seat. Some difficulty having occurred at the Worcester Depot, in which an officer was prevented serving a writ of habeas corpus, on two minors who had enlisted without their parent's consent, the matter was brought before the House, and after much debate and order was passed, providing for the appointment of a committee to "inquire if any further legislation is necessary to procure the proper service of the writ of habeas corpus, and for the better protection of personal liberty in this commonwealth.

MEXICO. The news from the capital is down to the 14th ult. All was quiet. There has been a fight between Col. Hay's Rangers and a Guerilla band, in which eight Mexicans were killed and the band repulsed. The ship Rajah arrived at Very Cruz on the 20th from New York, having three hundred and fifty troops on board.

FOREIGN. The steamer Hibernia arrived at New York on Wednesday, bringing eight days later news from Europe. Trade and Commerce have manifested symptoms of improvement. Money is more abundant and obtained on easier terms. The influx of bullion into England still continues. Accounts from the manufacturing districts show a gradual improvemevt. Some few failures have occurred, but none of them are of importance.

NEW JUDGE. The Governor has nominated to the Council, Hon. Theron Metcalf of Dedham, (Reporter of the decisions of the Supreme Court,) a Justice of the Supreme Court, under the act of the Legislature to increase the number of Justices of the Supreme Judicial Court.

IMMIGRANTS. During 1847, no less than a quarter of a million of human beings have left their domicils in the Old World to seek homes in the New. It is said that during the first nine months of the last year, two hundred and ninety thousand have arrived at our chief cities, being an increase of eighty three thousand over last year's influx.

SUPPOSED MURDER IN SALEM. An Irishman, named James Curran, was called from his bed on the morning of the 7th inst., about one o'clock, by two men who knocked and inquired for him. He went to the door in his night dress, and was not seen alive afterwards. His body has been found in an old well. Six persons have been arrested on suspicion.

ARREST. William McVetie, supposed to have been concerned in the robbery of Mr. E. Packard's store, in this town, some time since, was arrested last Tuesday, after a long chase and a hard fight. He was charged with stealing four hundred dollars worth of goods from a store in Cambridgeport, and the same were found in his house. He was committed for trial.

THE CONCERT. The Hauser Family gave a concert in this town last Wednesday evening, but to a very small audience. It does not speak much for the good taste of the people of Quincy, for it is well known that "Jim Crow concerts," and performances of that character, are always fully attended. The singing of the Hausers is pronounced, by musical critics, to be fully equal to that of the celebrated Rainer Family, of whom they are connections; they are certainly deserving of a better reception, as regards numbers, than was given them in this town, although those who did attend were highly delighted, as was manifested by the applause given.

STATE DOCUMENT. Our thanks are due the Secretary of the Commonwealth for a copy of the "fifteenth Annual Report of the Trustees of the State Lunatic Asylum at Worcester." From this work we learn, that the expenditures of the institution the last year, including balance against the Hospital, Dec. 1, 1846, have been $39,444 45, while the receipts have been $45,662 92; leaving a balance, in favor of the Hospital, of $6,218 47.

The prominent causes of the insanity of the 2429 patients, who, at different times, have been inmates of the Asylum, are thus given:—Intemperance, 306; Ill-health, 348; Masturbation, 155; Domestic Affliction, 244; Religion, 218; loss of property, 145.

TEMPERANCE SOCIETY ORGANIZATION. At the annual meeting of the Quincy Total Abstinance Society, recently held, the following officers were chosen for the year ensuing:

President—John Hardwick.
Vice President—William Pratt.
Secretary—David B. Stetson.
Corresponding Secretary—Seth Adams.
Treasurer—Jonathan Baxter.
Directors—George Veazie, Thomas Hardwick, Benjamin Bass, G. S. T. Whiting, Abram Prescott, J. B. Jones and Jonathan Leavitt, Jr.

ST JAMES CHURCH, ROXBURY. Rev. John Wayland, D. D., of Canandaigua, (N. Y.) has accepted the invitation to become rector of St Jame's Church, Roxbury, (Episcopal. He is a brother of Rev. Francis Wayland, D. D., President of Brown University, (Baptist.)

THE CHILDREN OF LAFAYETTE. "The spirit of the father is beaming in the son." George Washington Lafayette is a member of the French Chamber of Deputies, and at the last election, Oscar, the grandson of the old Republican hero and patriot, was elected to a seat beside his virtuous and noble father, who inherits the name of the immortal Washington. Thus the children of the mighty dead are nobly sustaining by their virtue and patraism, the fame of their fathers. They both sit among the liberal members.

PRINTERS IN BATTLE. In his speech at Concord, Gen. Pierce mentioned a fact, for which, he said, he could not satisfactorily account, which was that among the new levies, the printers exceeded any other vocation by 20 per cent. They were uniformly brave, intelligent and efficient soldiers.

THE TIME FOR PRUNING VINES. Mr. Underhill, of Croton Point, famous for the culture of superior grapes, says that the best time for pruning vines is in March or April; that he never pruned in February unless for convenience, and then he employed artificial means to stop the bleeding. When pruned in March or April the vines were in no danger from bleeding.

TRUSTEES OF THE STATE LUNATIC HOSPITAL. The Governor and Council have appointed for the Board of Trustees in this institution for the ensuing year, Hon. Thomas Plunkett of Pittsfield, Hon. Stephen Salisbury of Worcester, Hon. Stephen C. Phillips of Salem, Hon. Thomas French of Canton, Hon. Isaac Davis of Worcester.

OLD COLONY RAILROAD. The receipts for passengers and freight for nine weeks and four days, from December 1st, 1847, to February 5th, 1848, were $29,351 25. The receipts for corresponding time last year, $22,273 73. Increase over last year, $7,077 52, being at the rate of $37,000 for the year.

CHOWDER. "Seth," at the Palo Alto, had such a crowd last Saturday that his chowder disappeared before we had a chance. He informs us that this evening he will "defy all creation." Probably he thought of aldermanic corporations; there are a few of this sort in town, and they will give him a "pull."

"He's gone—but has he perished? No!
Virtue survives death's fatal blow;
The cherished memory of the just Shall flourish o'er their sleeping dust."

The title prefixed to the name of our departed friend, in common usage, simply has reference to a station of honor and trust which he had occupied. But in the present instance we cannot employ a more appropriate term to describe the character of the man. Mr. Richards was, in the best and highest sense of the word, an honorable man.

He commenced life's career unaided by any advantages of birth or fortune. By self culture were the noble qualities of his mind and heart developed. During his early years he had little time, except in the intervals of toil, to devote to literary and scientific pursuits; yet he was able to enrich his mind with ample and varied stores of knowledge, thus showing how wisely and how well he had employed his leisure hours. His intelligent views on every subject gave a charm to his conversation that rendered his company always attractive and engaging, whether in the social circle or the private interview.

He was well-informed in all the departments of knowledge; but his favorite science was mathematics. As a mathematician he acquired a high pre-eminence. Many a problem has he solved which had severely tasked the powers of the professors in our highest seminaries of learning. Questions of a practical nature were the principal ones that occupied his attention, and the application of his knowledge to mechanical purposes was his constant aim. Scientific calculations guided him in all his undertakings, and he was thus enabled to foresee results with mathematical certainty. No other name has been more intimately, more favorable or more honorably associated with the granite business than his. Granite-workers acknowledge their obligations to him for important improvements in the implements and apparatus used in their pursuit, and many a granite structure stands as a monument of his ingenuity, taste and skill.

As a member of society, he enjoyed in an eminent degree the confidence, respect and esteem of his fellow citizens. None who knew him could fail to appreciate his intelligence, moral worth and honorable character. He was chosen repeatedly to fill the various offices of responsibility in the town of his residence; he represented that town in the legislature for a series of years, and finally served as a Senator from the County during the usual terms. In the discharge of his public duties he was uniformly governed by liberal and comprehensive views; his suggestions were always received with attention and respect, and but very few men have exerted a happier influence over the minds of others. The measures of public policy nearest his heart, and which most deeply engaged his attention, were such as related to the diffusion of knowledge, the establishment of charitable and philanthropic institutions, the relief of the oppressed, and the reform of transgressors. The record of his votes, as a legislator, would do honor alike to the head and heart of any public man.

In the private walks of life we could scarcely find his equal in the qualities that adorn and ennoble human nature. Of the hundreds, even thousands of different persons who have been from time to time in his employ, no one has ever questioned the honesty, justice or equity of his dealings. As an intelligent and upright man of business, a friend and benefactor of the poor, a guide and counsellor to the erring, tender and true in all the relations of domestic life, he possessed in unwonted measure the qualities which endeared him to those with whom he dwelt. He filled the relations of son, brother, husband and father with steadfast fidelity, sustained by a sentiment of duty stronger than the love of self. He lived, a lover of truth, an obeyer of duty, a sincere friend, a consistent christian.

The void occasioned by the death of such a man is one that cannot easily be filled. The loss is alike irreparable to his family and friends, and to the community at large; for in addition to the cares of his own extensive business, and besides his solicitude for the welfare of his family, he was ever alive to the anxieties and trials of others. Many a time after the fatigues of a day devoted to his own affairs, has he encroached upon the hours of sleep at night in his desire to extricate a neighbor or acquaintance from misfortune. Great indeed is the number of those who now must feel that they have lost their best adviser and friend.

He has gone—but he has left us an example worthy of being cherished as a pattern of imitation. He has gone to enjoy that holy rest which is the sure reward of a well-spent life. His end was peaceful, as his life was virtuous. Although he had but arrived at full maturity, not having reached the period of declining age, and with all the ties about him that attach the heart to earth, yet when he felt that his career was drawing to a close, he resigned himself without a murmur to the will of heaven. The hope of a blissful immortality, and of a happy re-union with the beloved members of his family who had gone before him, illuminated the dark valley of death, and filled his soul with a divine serenity.

"He had so lived, that when his summons came
To enter the pale realms of shade, and take
His chamber in the silent halls of death,
He went, not like the quarry-slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon, but sustained and soothed
By an unfaltering trust, approached his grave,
Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams."

Dentistry.

GRANDIN, DUDLEY & BLAKE,
SURGEON DENTISTS,
238 Washington Street—near Summer Street,
BOSTON,

PERFORM all Operations belonging to the DENTAL PROFESSION, and continue to Manufacture and insert the purest and best of MINERAL TEETH, upon the ATMOSPHERIC, and on all other principles as practised by the best Dentists in this country and Europe.

Every Tooth we FILL, and every one we INSERT, we insure, according to circumstances; and all Dental Plate Work executed at our rooms is warranted to be equal to any that can be produced, and to give perfect satisfaction.

☞ We are administering the CHLOROFORM every day with success, and extracting Teeth by the dozen, without pain, and have never known it to affect the patient unfavorably, and yet we charge no MORE than when we do not give it.

The public will not forget that to us is due the credit of the great and important improvement recently made in the method of inserting Artificial Teeth, both on Gold Plate and Pivots, and also preserving diseased Teeth and stumps in a healthy condition.

☞ Instruction given in relation to the New Method invented by us, and whole sets inserted in the most difficult mouths, for country or travelling Dentists, on reasonable terms. Pivot Teeth adapted to the mouth on our plan are far more durable and permanent than upon gold plate, secured in the common way, and will never want resetting. When necessary to mount them on a plate of gold by our method, we extract no sound stumps, preserve the form of the mouth, and secure them so firmly that the patient can eat with them as well as if they were natural teeth, and they will last a whole life-time, and look perfectly natural.

To all who require the services of a Dentist, and particularly such as have been unskillfully served, we would 'make our best bow,' and say, don't wait for an introduction, but call and see us at

Many a time after the fatigues of a day devoted to his own affairs, has he encroached upon the hours of sleep at night in his desire to extricate a neighbor or acquaintance from misfortune. Great indeed is the number of those who now must feel that they have lost their best adviser and friend.

He has gone—but he has left us an example worthy of being cherished as a pattern of imitation. He has gone to enjoy that holy rest which is the sure reward of a well-spent life. His end was peaceful, as his life was virtuous. Although he had but arrived at full maturity, not having reached the period of declining age, and with all the ties about him that attach the heart to earth, yet when he felt that his career was drawing to a close, he resigned himself without a murmur to the will of heaven. The hope of a blissful immortality, and of a happy re-union with the beloved members of his family who had gone before him, illuminated the dark valley of death, and filled his soul with a divine serenity.

"He had so lived, that when his summons came
To enter the pale realms of shade, and take
His chamber in the silent halls of death,
He went, not like the quarry-slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon, but sustained and soothed
By an unfaltering trust, approached his grave,
Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams."

Dentistry.

GRANDIN, DUDLEY & BLAKE,
SURGEON DENTISTS,
238 Washington Street—near Summer Street,
BOSTON,

PERFORM all Operations belonging to the DENTAL PROFESSION, and continue to Manufacture and insert the purest and best of MINERAL TEETH, upon the ATMOSPHERIC, and on all other principles as practised by the best Dentists in this country and Europe.

Every Tooth we FILL, and every one we INSERT, we insure, according to circumstances; and all Dental Plate Work executed at our rooms is warranted to be equal to any that can be produced, and to give perfect satisfaction.

☞We are administering the CHLOROFORM every day with success, and extracting Teeth by the dozen, without pain, and have never known it to affect the patient unfavorably, and yet we charge NO MORE than when we do not give it.

The public will not forget that to us is due the credit of the great and important improvement recently made in the method of inserting Artificial Teeth, both on Gold Plate and Pivots, and also preserving diseased Teeth and stumps in a healthy condition.

☞Instruction given in relation to the New Method invented by us, and whole sets inserted in the most difficult mouths, for country or travelling Dentists, on reasonable terms. Pivot Teeth adapted to the mouth on our plan are far more durable and permanent than upon gold plate, secured in the common way, and will never want resetting. When necessary to mount them on a plate of gold by our method, we extract no sound stumps, preserve the form of the mouth, and secure them so firmly that the patient can eat with them as well as if they were natural teeth, and they will last a whole life-time, and look perfectly natural.

To all who require the services of a Dentist, and particularly such as have been unskillfully served, we would 'make our best bow,' and say, don't wait for an introduction, but call and see us at

Friends, Patrons,

AND

FELLOW CITIZENS,

I wish you all a Happy New Year!!

NOW for a little fun and nonsense. There is quite an excitement about town, among the profession, because

GEORGE B. NIGHTINGALE

has been SHOEING UP not more than half of creation, for the last eight years, with

BOOTS & SHOES.

Well, let 'em "go it." "Guess there wont be much of a shower after all," as the chap said when Noah wouldn't let him get into the ark,—calculate to keep doing so right strait along, every time. Why my dear "fellow critters," we don't mean to brag, but you undertake to take a look at OUR Boots and Shoes and the first you know you get your foot right strait in; there you are, stuck fast; then out comes the old pocket book with THE SHINERS; that's just what we want, and nothing else,—much better than credit; credit takes time to no purpose, oftentimes, and time, you know, is money. The pay down system is the only true one, after all,—the best remedy for corns and unpleasant dreams. The man that takes a pair of BOOTS or SHOES with one hand, and PULLS OUT THE CASH with the other, is independent; like all other tubs, he stands on his own bottoms; give me the man that shells out the stuff, like a sheaf of wheat in cold weather and we'll set him on his taps in a giffy. I therefore advise all mankind, womankind, and every other kind that wears SHOE LEATHER, to CALL when they find themselves ailing about the UNDERSTANDINGS. The Doctors may tinker up the physical frame but I'll beat 'em hollow at repairing Damaged Soles (with the best material for such cases.)

P. S. Needn't be particular about knocking when you wish to come in; never mind for a little mud as we have it in abundance. Brooms are plenty and cheap for the tin.

With the money you can buy
Boots, Caps, Shoes—come and try;
Findings, also, made to use
For to make good Boots or Shoes.

When your Shoes are full of holes,
Or should need a pair of Soles,
I can mend them if you will
Just call in and pay the bill.

GEORGE B. NIGHTINGALE.

DR. WOOD'S
SARSAPARILLA
WILD CHERRY BITTERS.

THIS new and valuable extract of SARSAPARILLA and WILD CHERRY has been used with great success for the permanent removal of all such diseases as take their rise from an impure state of the blood; it promotes a healthy action of the Liver—strengthens the Nerves, and at once secures

HEALTH AND VIGOR

to the whole system. In all cases of

JAUNDICE, INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA, LOSS OF APPETITE, HABITUAL COSTIVENESS, SCROFULA, HEADACHE, LANGUOR, and that

DEPRESSION OF SPIRITS,

which is so common a complaint in the SPRING AND SUMMER

season of the year, this Medicine has not its equal—and a single trial will convince the most incredulous of its peculiar virtues.

For furthor particulars the reader is referred to pamphlets which will be furnished by the Agents, showing the estimation which this valuable Medicine is held by those who have used it.

☞CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC.☜

Be particular and ask for Doct. Wood's Sarsaparilla Wild Cherry Bitters, and receive no other. This is the first preparation of these articles combined, ever offered to the public, and the great success attending its use has induced the unprincipled to counterfeit and imitate. As a preventive, see that the bottles have the words "Dr. Wood's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Bitters," pressed on the glass, and that each label on the bottle is signed by the proprietor, E. Thornton, Jr., New Bedford.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

LINES ON THE DEATH OF A FRIEND.

BY W. A. BACON, DETROIT.

'Tis thus they leave us one by one,—
No earthly power can save;
And we may shed our tears in vain,
Beside the dearest grave.

From early life to manhood's prime,
Friends vanish from our sight
Like wrecks along the shore of time,
Or clouds in misty night.

The young, the lovely, good and gay,
The man of hoary head,
By death are daily snatched away,
And numbered with the dead.

How fleeting, oh! how short is life!
'Tis finished ere begun,
We scarce commence the mortal strife,
Before our work is done.

Then if on earth we may not stay--
No home on earth is given,
Show us, Great God, the narrow way
That leads from Earth to Heaven.

For the Quincy Patriot.

TO PRESIDENT POLK.

Poor President, I pity thee,
Thy lot is hard indeed;
You've need of many eyes to see,
You have so much to read.
And then so much to think about,
I wonder how you can
The hundredth part of it find out!
It seems too much for man.

While some are shoving you astern
Some push you on a pace!
Some others give you half a turn—
Some jostle in your place.
I wonder how you do your sums,
So many in your way;
I spose you have to scatter crumbs
To keep the dogs at bay.

If I were you, to end the strife,
I'd find a place alone,
And, taking Davy Crockett's life
To read and think upon,
I'd puzzle morning, noon and night,
'Till all my doubts had fled—
"Be very sure that I were right,
Then boldly go ahead."

Tho' Secretary I am not
Of Navy, War, or State,
My good advice you've cheaply got,
Unmingled with deceit.
Decision 's for the trial hour,
The State a head should boast,
And he who wields a nation's power
Himself should be a host.

F. M. ADLINGTON, Weymouth.

LOVE

Love makes a man sweat in his very shirt:
Changes his head into a pippin mellow;
And if the de'il should prove a naughty flirt,
It plays the very devil with a fellow. Moore.

To sit with her in some ice cream saloon,
And feed together with a single spoon;
To look into her eyes and whisper "lovey,"
While she responds with sighing accents "dovey,"
To place your hand on heart, and feel it beat,
Then tear it forth and dash it at her feet,
Ah! this is love. Byron.

I knew a man, sir, who was deep in love,
And knocked his beaver into a wheelbarrow!
And questioned closely, sir, he couldn't tell
The difference 'twixt a bootjack and a jackass.
Pope.

Sublime, it came refulgent in its power,
And pounced upon her heart; from thence,
Strange is the contest, she was there transformed,
And never dressed her baby doll again. Milton.

'Tis very sweet to tend a tater patch
With her you love, and sp de in hand
Unearth the vegetables with a delve,
To see them roll luxurism at her feet. Sapphe.

ANECDOTES.

A young lady of eighteen was engaged to be married to a gentleman of thirty six. Her mother, having noticed her low spirited for some time, inquired the reason. 'Oh dear! maamma!' replied the young lady, 'I was thinking about my husband being twice my age.'

'That's true—but he's only thirty six.'

'He's only thirty six now, mamma; but—but—when I'm sixty—'

'Well?—

'Oh! dear! then he'll be a hundred and twenty!'

'Mr. Snobs,' said one swindled creditor to another, 'Simpson, our debtor, pays attention to your daughter in secret?' 'Thank heaven!' replied Snobs, as he looked at his ledger page angrily,—'thank heaven, if he pays anything to anybody.'

'Do my ears deceive me?' said Augustus Fitzpop in a rapture, at the opera, 'can these be sounds of heaven, or do my ears deceive me?' 'Your ears may deceive you,' said old Rodger, in a semi audible voice, 'but they don't deceive any body else—they're the only true index we have of your character.'

A gentleman meeting one of his friends who was insolvent, expressed great concern for his embarrassment. 'You are mistaken, my dear sir,' was the reply, 'tis not I, it is my creditors who are embarrassed.'

'Are you not afraid your wife will get married again when you die?' 'I hope she may, as there will be one man in the world who will know how to pity me.'

At a Methodist meeting, the singer who led the tune, finding that the last word, which was Jacob, had not syllables to fill up the music, ended thus—"Ja-a-a Ja-a-a-a-fol de riddle cob!"

THE asperities of Disease are often enhanced by the rigorous measures undertaken by designing or ignorant persons in Attempting Cures. THE DISCRIMINATING KNOWLEDGE, whereby we may know these remedies which shall perfect a RAPID CURE, is of difficult acquisition.
It is in fact only obtained after LABORIOUS RESEARCH by the Student of Nature, the only true scholar of medicine, and the experience of the Sages of the Native Tribes are the true guides in directing those researches. If it were not for the invaluable gifts of the

Samaritan Balm.
For the cure of Coughs, Colds, and
Diseases of the Lungs!
ANOTHER evidence of the benefits derived from the use of this invaluable Medicine:
Boston, Nov. 1, 1847.
Messrs. Otis, Broaders & Co., Boston.
Gentlemen—Please send me by Express six dozen more of the "Samaritan Balm," its virtues are fully established in our neighborhood, and I do not hesitate to say that the sale of it has been far greater than any new medicine I ever attempted to introduce. Of its benefits I can speak from actual experience, as being decidedly the best remedy for colds and diseases of the Lungs I ever tried. Last winter I was sorely afflicted with an attack of the "Bronchitis," when the good lady whose invention it is kindly prepared me a bottle which has completely cured me; and from the benefits I myself have personally derived from its use, I feel grateful that she has been prevailed upon to give so valuable a medicine to the world. Notwithstanding she has done it without any wish to profit by it in a pecuniary point of view, I hope and trust she will reap a rich reward for her goodness towards suffering humanity. Yours, truly, D. BUGBEE.
☞Price one dollar per bottle—six bottles for five dollars.

GRAEFENBERG COMPANY'S OFFICE,
60 Broadway, New York, September 24th, 1847.

The very great increase of the GRAEFENBERG COMPANY'S business in New England, has rendered it necessary to re-organize the General Agency there. This is therefore to certify, that the NEW ENGLAND BRANCH OF THE GRAEFENBERG COMPANY, is now established at No. 154 Washington street, Boston, and that Mr. Edwin C. Barnes is duly appointed Secretary of said Branch; and that he is authorized to establish Local Depots, and to grant rights to vend the company's Medicines. Every Agent must have a certificate with the seal of the Company thereunto, signed by its Secretary and countersigned by the aforesaid Branch Secretary. No one is authorized to sell the Company's Medicines without such certificate. EDWARD BARTON, Secretary.

GRAEFENBERG MEDICINES.
The undersigned is fully prepared to establish a GRAEFENBERG DEPOT in all places of proper size in New England (except the State of Connecticut and that portion of Vermont west of the Green Mountains,) and also in the British Provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. Immediate application should be made either personally or by letter. As there will ordinarily be but one Depot in a town or village, the Agency will be very valuable.
The leading article to which public attention is invited is the GRAEFENBERG VEGETABLE PILLS, of which 30,000 boxes are sold each and every week. The following complaints yield with certainty to their power: Asthma, Bilious Complaints, Catarrh, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Erysipelas, Imperfect Digestion, Fluor Albus, Green Sickness, Heartburn, Headache, Jaundice, Liver Complaints, Rheumatism, and various diseases of the Stomach. In all CHRONIC COMPLAINTS the most implicit reliance may be placed upon them. Price 25 cents a box.
The names of the other Medicines are as follows:
THE CHILDREN'S PANACEA.
For summer complaints, dysentery, and all other affections of the stomach and bowels, it is infallible. Price 50 cents a bottle.
THE GRAEFENBERG SARSAPARILLA COMPOUND,
Warranted to make two quarts superior to any in the world. Price one dollar a bottle.
THE GREEN MOUNTAIN VEGETABLE OINTMENT.
Wherever inflammation exists, this ointment is a positive and speedy cure. Price 25 and 50 cents a box.
THE CONCENTRATED ELECTION.
For disorders of the Eyes this Lotion has no equal. For violent inflammation, weakness, or foreign substances in the eyes, it is an unfailing remedy. Price 25 cents per bottle, with full directions.
THE GRAEFENBERG HEALTH BITTERS.
Sovereign to build up the enervated system, to restore the appetite and clear the skin. Price 25 cents a package.
THE CONSUMPTIVE'S BALM.
This most extraordinary article is infallible, positively, in Consumption, Bronchitis, and Bleeding at the Lungs. It is only sent as ordered at $5 the quart. Consumptives may be sure of finding in this article that which will not disappoint their hopes.
The Graefenberg Gazette, published by the Company for gratuitous distribution, may be had on application to any one of their numerous Agents.

GRAEFENBERG COMPANY'S OFFICE,
60 Broadway, New York, September 24th, 1847.

The very great increase of the GRAEFENBERG Company's business in New England, has rendered it necessary to re-organize the General Agency there. This is therefore to certify, that the NEW ENGLAND BRANCH OF THE GRAEFENBERG COMPANY, is now established at No. 154 Washington street, Boston, and that Mr. Edwin C. Barnes is duly appointed Secretary of said Branch; and that he is authorized to establish Local Depots, and to grant rights to vend the company's Medicines. Every Agent must have a certificate with the seal of the Company thereunto, signed by its Secretary and countersigned by the aforesaid Branch Secretary. No one is authorized to sell the Company's Medicines without such certificate.
EDWARD BARTON, Secretary.

GRAEFENBERG MEDICINES.

The undersigned is fully prepared to establish a GRAEFENBERG DEPOT in all places of proper size in New England except the State of Connecticut and that portion of Vermont west of the Green Mountains) and also in the British Provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. Immediate application should be made either personally or by letter. As there will ordinarily be but one Depot in a town or village, the Agency will be very valuable.

To the leading article to which public attention is invited is the GRAEFENBERG VEGETABLE PILLS, of which 30,000 boxes are sold each and every week. The following complaints yield with certainty to their power: Asthma, Bilious Complaints, Catarrh, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Erysipelas, Imperfect Digestion, Fever &Ague, Gout, Green Sickness, Heartburn, Headache, Jaundice, Liver Complaints, Rheumatism, and various diseases of the Stomach. In all CHRONIC COMPLAINTS the most implicit reliance may be placed upon them. Price 25 cents a box.

The names of the other Medicines are as follows:

THE CHILDREN'S PANACEA.
For summer complaints, dysentery, and all other affections of the stomach and bowels, it is infallible. Price 50 cents a bottle.

THE GRAEFENBERG SARSAPARILLA COMPOUND.
Warranted to make two quarts superior to any in the world. Price one dollar a bottle.

THE GREEN MOUNTAIN VEGETABLE OINTMENT.
Wherever inflammation exists, this ointment is a positive and speedy cure. Price 25 and 50 cents a box.

THE GRAEFENBERG EYE LOTION.
For disorders of the Eyes this Lotion has no equal. For violent inflammation, weakness, or foreign substance in the eyes, it is an unfailing remedy. Price 25 cents per bottle, with full directions.

THE GRAEFENBERG HEALTH BITTERS.
Sovereign to build up the enervated system, to restore the appetite and clear the skin. Price 25 cents a package.

THE CONSUMPTIVE'S BALM.
This most extraordinary article is infallible, positively, in Consumption, Bronchitis, and Bleeding at the Lungs. It is only sent on ordered at $5 the quart. Consumptives may be sure of finding in this article that which will not disappoint their hopes.

The Graefenberg Gazette, published by the Company for gratuitous distribution, may be had on application to any one of their numerous Agents.

Quincy, Feb. 24th, 1848.

MISCELLANY.

NIGHT. Night is beautiful in itself, but still more beautiful is its associations; it is not linked as day is, with our cares and our toils, the business and littleness of life. The sunshine brings with it its action; we rise in the morning, and our task is before us; but night comes, and with it rest. If we leave sleep, and ask not of dreams forgetfulness, our waking is in solitude, and our employment is thought. Imagination has thrown her glory around the midnight—the orbs of Heaven, the silence, the shadows are steeped in poetry. Even in the heart of a crowded city, where the moonlight fell but upon pavement and roof, the heart would be softened, and the mind elevated, amid the loneliness of night's deepest and stillest hours.

DYSPEPSIA BREAD. Three quarts unbolted wheat meal; one quart soft water, warm, but not hot; one gill of fresh yeast; one gill of molasses, or not, as may suit the taste. If you put this in the oven at the exact time when it is risen enough, saleratus will not be necessary.

SEEING THE ELEPHANT.

The origin of this now common and expressive phrase, is thus described in one of our late western papers: Some years since, at one of the Philadelphia theatres, a pageant was in rehearsal in which it was necessary to have an elephant. No elephant was to be had. The 'wild beasts' were all travelling, and the property man, stage director and manager, almost had fits when they thought of it. Days passed in the hopeless task of endeavoring to secure one, but at last Yankee ingenuity triumphed, as, indeed, it always does; and an elephant was duly made to order, of wood, skins, paint and varnish. Thus far the matter was all well but as yet they had found no means to make the said combination travel. Here, again, the genius of the manager, stage director and property man 'stuck out,' and two of the 'supes' were duly installed as legs. Ned C——, one of the true and genuine 'b'oys,' held the responsible station of fore-legs, and for several nights he played that heavy part to the entire satisfaction of the manager, and the delight of the audience. The part however, was a very tedious one, as the elephant was obliged to be on the stage for about an hour, and Ned was rather too fond of the bottle to remain so long without 'wetting his whistle,' so he sets his wits to work to find a way to carry a 'wee drop' with him. The eyes of the elephant being made of two porter pottles with the necks in, Ned conceived the brilliant idea of filling them with 'good stuff.' This he fully carried out, and elated with his success, willingly undertook to play the fore-legs again. Night came, the theatre was crowded with the denizens of the Quaker city, the music played its sweetest strains, the whistle sounded, the curtain rose, and the play began. Ned and the hind-legs marched upon the stage. The elephant was greeted with round upon round of applause, The decorations, the trappings were gorgeous; the prince, seated on the back of the elephant—all were loudly cheered. The play proceeded, the elephant was marched round and round the stage. The fore legs got dry and withdrew one of ths corks, treated the hind-legs, and drank the health of the audience in a bumper of genuine elephant eye whiskey, a brand, by the way, till then unknown. On went the play, and on went Ned, drinking. The concluding march was to be made—the signal was given, and the fore-legs staggered towards the front of the stage. The conductor pulled the ear of the elephant to the right, the fore-legs staggered to the left—the footlights obstructed him—he raised his feet and stepped—plump into the orchestra! Down went the fore-legs on the leader's fiddle—over of course turned the elephant, sending the prince, closely followed by the hind-legs, into the middle of the pit. The manager stood horror struck—the prince and hind-legs lay confounded—the boxes in convulsions, the actors choking with laughter. And poor Ned, casting one look, a strange blending of drunkenness, grief and laughter, at the scene, fled hastily out of the Theatre, closely followed by the leader, with the wreck of his fiddle, performing various cut and thrust motions in the air. Imagine the scene, paint it for me, some one, if you can.

The result, reader, can you not picture it? The curtain dropped on a 'scene behind the scenes!' No more pageant—no more fore-legs, but everybody holding their sides, music, actors, pit, gallery and boxes, rushed from the theatre, shreaking between every breath,

'Have you seen the Elephant?'

A DREAM. She came to me last night—the idol of my early love. Not as she is, in the mouldering vestments of the grave—cold, pulseless, insensate—but as she was, glowing in the bloom and beauty of youth. I felt her soft hand upon my brow, and the fever of the brain was forgot. Her low voice was in my ear, and she sung the song I loved in early days. How real did it seem! Sleep is indeed a blessing when it brings such phantoms to our mental eye. I awoke—the bitterness of sorrow had passed; the vision abideth ever in my heart.

THE BED ROOM. The bed room ought not to be heated, but on the contrary, to be kept cool as is consistent with the feelings and health, and means ought always to be taken to secure a constant change of air in it. For these purposes, either the door ought to be left partly open, or windows opened at the top. No fire ought to be allowed, unless under very particular circumstances, if the room is not unusually large, and even then the fire ought to be of as light a texture, and should be as little drawn as possible, the floor only in part carpeted, and there ought to be only necessary chairs, tables, &c. Furniture in a remarkable degree, prevents ventilation, and all woollens, as carpets, absorb the moisture, whether from breath or in damp weather, and so render the air less pure, and more relaxing. A light ought not to be allowed in a bed room, if it is necessary, let it be put into the fire place.

SHUN A TATTLER. If you do not wish to speak ill of any, do not delight to hear ill of them. Give no countenance to busy-bodies, and those that love to talk of other mens' faults; or if you cannot decently reprove them on account of their quality, then direct the discourse some other way; or if you cannot do that, by seeming not to mind it, you may sufficiently signify that you do not like it.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, FEB. 26, 1848.

John A. Green, Editor.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS

Since our last publication, our esteemed and venerable townsman, Ex-President John Q. Adams, has sickened and been "gathered to his fathers." He was taken sick in the hall of the House of Representatives on Monday last, and closed his life on Wednesday evening. His sickness was similar to the attack in November, 1846—apoplexy. He died, as probably he desired, like the Earl of Chatham, in the service of his country and in the discharge of the duties entrusted to him by his constituents as their Representative in Congress since 1831. His sickness was of a character which forbid his removal, and he died in the Speaker's room in the Capitol.

As soon as his sickness was noticed, he was forthwith carried out in the arms of a member, and feebly articulated—"this is the end of earth—I am contented;" after which he again scarcely audible, said, "my son! my son!! These were the last words he uttered.

In regard to his death, without going into details, words almost fail to convey tribute to his worth—"A good man has fallen in Israel;" indeed "an honest man is the noblest work of God," which was strikingly and truthfully illustrated in the character of John Quincy Adams.

Both branches of Congress, after the remarks of several members, unanimously agreed to observe the highest mark of respect to the deceased. His chair and desk is to be unoccupied for thirty days, the usual badge of mourning to be worn, etc.

The Legislature of this Commonwealth, as well as the city authorities of Boston, have chosen committees to consider what further measures are necessary to show their sorrow and respect. The bells in Boston were tolled and the flags raised half mast, yesterday, as a symbol of regret and veneration.

In this place, yesterday noon, the bells were tolled; and the town in its corporate capacity, will immediately take steps to manifest their sorrow, and appoint a committee to consider the melancholy event for the purpose of recommending future action.

We have no desire to speak of the virtues or the public character of Mr. Adams—both of these traits as well as every thing that ennobles human nature—are well known to our readers—the country, and the world. Quincy, his birth-place, has lost a good and valued citizen—the country, to use a common-place term, its greatest man—and the world, the purest and most glorious of the human race.

IMPORTANT FROM MEXICO. Intelligence arrived at New Orleans on the 13th inst, of a treaty of Peace having been negotiated and accepted by the Mexican government, at Queratero, by Gen. Scott, on the basis of the instructions sent out by the government last year. Gen. Scott took the responsibility of accepting this treaty, under certain conditions, and of forwarding it to the American Government at Washington. One of the conditions is, that 12,000 American troops are to remain in the city of Mexico, till certain obligations are complied with. The balance to be withdrawn. The boundary line is to be the Rio Grande up to the Gila, giving New Mexico and California to the United States. The United States is to give a pecuniary consideration to Mexico, of a small amount compared with that in the rejected treaty of Tachubaya.

CONGRESS. The proceedings of Congress generally have been of very little interest. The Loan Bill has passed the House by a vote of 192 to 14. As the bill now stands there will be a loan proposed instead of an issue of Treasury notes. The bill for the payment of the heirs of John Paul Jones has also passed. On Monday last about one o'clock, Hon. John Quincy Adams was taken with a paralytic stroke, while in his seat. The members all rose up in confusion. Dr. Fries, a member from Ohio, carried him out of the Hall in his arms. Both houses immediately adjourned. The next day the President communicated a treaty with Mexico. On Thursday the death of Mr. Adams was announced in both branches and the usual resolutions were adopted.

WARLIKE OPERATIONS ON THE PACIFIC. A letter from Mazatlan gives the particulars of the taking of the port of Guayamas, on the Gulf of California, October 20, by the United States ships Congress and Portsmouth. The town was bombarded forty minutes, and eight hundred Mexican troops retreated in the night. On the 17th of November, the Americans being all on board of the ship, four hundred Mexicans came into the town when Capt. Selfridge landed with sixty-five men, and engaged the enemy who were strongly posted, and drove them out, killing forty or fifty. Capt. Selfridge was slightly wounded. On the 18th of November, Lieut. Bartlett with twenty-five men was attacked at San Jose, by from one hundred and fifty to two hundred Mexicans, with two pieces of cannon. They resisted several desperate charges and the Mexicans were defeated with from twenty to thirty killed, including their chief. Col. Burton was attacked two or three times by three hundred Mexicans, but the Americans were always successful. There had been an engagement at Urias, in which the American loss was one killed and thirteen wounded, while the Mexican loss was much larger, and the latter force was defeated.

STABBING. A man named Brownell was stabbed three times with a knife by a man named Springer, in Fall River last Tuesday. The wounded man is not expected to recover.

THE PATENT LAWS. Kingsley & Pirsson, No. 5, Wall Street, New York, have issued a work entitled, "Laws and Practice of all Nations and Governments relating to Patents for Inventions; with Tables of Fees and Forms." It also contains an editorial introduction, with explanations of practice and proceedings used in procuring patents throughout the world. This is a very useful work, one that was much needed, and the materials of which are rare and expensive. Every law library, certainly, should be supplied with a copy, and all persons interested in inventions and improvements will find it valuable, as they can learn at once the course of proceeding to secure a patent, in any country on the globe. The price of the work, in paper covers, (which can be sent by mail,) is one dollar; in cloth, one dollar seventy five cents; full binding, two dollars. On extra fine paper, with paper covers, the price is one dollar and fifty cents. It contains two hundred octavo pages.

Messrs. Kingsley & Pirsson also publish "The Eureka," a monthly scientific work, at one dollar per year.

APPOINTMENTS. We learn from the Dedham Democrat, that Mr. Sheriff Adams has made the following appointments for his deputies:—Nathan Jones of Medway; Silas Binney of Weymouth; J. N. E. Mann of Dedham; A. E. DuBois of Randolph; B. S. Farrington of Wrentham; Charles Endicott of Canton. J. N. E. Mann to be Keeper of the Jail and House of Correction.

MR. BANCROFT. The highest honor that can be bestowed in France upon a foreigner, has been conferred upon this gentleman, he having been elected a corresponding Member of the French Institute.

A LAKE OF BLOOD. Dr. Dick estimates the number of those who have perished directly or indirectly by war at 14,000,000,000. Elihu Burritt has taken the estimates of Dr. Dick, and estimating the average quantity of blood in a common sized person, states that the blood in the veins of those fourteen thousand millions would fill a circular lake of more than seventeen miles in circumference, and ten feet deep, in which all the navies of the world might float.

UNLAWFUL MEETING. A New Orleans paper states that Captain Mazerat, of the Third Municipality police, together with several police officers, arrested on Sunday, in the house of a Mr. Mechins, in that city, a gang of free negroes and slaves who were congregated there for the purpose of preaching. Mr. Mechins was also arrested, and had in his possession a large Holy Bible and three small prayer books, and also a purse with thirty-two dollars. Mr. Mechins gave bail for his further appearance.

THE GUERILLA FLAG. The Mexican Guerilla Flag is described as about two feet long and from twelve to fifteen inches wide, the centre is a broad crimson stripe, with the motto No Quarter, wrought in silk; on either side of the centre is a black stripe, of about half the width, with a death's head and cross bones. It has a narrow border of pale green, and the points have tassels of crimson. It is usually borne on the end of a lance.

JEWISH CONGRESS. A congress of reforming Israelites were to meet in the course of the last month at Berlin, Prussia, to discuss questions relative to the exterior worship, and to the reforms of which Judaism may be susceptible, in accordance with the wants of the age.

LOSS OF A VESSEL. Schooner Josephine (of Providence,) from Aux Cayes for Boston, with coffee, etc., was fallen in with on the 7th inst, in a sinking condition, by the Cybele, at Portland from Matanzas, which took off the crew and carried them to Portland. The Josephine had been run into that morning, by a bark unknown. The cargo was worth probably upwards of $10,000, and was insured for $4,500.

DEATH OF MAJOR WEBSTER. Letters have been received in Boston confirming the death of Major Edward Webster, of the Massachusetts Volunteers,—son of Hon. Daniel Webster. He did at Matamoras, of typhus fever.

CAPITAL OFFENCE. Joseph Jewell, keeper of a hotel on Tremont Row, Boston, was arrested on Wednesday last, charged with a felonious assault on a girl engaged in his establishment aged about fourteen years. The prisoner is a stout athletic man, and accomplished his base purpose by gagging the girl, who is said to be of very slight frame, placing his hand over her mouth and thus preventing her making any outcry.

LEGISLATURE. A bill has been reported authorizing the Old Colony Railroad to build branches, etc. The death of Mr. Adams was announced in the Senate on Friday and a Committee chosen, in which the House joined, to consider and report what measures it may be proper for the Legislature to adopt, as a testimonial of its gratitude for the public services, and respect for the memory of the illustrious dead.

Dentistry.

GRANDIN, DUDLEY & BLAKE,
SURGEON DENTISTS,
238 Washington Street—near Summer Street,
BOSTON,

PERFORM all Operations belonging to the DENTAL PROFESSION, and continue to Manufacture and insert the purest and best of MINERAL TEETH, upon the ATMOSPHERIC, and on all other principles as practised by the best Dentists in this country and Europe.

Every Tooth we FILL, and every one we INSERT, we insure, according to circumstances; and all Dental Plate Work executed at our rooms is warranted to be equal to any that can be produced, and to give perfect satisfaction.

☞We are administering the CHLOROFORM every day with success, and extracting Teeth by the dozen, without pain, and have never known it to affect the patient unfavorably, and yet we charge NO MORE than when we do not give it.

The public will not forget that to us is due the credit of the great and important improvement recently made in the method of inserting Artificial Teeth, both on Gold Plate and Pivots, and also preserving diseased Teeth and stumps in a healthy condition.

☞Instruction given in relation to the New Method invented by us, and whole sets inserted in the most difficult mouths, for country or travelling Dentists, on reasonable terms. Pivot Teeth adapted to the mouth on our plan are far more durable and permanent than upon gold plate, secured in the common way, and will never want resetting. When necessary to mount them on a plate of gold by our method, we extract no sound stumps, preserve the form of the mouth, and secure them so firmly that the patient can eat with them as well as if they were natural teeth, and they will last a whole life-time, and look perfectly natural.

To all who require the services of a Dentist, and particularly such as have been unskillfully served, we would 'make our best bow,' and say, don't wait for an introduction, but call and see us at

Friends, Patrons, AND FELLOW CITIZENS,

I wish you all a Happy New Year!!

NOW for a little fun and nonsense. There is quite an excitement about town, among the profession, because

GEORGE B. NIGHTINGALE

has been SHOEING UP not more than half of creation, for the last eight years, with

BOOTS & SHOES.

Well, let 'em "go it." "Guess there wont be much of a shower after all," as the chap said when Noah wouldn't let him get into the ark,—calculate to keep doing so right strait along, every time. Why my dear "fellow critters," we don't mean to brag, but you undertake to take a look at OUR Boots and Shoes and the first you know you get your foot right strait in; there you are, stuck fast; then out comes the old pocket book with THE SHINERS; that's just what we want, and nothing else,—much better than credit; credit takes time to no purpose, oftentimes, and time, you know, is money. The pay down system is the only true one, after all,—the best remedy for corns and unpleasant dreams. The man that takes a pair of BOOTS or SHOES with one hand, and PULLS OUT THE CASH with the other, is independent; like all other tubs, he stands on his own bottoms; give me the man that shells out the stuff, like a sheaf of wheat in cold weather and we'll set him on his taps in a giffy. I therefore advise all mankind, womankind, and every other kind that wears SHOE LEATHER, to CALL when they find themselves ailing about the UNDERSTANDINGS. The Doctors may tinker up the physical frame but I'll beat 'em hollow at repairing Damaged Soles (with the best material for such cases)

P. S. Needn't be particular about knocking when you wish to come in; never mind for a little mud as we have it in abundance. Brooms are plenty and cheap for the tin.

With the money you can buy
Boots, Caps, Shoes—come and try;
Findings, also, made to use
For to make good Boots or Shoes.

When your Shoes are full of holes,
Or should need a pair of Soles,
I can mend them if you will
Just call in and pay the bill.

GEORGE B. NIGHTINGALE.

Health! Health!!

DR. WOOD'S
SARSAPARILLA
AND
WILD CHERRY BITTERS.

THIS new and valuable extract of SARSAPARILLA and WILD CHERRY has been used with great success for the permanent removal of all such diseases as take their rise from an impure state of the blood; it promotes a healthy action of the Liver—strengthens the Nerves, and at once secures

HEALTH AND VIGOR

to the whole system. In all cases of

JAUNDICE, INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA, LOSS OF APPETITE, HABITUAL COSTIVENESS, SCROFULA, HEADACHE, LANGUOR, and that

DEPRESSION OF SPIRITS,

which is so common a complaint in the SPRING AND SUMMER

season of the year, this Medicine has not its equal—and a single trial will convince the most incredulous of its peculiar virtues.

For furthor particulars the reader is referred to pamphlets which will be furnished by the Agents, showing the estimation which this valuable Medicine is held by those who have used it.

☞CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC.☜

Be particular and ask for Doct. Wood's Sursaparilla Wild Cherry Bitters, and receive no other. This is the first preparation of these articles combined, ever offered to the public, and the great success attending its use has induced the unprincipled to counterfeit and imitate. As a preventive, see that the bottles have the words "Dr. Wood's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Bitters," pressed on the glass, and that each label on the bottle is signed by the proprietor, E. Thornton, Jr., New Bedford.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

THE SWIGGERY.

Away from the swig'ry and take to your tools,
The beer-dens are Lucifer's primary schools;
Old Cloven is sure in the swig'ry to lurk,
Then off to your labor and work, brothers, work.
Work, work, work brothers, work,
'Tis wholesome to labor, then work, brothers, work.

Old Cloven, 'tis said, is the idle man's guest,
He loafs in the swig'ry, the place he likes best;
He picks out a lounger and gives him a smirk,
Then makes him a tool for his owo dirty work.
Work, work, etc.

You'll find when a man is not steady about
His labor, the evil one soon finds him out,
And farmer or merchant, mechanic or clerk,
He'll make him a tool for his own dirty work.
Work, work. etc.

From loafing and lounging great evils arise,
It leads you to drinking, to gambling likewise,
And makes you a penniless, pitiful shirk,
Then stick to your labor and manfully work.
Work, work, etc.

F. M. Adlington, Weymouth.

WANTED—A HUSBAND.

Rather lofty in person, but then not too tall;
Inclined to be slight, but of course not too small;
He must not be handsome, or even quite plain;
But one who decidedly bears a good name
With lips that can smile, with an eye that can glow,
And a heart that can feel for another man's wo;
How and when he's to speak, never feel at a loss;
Be obliging and kind, not disposed to grow cross.
To card rooms and billiards he never must roam,
But find all his pleasures and comforts in home.
For smoking and drinking have too an aversion;
Let reading aloud be his chiefest diversion;
Because that his wife perhaps would often be sitting
At work on his shirt, or patching or knitting,
And of course she would rather than be left alone
Hear him read or converse in a firm but sweet tone;
And if any children should come in the way,
Teach them all that is right; and above all to pray;
Be kind to them too, but still be severe,
For thee, tho' they love, they will ever revere;
And in his instruction this truth let them know,
Example should always before precept go;
For if he do not what he wish them to do,
They never will keep his good precepts in view.
And then, when the tasks of the day are all o'er,
He may take up his hat and walk to the door,
He must not say good night but "hasten my dear,
To put on your things, the eve is so clear,
That I'm sure you'll enjoy a short walk in the grove,
Where we wander'd in youth, where we plighted our love";
And cheerfully own that the joy of his life
Consists in his children, his home, and his wife.
He must always be apt to see and discover
How he best can oblige, as he did when a lover;
And willingly share, while in this vale of tears,
Her sickness and sorrow, her cares and her fears.
To say briefly all, the man I write on,
Must greatly resemble the much admired Crichton.

MEET ME IN HEAVEN.

Meet me in Heaven. This earth no more
Can hold me in its low embrace;
Loosed from its bonds, my soul would soar
Back to its native dwelling place.

Meet me, my loved one, then, in Heaven—
Nor let thy upward flight be slow—
Thou who unto my youth wert given,
A guardian angel here below.

Meet me in Heaven—and with thee bring
The cherubs thou hast borne to me,
And yield them, our joint offering,
To Him who gave me them and thee.

But seven short years since thou didst fling
Thy silken chain around my heart;
Thou gav'st me then this golden ring—
Thy gift to keep till "death us part."

Death parts us now, and I restore
The talisman thus early given;
When next we meet, we part no more—
O! quickly meet me, love, in Heaven.

ANECDOTES.

'My love,' said Mrs. Foozie to her husband, 'oblige me with twenty dollars to day to purchase a dress.'
'Shan't do any such thing, Agnes—you called me a bear yesterday!'
'Law, love, that was nothing—I meant by it, that you was very fond of hugging.'
'You're a saucy little puss, [sound heard like the explosion of a pistol,] but here's a fifty.'

'Hallo there, what's your hurry; where are you going?' 'Going, I'm running for an office.' 'Running for an office! what office?' 'Why a lawyer's office. Blast it I'm sued!'

'Is this real bogany?' said a green horn, who was astonished at the lustre of an elegant mahogany table in a gentleman's parlor, at the same time taking out his jacknife and shaving off a large slice from the edge. 'Wall, I swow, 'tis, aint it?'

One morning a quidnunc and bore was sauntering down the street, seeking whom he might devour with his interminable twaddle, when he saw approaching in haste the witty and busy Douglas Jerrold. The quidnunc fastens on him and puts his usual question, 'Well, what's going on?' Releasing himself, the wit strides hastily away, exclaiming, 'I am!'

'Josiah, how many scruples are there in a drachm?' 'Don't know, zur.' 'Well, then, recollect there are two.' 'O, the is, hay? wall, daddy takes his dram every morain without no scruples!'

For the cure of Coughs, Colds, and
Diseases of the Lungs!
ANOTHER evidence of the benefits derived from the use of this invaluable Medicine:
Boston, Nov. 1, 1847.
Messrs. Otis, Broaders & Co., Boston.
Gentlemen—Please send me by Express six dozen more of the "Samaritan Balm." Its virtues are fully established in our neighborhood, and I do not hesitate to say that the sale of it has been far greater than any new medicine I ever attempted to introduce. Of its benefits I can speak from actual experience, as being decidedly the best remedy for colds and diseases of the Lungs I ever tried. Last winter I was sorely afflicted with an attack of the "Bronchitis," when the good lady whose invention it is kindly prepared me a bottle which has completely cured me; and from the benefits I myself have personally derived from its use, I feel grateful that she has been prevailed upon to give so valuable a medicine to the world. Notwithstanding she has done it without any wish to profit by it in a pecuniary point of view, I hope and trust she will reap a rich reward for her goodness towards suffering humanity. Yours, truly, D. BUGBEE.

GRAEFENBERG COMPANY'S OFFICE,
50 Broadway, New York, September 24th, 1847.
The very great increase of the GRAEFENBERG COMPANY'S business in New England, has rendered it necessary to re-organize the General Agency there. This is therefore to certify, that the NEW ENGLAND BRANCH OF THE GRAEFENBERG COMPANY, is now established at No. 154 Washington street, Boston, and that Mr. Edwin C. Barnes is duly appointed Secretary of said Branch; and that he is authorized to establish Local Depots, and to grant rights to vend the company's Medicines. Every Agent must have a certificate with the seal of the Company thereunto, signed by its Secretary and countersigned by the aforesaid Branch Secretary. No one is authorized to sell the Company's Medicines without such certificate. EDWARD BARTON, Secretary.
GRAEFENBERG MEDICINES.
The undersigned is fully prepared to establish a GRAEFENBERG DEPOT in all places of proper size in New England (except the State of Connecticut and that portion of Vermont west of the Green Mountains,) and also in the British Provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. Immediate application should be made either personally or by letter. As there will ordinarily be but one Depot in a town or village, the Agency will be very valuable.
The leading article to which public attention is invited is the GRAEFENBERG VEGETABLE PILLS, of which 30,000 boxes are sold each and every week. The following complaints yield with certainty to their power: Asthma, Bilious Complaints, Catarrh, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Erysipelas, Imperfect Digestion, Fluor Albus, Green Sickness, Heartburn, Headache, Jaundice, Liver Complaints, Rheumatism, and various diseases of the Stomach. In all CHRONIC COMPLAINTS the most implicit reliance may be placed upon them. Price 25 cents a box.
The names of the other Medicines are as follows:
THE CHILDREN'S PANACEA.
For summer complaints, dysentery, and all other affections of the stomach and bowels, it is infallible. Price 50 cents a bottle.
THE GRAEFENBERG SARSAPARILLA COMPOUND,
Warranted to make two quarts superior to any in the world. Price one dollar a bottle.
THE GREEN MOUNTAIN VEGETABLE OINTMENT.
Wherever inflammation exists, this ointment is a positive and speedy cure. Price 25 and 50 cents a box.
THE GRAEFENBERG EYE LOTION.
For disorders of the Eyes this Lotion has no equal. For violent inflammation, weakness, or foreign substances in the eyes, it is an unfailing remedy. Price 25 cents per bottle, with full directions.
THE GRAEFENBERG HEALTH BITTERS.
Sovereign to build up the enervated system, to restore the appetite and clear the skin. Price 25 cents a package.
THE CONSUMPTIVE'S BALM.
This most extraordinary article is infallible, positively, in Consumption, Bronchitis, and Bleeding at the Lungs. It is only sent as ordered at 25 the quart. Consumptives may be sure of finding in this article that which will not disappoint their hopes.
The Graefenberg Gazette, published by the Company for gratuitous distribution, may be had on application to any one of their numerous Agents.

LABOR—THE PRESENT AGE.

No period in the world's history has exhibited such astonishing progress as the present—the spirit of investigation spurred on by competition, has discovered and put in successful practice, inventions, which if named by the lips of science in a past age, would have brought down upon the head of the mortal then broaching them, the title of dreamer, enthusiast, and visionary. The arm of iron has usurped the place of the human arm in many industrial pursuits, and the breath of steam and the clank of machinery have become the agent of capital. Whether this introduction of invention has benefited the toiling mass, has become a subject of grave inquiry, both in the old and new world. The mechanics of Europe are exclaiming against this agent, as one that is entirely usurping human labor, and casting out the great mass to starve while it builds up fortunes for the few. A writer says, in regard to France, that its natives are suffering in greater numbers from destitution of physical comforts than when its barbarous tribes mingled in the fray with the Mailed Roman invader before the time of Christ. Carlyle says, of England—"In the midst of plethoric plenty the people perish.' The laborers of Europe are driven into kennels, where the air is pestilence, and where every sight and sound appals the sense.

Out of about 33,000,000, the population of the French nation, one of the journals, the Reforme, says there are now:

4,000,000 persons clothed in rags; 20,000,000 who never wear shoes; 18,000,000 who never eat wheaten bread; 27,000,000 who cannot get wine to drink; (not drugged as here;) 31,000,000 too poor to afford sugar; 31,000,000 forced to abstain from the use of meat.

Our country's hope against these evils lies in the wise foresight of the framers of the constitution, who, by abolishing the law of entail removed the power of wealth to accumulate in the hands of families, giving them power to monopolize the productive lands as well as the productive industry. The radical evils of manufacturing associations, as felt in Europe, are only partially experienced here, and then in small quantities, where manufacturing is the chief pursuit. The oppressed operative in this country, has a wide field of industry, in which to seek refuge from monopoly.

Capital may, in time, invade the halls of legislation, and corrupt those therein—receive privileges, and by slow degrees chain industry in servitude to its car, but if it do, the laborer will have himself to blame, for the power is in his own hands to avert the evil. The price of his protection, from such servitude, is eternal vigilance.

THE COUPLE WHO WERE ONLY HALF MARRIED. A couple down in Maine went to church to be married. The ceremony went on very well until the words 'with this ring I thee wed,' when the bride essayed for the last time, to take her glove off her maiden hand. Whether it was agitation, heat, or nervousness, the leather clung to her hand and would not part company. The bride blushed, and pulled, but in vain. The bridegroom (bold man) laughed outright, so did father, so did mother, so did the bride's maids, so did all the spectators, except the clergyman, and he, Rev. Mr. Lee, exclaimed, 'I do not come here to be laughed at,' and shutting his book, left the ceremony half finished, the bride half married, and the glove half off. We add for the satisfaction of sympathisers, that the bride went to church the next day, with her hand uncovered, and the nuptial knot was then tied 'as tight as a glove.'

GRAEFENBERG COMPANY'S OFFICE,
50 Broadway, New York, September 24th, 1847.

The very great increase of the GRAEFENBERG COMPANY'S business in New England, has rendered it necessary to re-organize the General Agency there. This is therefore to certify, that the NEW ENGLAND BRANCH OF THE GRAEFENBERG COMPANY, is now established at No. 154 Washington street, Boston, and that Mr. Edwin C. Barnes is duly appointed Secretary of said Branch; and that he is authorized to establish Local Depots, and to grant rights to vend the company's Medicines. Every Agent must have a certificate with the seal of the Company thereunto, signed by its Secretary and countersigned by the aforesaid Branch Secretary. No one is authorized to sell the Company's Medicines without such certificate. EDWARD BARTON, Secretary.

GRAEFENBERG MEDICINES.
The undersigned is fully prepared to establish a GRAEFENBERG DEPOT in all places of proper size in New England (except the State of Connecticut and that portion of Vermont west of the Green Mountains,) and also in the British Provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. Immediate application should be made either personally or by letter. As there will ordinarily be but one Depot in a town or village, the Agency will be very valuable.
The leading article to which public attention is invited is the GRAEFENBERG VEGETABLE PILLS, of which 20,000 boxes are sold each and every week. The following complaints yield with certainty to their power: Asthma, Bilious Complaints, Catarrh, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Erysipelas, Imperfect Digestion, Fluor Albus, Green Sickness, Heartburn, Headache, Jaundice, Liver Complaints, Rheumatism, and various diseases of the Stomach. In all CHRONIC COMPLAINTS the most implicit reliance may be placed upon them. Price 25 cents a box.
The names of the other Medicines are as follows:
THE CHILDREN'S PANACEA.
For summer complaints, dysentery, and all other affections of the stomach and bowels, it is infallible. Price 50 cents a bottle.
THE GRAEFENBERG SARSAPARILLA COMPOUND,
Warranted to make two quarts superior to any in the world. Price one dollar a bottle.
THE GREEN MOUNTAIN VEGETABLE OINTMENT.
Wherever Inflammation exists, this ointment is a positive and speedy cure. Price 25 and 50 cents a box.
THE GRAEFENBERG EYE LOTION.
For disorders of the Eyes this Lotion has no equal. For violent inflammation, weakness, or foreign substances in the eyes, it is an infalling remedy. Price 25 cents per bottle, with full directions.
THE GRAEFENBERG HEALTH BITTERS.
Sovereign to build up the enervated system, to restore the appetite and clear the skin. Price 25 cents a package.
THE CONSUMPTIVE'S BALM.
This most extraordinary article is infallible, positively, in Consumption, Bronchitis, and Bleeding at the Lungs. It is only sent as ordered at $5 the quart. Consumptives may be sure of finding in this article that which will not disappoint their hopes.
The Graefenberg Gazette, published by the Company for gratuitous distribution, may be had on application to any one of their numerous Agents.

SATURDAY, MARCH 4, 1848.

John A. Green, Editor.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

A public meeting of the inhabitants of this town was held last Monday afternoon, at the request of the Selectmen, for the purpose of adopting measures of respect to the memory of Hon. John Quincy Adams. The Town Clerk called the meeting to order, when the venerable Hon. Thomas Greenleaf was called to preside, and Israel W. Munroe, Esq. chosen Secretary.

A Committee was chosen, consisting of Hon. Thomas Greenleaf, Noah Curtis, Esq., and the Selectmen, who reported the following resolutions:

Whereas, It has pleased Divine Providence to remove from this life the Honorable JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, while engaged in the discharge of his duties, as a Representative in the Congress of the United States from the Eighth Congressional District of Massachusetts—therefore,

Resolved, That the inhabitants of the town of Quincy, in common with the whole country, mourn the loss of one of the ablest, wisest, and most virtuous statesmen of modern times;—a Patriot—who has stood by his country in peace and war, and who has guarded her interests at home and abroad; a scholar of the most varied attainments; an orator of surpassing eloquence; a friend and advocate of truth, freedom, and justice: a man of unbending integrity in public and private life; and, above all, a Christian, who, in the greatest press of official cares, never forgot or omitted his duties to God.

Resolved, That in reviewing Mr. Adams's long career we are specially impressed by the eminent usefulness of his life, and by the vast amount of service, which he has rendered to his country and to the world; and that we regard this as a better title to a "perpetual memory" than the numerous offices which he so ably filled, or the honors so freely bestowed upon him by his admiring countrymen.

Resolved, That while as Americans we unite with all portions of the country in honoring the memory of one who consecrated his great powers to the service of this whole country,—we esteem it a privilege to have been allowed, as his constituents, his fellow-townsmen, and his neighbors, to stand in close relations to him; and that we take a just pride, as inhabitants of his native place, in having it said, in the language of the Scriptures, "that this man was born there."

Resolved, That since it is not permitted us to welcome back the living patriot to scenes familiar and dear to him, therefore a Committee of twenty be appointed, whose duty it shall be, in behalf of the inhabitants of this town, to receive, whenever they shall arrive here, the remains of our venerated fellow-townsman, and to make all suitable arrangements, in deference to the wishes of the bereaved family, for their interment.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be immediately transmitted to the family of the deceased ex-President Adams, with assurances of the most respectful sympathy for the loss they have sustained.

It having been moved that the resolutions be adopted, W. S. Morton, Esq., on rising to second the motion, said:

The melancholy intelligence, Mr. Chairman, came to us during the past week that our venerable Representative, John Quincy Adams, the Statesman, the Scholar and the Christian, had been gathered to the home of his fathers.

He died in the service of his country, amid the scenes of his earthly glory—for his soul ascended to its eternal bourne from within the walls of that Capital which oft echoed to the world the spirit of his eloquence, the purity of his thought and the firmness of his patriotism.

The cause of morality has lost its purest advocate, science its most accomplished votary, and we, Mr. Chairman,—mourners at the shrine of departed worth and greatness—have lost one to whom our political interests were confided, our townsman and our friend.

The assembled wisdom of the nation have ever listened with admiration and respect to the Sage of Quincy, and we, his constituents in the reflected lustre of his exalted position and earthly renown, may well be pardoned for indulging in a little pride, that within the limits of this village, his infancy was cradled, his youth was matured, his manhood strengthened, and though the messenger of death found him far away at his post of duty, yet Quincy, his beloved birth-place, was still his home.

The events of his life are a part of the history of the Union, I might say, Mr. Chairman, that they are a portion of the annals of the world. He was a connecting link between the present and the past. Almost a boy in years he was in the service of his country—Washington saw in him the gem of future greatness, and succeeding Presidents recognized him as a Patriot and a Statesman. From one post of honor to another he arose till he presided over this vast republic, with what rectitude of thought, with what purity of principle, integrity of character and fidelity to his trust, will be told by some future annalist when the mist of political prejudice shall have faded away and our struggle for liberty shall be recorded as the greatest of the triumphs of time

All that was mortal of the Sage and Statesman, is passing away, but his name and his fame are the inheritance of his country. They will live while this republic shall remain—they will endure through all coming time.

We mourn not for him as one cut off in the early years of his usefulness and of his strength, for his locks were whitened with the frosts of four score years, but we rather mourn that such a man should die, but no, Mr. Chairman, he will not wholly die. The fate of the countless millions that inhabit this earth will not be his fate.

Then say not that the common lot
Of all, lies deep in Lethe's wave,
Some few, who ne'er shall be forgot,
Shall burst the bondage of the grave.

Of that few is our venerated Representative, for it is his lot to be forever remembered. In rendering due respect to his memory we do honor to ourselves, and I trust, Mr. Chairman, that the resolutions offered by the Committee will be unanimously adopted.

The question was then taken and the resolves adopted without opposition.

The following gentlemen compose the Committee appointed to make all suitable arrangements for attending the funeral, viz:

Thomas Greenleaf, Noah Curtis, Josiah Brigham, George W. Beale, James Newcomb, Samuel A. Davis, William S. Morton, Lemuel Brackett, George Baxter, John Savil, Henry Wood, Lysander Richards, Wm. B. Duggan, Lewis Bass, John T. Burrill, Daniel Baxter, Bryant B. Newcomb, Seth Spear, Orange Clarke, Josiah Bass.

Voted, That the proceedings of this meeting be entered in the Town Records; and also published in the newspapers.

Throughout the country, every testimonial of respect and veneration, so far as the melancholy intelligence reaches, has been observed. The President of the United States has directed suitable tokens to be manifested by the several departments of Government. The Legislative halls of this State have been clothed in mourning. All mourn that the country has lost a great man.

The remains of Mr. Adams will leave Washington City on Monday next and reach this place probably Wednesday morning, by the Fall River route. The special train of cars will stop near his house, and the body be received by a committee of the town. Minute guns will be fired and the bells tolled. The committee of this town are making arrangements which will be early announced. It is uncertain what day the funeral will take place.

It has been requested that all places of business be closed on the day of the funeral.

THE SALEM MURDER CASE. The long and tedious investigation in this case, which has been going on in Salem, has been brought to a close. It resulted in the discharge of Rohan and his wife, who are held as witnesses for the State. Patrick and John Ryan, John Rierdon and Cornelius Shaine, were fully committed to be tried for the murder.

BLOODY WORK. By the arrival of the schooner Susan Ludwing at Norfolk from Laguna 18th ult, accounts have been received of a terrific and murderous outbreak in the capital of Venezuela, Caracas. The Venezuela Congress met on the 24th January, and was overwhelmed by the populace, set on, it is said, by the acting President, the tumult resulting in the massacre of several members. It was expected that a revolution would immediately break out throughout the republic.

CONGRESS. The proceedings of Congress for several days after the sudden illness of Mr. Adams, were mostly connected with that event, his decease, etc. The desk and chair of Mr. Adams in the House were ordered to remain unoccupied for thirty days, and to be, together with the House, clothed with mourning.

The following committee of arrangements, consisting of one member from each State, were appointed to attend the remains to Quincy:

Mr. Hudson of Massachusetts, Chairman; Messrs. Williams of Maine, Wilson of New Hampshire, Marsh of Vermont, Thurston of Rhode Island, Smith of Connecticut, White of New York, Edsall of New Jersey, Dickey of Penn., Houston of Delaware, Roman of Maryland, McDowell of Virginia, Barringer of North Carolina, Holmes of South Carolina, Cobb of Georgia, Gayle of Alabama, Brown of Mississippi, Morse of Louisiana, Vinton of Ohio, Duncan of Kentucky, Cocke of Tennessee, Lincoln of Illinois, Wick of Indiana, Bowlin of Missouri, Johnson of Arkansas, McCleand of Michigan, Cabell of Florida, Kaufman of, Texas, Leffler of Iowa, Tweedy of Wisconsin.

The Ten Regiment Bill is yet the special order of the day in the Senate. The Treaty with Mexico has been under consideration in Executive session. In the House on Monday, a bill granting to Mrs. Adams the franking privilege during life, was passed unanimously.

LEGISLATURE. We do not find much of general interest in the journal of Legislative proceedings of the past week. The Halls of the Senate and House have been ordered to be dressed in mourning in respect for the memery of Mr. Adams. Hon. Edward Everett has signified his acceptance of the appointment to deliver a eulogy on the life and character of the late Hon. John Quincy Adams, before the Executive and Legislative departments of the Government of this Commonwealth.

CLERICAL. We learn from the Trumpet that Rev. S. A. Davis, pastor of the Universalist Church and Society in this town, has signified his intention to remove from the place; also, that the Society have adopted resolutions commendatory of their pastor.

ANTI SLAVERY. We see by a notice in the Liberator, that William W. Brown, an agent of the Massachusetts Anti Slavery Society, will lecture in this town to-morrow, and at the Railway Meeting-house in Milton, on Sunday, 12th inst. The lecture to-morrow will be in Franklin Hall, at half past six o'clock, P. M.

THE UNION MAGAZINE of Literature and Art—Edited by Mrs. C. M. Kirkland—Published by Israel Post, 140 Nassau St., New York.

We have been looking over the March number of The Union and find it everything that could be desired even by its warmest admirers. The embellishments, in especial, are of the highest order and there are no less than eleven of them in all—a mezzotint, a line, a colored fashion plate, and eight very superior wood-cuts in illustration of the text. These latter have done a great deal in elevating the character of the work:—they give it a piquancy which is very desirable, The mezzotint by Doney is the last of the series called "Steps to Ruin" and is a very admirable plate, but by no means superior to the line engraving entitled "Pardoned" by Osborne;—this is a remarkably good picture. The designs in all cases are by Matteson or done under his direction. In the way of literary matter there are contributions by Mrs. Embury, Mrs. Hewett, Mrs. Dana, Mrs. Mills, Mrs. Kirkland, Miss Sedgwick, Mrs. Ellet, W. A. Jones, George W. Peck, Edgar A. Poe, Caleb Lyon, Rev. Francis C. Woodworth, etc. The best prose papers, we think, is "An Adventure in Dreamland," by George W. Peck. The best poem is Mrs. Hewett's "Dish of Porcelain."

IMPORTANT DECISION. Many traders and mechanics are in the habit of making their original charges, during the day, on a slate, and having them, at night, or at some convenient opportunity, transcribed on the day book. A decision was made in the Court of Common Pleas in Boston, recently, which is important. The defendant offered to make oath to his books of account, in which it appeared that the entries were made, once a week or oftener, by his clerk, who transcribed them from a slate on which they were entered by the defendant himself; the clerk not being able to testify to the items charged, any further than that they were correctly transcribed. The Court ruled that the defendant could not be permitted to swear to the correctness of his books.

CANADA. Republican symptoms are increasing every day in Canada. The Canadian journals are even discussing the question of ultimate secession from Great Britain, and of annexation to the United States. Articles on this subject are admitted into the government or conservative journals there.

CHOWDER. The man of "Palo Alto" memory serves to-night a good supply of his compound mixture. He has been hard run in the "chowder line" since he became landlord, but next Monday he thinks that a barrel, even a hogshead will be ready for his patrons; of course, their name is legion, and the Palo Alto man like "Long Jim" is always ready and charged.

DECLINATION. Daniel Baxter, Esq., who has served for several years as Chairman of the Board of Selectmen, declines being considered a candidate at the ensuing municipal election.

Chief Justice Shaw, of the Supreme Court, has delivered an opinion, granting a new trial in the case of Samuel Parker, Esq., who was convicted of perjury about two years since, at Lowell.

John Randolph, a colored servant born on the plantation of the famous Randolph, of Roanoke, and long in his service, but among the four hundred left free in his will, proposes to publish "The private life of John Randolph."

The newspapers in Germany speak of an unprecedented emigration to the United States the ensuing spring.

A funeral service was performed on Tuesday last, in honor of the late Princess Adelaide, of France, at the Catholic Cathedral, in Franklin street, Boston.

The Commonwealth's right to subscribe to the new stock of the Western Railroad, was sold on Monday for three thousand dollars.

Cassius M. Clay is to lecture on Mexico at Baltimore the 7th inst.

The officers of the Massachusetts Regiment have held a meeting and passed resolutions expressive of their regret for the death of Maj. Webster.

The Treasury Department are inviting proposals for $5.000.000 of treasury notes, or for 6 per cent. stock to the same amount.

NOTICES.

DIED.

In this town, 29th ult., Mrs. Mary, wife of Mr. Joseph Kimball, aged 26.

How sweet the name of Jesus sounds
In a believer's ear;
It soothes his sorrow, heals his wounds,
And drives away his fear.

It makes the wounded spirit whole,
And calms the troubled breast;
'Tis manna to the hungry soul,
And, to the weary, rest.

At Newton Corner, 22d ult., of consumption, Mrs. Ann M., wife of Mr. Henry L. Christian, aged 27, formerly of this town.

THE veracious testimony attached to the Native Preparations of Capt. Brant's Indian Remedies is a sufficient attestation to their merits. The soothing influence of the PULMONARY BALSAM over the raging tortures of the CONSUMPTIVE COUGH, the cessation of their pains, the increased facility afforded to the EXPECTORATION, the absence of those debilitating Night-Sweats altogether produce the consciousness of relief and permanent cure in the patient's mind. Add to these the

THE veracious testimony attached to the Native Preparations of Capt. Brant's Indian Remedies is a sufficient attestation to their merits. The soothing influence of the PULMONARY BALSAM over the raging tortures of the CONSUMPTIVE COUGH, the cessation of their pains, the increased facility afforded to the EXPECTORATION, the absence of those debilitating Night-Sweats altogether produce the consciousness of relief and permanent cure in the patient's mind. Add to these the

Distress of Thousands

who yearly suffer and die with the horrid scourge of Scrofula, drying up their blood and searing their vitals, and observe the sudden relief afforded by which in so many cases acts with a force and rapidity beyond even the SANGUINE EXPECTATION of the invalid.

Friends, Patrons, AND FELLOW CITIZENS,

I wish you all a Happy New Year ! !

NOW for a little fun and nonsense. There is quite an excitement about town, among the profession, because
GEORGE B. NIGHTINGALE
has been SHOEING UP not more than half of creation, for the last eight years, with
BOOTS & SHOES.

Well, let 'em "go it." "Guess there wont be much of a shower after all," as the chap said when Noah wouldn't let him get into the ark,—calculate to keep doing so right strait along, every time. Why my dear "fellow critters," we don't mean to brag, but you undertake to take a look at OUR Boots and Shoes and the first you know you get your foot right strait in ; there you are, stuck fast ; then out comes the old pocket book with THE SHINERS ; that's just what we want, and nothing else,—much better than credit ; credit takes time to no purpose, often-times, and time, you know, is money. The pay down system is the only true one, after all,—the best remedy for corns and unpleasant dreams. The man that takes a pair of BOOTS or SHOES with one hand, and PULLS OUT THE CASH with the other, is independent ; like all other tubs, he stands on his own bottoms ; give me the man that shells out the stuff, like a sheaf of wheat in cold weather and we'll set him on his taps in a gaffy. I therefore advise all mankind, womankind, and every other kind that wears SHOE LEATHER, to CALL when they find themselves ailing about the UNDERSTANDINGS. The Doctors may tinker up the physical frame but I'll beat 'em hollow at repairing Damaged Soles (with the best material for such cases)
P. S. Needn't be particular about knocking when you wish to come in ; never mind for a little mud as we have it in abundance. Brooms are plenty and cheap for the tin.

With the money you can buy
Boots, Caps, Shoes—come and try ;
Findings, also, made to use
For to make good Boots or Shoes.

When your Shoes are full of holes,
Or should need a pair of Soles,
I can mend them if you will
Just call in and pay the bill.

Health ! Health ! !

DR. WOOD'S
SARSAPARILLA
AND
WILD CHERRY BITTERS.

THIS new and valuable extract of SARSAPARILLA and WILD CHERRY has been used with great success for the permanent removal of all such diseases as take their rise from an impure state of the blood ; it promotes a healthy action of the Liver—strengthens the Nerves, and at once secures
HEALTH AND VIGOR
to the whole system. In all cases of
JAUNDICE, INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA, LOSS OF APPETITE, HABITUAL COSTIVENESS, SCROFULA, HEADACHE, LANGUOR, and that
DEPRESSION OF SPIRITS,
which is so common a complaint in the
SPRING AND SUMMER
season of the year, this Medicine has not its equal—and a single trial will convince the most incredulous of its peculiar virtues.
For further particulars the reader is referred to pamphlets which will be furnished by the Agents, showing the estimation which this valuable Medicine is held by those who have used it.
☞CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC.☜
Be particular and ask for Doct. Wood's Sarsaparilla Wild Cherry Bitters, and receive no other. This is the first preparation of these articles combined, ever offered to the public, and the great success attending its use has induced the unprincipled to counterfeit and imitate. As a preventive, see that the bottles have the words "Dr. Wood's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Bitters," pressed on the glass, and that each label on the bottle is signed by the proprietor, E. Thornton, Jr., New Bedford.
Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5.
AGENTS.
Quincy. Messrs. CLAPP & RICHARDS ; Dorchester, J. Marshall, Howland & Parker ; Milton Mills, M. D Plumer ; and by all respectable dealers in the United States.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

GOD HAS BEEN HERE.

There is a wise and mighty one,
His works around are seen,
And every thing we look upon
Proclaims he here has been.

To me it seems the quiet earth
On which we thoughtless tread,
In whispers now ascribes its birth
To him who gives me bread.

The flowers that blossom in the field,
Though springing from the sod,
Bear witness while their sweets they yield,
They are the gift of God.

Each little shrub whose leaf-clothed arms
Amidst the sunbeams play,
The mem'ry of a God embalms,
That light and heat obey.

The water in the little brook,
What is it, I enquire?
In vain I read the chemist's book!
What 's water? what is fire?

We know them only by the name,
Yet need them ev'ry hour,
And these in thunder tones proclaim
A wise and mighty power.

Have they intelligence—can they
Go forth or come at will?
No, there 's a power they did obey
That can control them still.

This hand so cunningly contrived,
So wond'rously design'd,
Were proof, if that alone survived,
Of superhuman mind.

A greater than these eyes have seen
Its architect must be;
Its mighty author must have been
A father kind to me.

Yes, ev'ry thing that meets the eye,
Declares there is a God,
From the bright worlds that deck the sky
To this unfinish'd clod.

F. M. Adlington, Weymouth.

A TOUCHING MEMORIAL.

The following verses were written for Miss C. L. Edwards, of this State, by Mr. Adams, the day preceding his fatal attack of illness.

In days of yore, the poet's pen
From wing of bird was plundered,
Perhaps of goose, but, now and then,
From Jove's own Eagle sundered.
But, now, metallic pens disclose
Alone the poet's numbers;
In iron inspiration glows,
Or with the minstrel slumbers.

Fair Damsel! could my pen impart,
In prose or lofty rhyme,
The pure emotions of my heart,
To speed the flight of time;
What metal from the womb of earth,
Could worth intrinsic bear,
To stamp with corresponding worth,
The blessings thou shouldst share?

HYMNS

Sung at the Exhibition of Universalist Sabbath School, on Wednesday evening, March 1st.

Opening Hymn.

Lord, in thy temple holy,
On Zion's lofty hill,
The songs of children lowly,
The Hebrew heart did thrill;
When loud and glad hosannas,
Hailed there the Savior come,
And Love and Mercy's banners,
Waved in the lofty dome.

O Father, in our gladness
We own thy Son our Lord,
And praise thee, that all sadness
Has vanished at his word:
And now thy love confessing,
We offer up our lays,
And seek thy holy blessing,
Upon our festal praise.

With humble, fervent pleading,
We ask thy favors shed,
On those thy children leading,
In wisdom's path to tread.
And never may their kindness
By us forgotten be;
Oh, save us from the blindness
Of those who seek not thee.

Closing Hymn.

Now our festal rites are ending,
Now we sing our farewell song
May our praise to Heaven ascending,
Rise from grateful heart and tongue,
And remembered, and remembered,
Cheer us as we journey on.

Songs of joy the spirit lighten,
Mid its labor and its care;
Joys increase, and sorrows brighten,
When we mingle song and prayer;
Ever praying, ever praying,
Souls a heavenly beauty wear.

Now, "good night," the spirit singing,
Offers holy prayer to God;
To his alter offerings bringing,
Bearing blessings home, abroad;
May we ever, may we ever,
Serve our Father and our Lord.

ANECDOTES.

A lady reading that a man had been sentenced to six months hard labor for dog-stealing, observed with a shudder, "Gracious, what would certain of our sex have to endure for entrapping puppies!"

A gentleman at a fashionable assembly being asked which of the ladies of the company he thought the most beautiful, replied—"Why, they are all beautiful; but that lady, (pointing to one dressed in the extreme of fashion) I think out-strips them all."

BOSTON,

PERFORM all Operations belonging to the DENTAL PROFESSION, and continue to Manufacture and insert the purest and best of MINERAL TEETH, upon the ATMOSPHERIC, and on all other principles as practised by the best Dentists in this country and Europe.

Every Tooth we FILL, and every one we INSERT, we insure, according to circumstances; and all Dental Plate Work executed at our rooms is warranted to be equal to any that can be produced, and to give perfect satisfaction.

☞ We are administering the CHLOROFORM every day with success, and extracting Teeth by the dozen, without pain, and have never known it to affect the patient unfavorably, and yet we charge NO MORE than when we do not give it.

The public will not forget that to us is due the credit of the great and important improvement recently made in the method of inserting Artificial Teeth, both on Gold Plate and Pivots, and also preserving diseased Teeth and stumps in a healthy condition.

☞ Instruction given in relation to the New Method invented by us, and whole sets inserted in the most difficult mouths, for country or travelling Dentists, on reasonable terms. Pivot Teeth adapted to the mouth on our plan are far more durable and permanent than upon gold plate, secured in the common way, and will never want resetting. When necessary to mount them on a plate of gold by our method, we extract no sound stumps, preserve the form of the mouth, and secure them so firmly that the patient can eat with them as well as if they were natural teeth, and they will last a whole life-time, and look perfectly natural.

To all who require the services of a Dentist, and particularly such as have been unskillfully served, we would 'make our best bow,' and say, don't wait for an introduction, but call and see us at

Samaritan Balm,
For the cure of Coughs, Colds, and
Diseases of the Lungs!

ANOTHER evidence of the benefits derived from the use of this invaluable Medicine:

Boston, Nov. 1, 1847.

Messrs. Otis, Broaders & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen—Please send me by Expresss six dozen more of the "Samaritan Balm." Its virtues are fully established in our neighborhood, and I do not hesitate to say that the sale of it has been far greater than any new medicine I ever attempted to introduce. Of its benefits I can speak from actual experience, as being decidedly the best remedy for colds and diseases of the Lungs I ever tried. Last winter I was sorely afflicted with an attack of the "Bronchitis," when the good lady whose invention it is kindly prepared me a bottle which has completely cured me; and from the benefits I myself have personally derived from its use, I feel grateful that she has been prevailed upon to give so valuable a medicine to the world. Notwithstanding she has done it, without any wish to profit by it in a pecuniary point of view, I hope and trust she will reap a rich reward for her goodness towards suffering humanity. Yours, truly, D. BUGBEE.

THE TWO WEDDINGS.

'Oh, Florence, who do you think I saw riding with student Porter just now?' said Kate Winters as she entered the room where her cousin was sitting. Florence Bently raised her eyes from the book she was reading, as Kate continued. 'You will not guess, I am sure, so I must tell you. Well it was no other than Maria Somers, the reputed heiress of twenty thousand dollars.'

'Charles Porter has the privilege of riding with any one he fancies, I suppose,' said Florence, with something of bitterness in her tone, as she took up a withered rose bud and commenced tearing it in pieces.

'Certainly, dear Florence, but until you came, she never would receive his attentions, and has publicly said, although he may not have heard it, that she never would marry a man whose father was nothing but a country store-keeper. But, come, cousin of mine, our New England winds are chilling your southern blood, even in the bright month of June, let us go into the parlor where I left a cheerful fire blazing.'

Florence Bently was an orphan. She came from Virginia immediately after the death of her parents, and it was generally supposed that she did so from necessity. Her uncle Winters having a large family to support, many wondered that he performed so cheerfully the part of a father to the beautiful girl thus thrown upon his bounty. Kate was the eldest of the family, and she seemed to regard Florence as a superior being. She consulted her upon every occasion, and nothing was done without her approbation. Perfect confidence existed between them, and yet they resembled each other no more than the flashing diamond and the dewey rose-bud. All loved, yet few dared approach the beautiful Florence, while every one carressed the sweet Kate, as though she were still a child. The College students soon found where they could while away a pleasant hour, as their neglected lesson could testify. Charles Porter was the first whom rumor assigned to the beautiful southerner, but not long did he hold the place; wealth was his idol, and although he loved with passion such as he might not feel again, pride forbade, and he left the field to those who could afford to marry a poor girl because she was pretty.' Florence saw him depart with a mingled feeling of sadness and scorn. Sadness, that he must forever crush a bright hope, and scorn of his pride that led him to leave her for one more wealthy than herself.

As the cousins entered the parlor, Kate sprang to the table, and snatching a couple of cards which lay on it, exclaimed—

'Here, Florence, are the invitations for the pic nic on the mountain to-morrow, and yours is from Edward Wheaton, the poor student, as he is sometimes called. Shall you go?' she continued almost breathless, as Florence took the card.

'Why not, Kate?' said Florence, with a smile, the rose hue on her cheek deepening to a crimson.

'Why, you know he is poor, and that he was obliged to teach a common school, to obtain money to finish his studies.'

'I know all this, Kate, but would you refuse to go with him on that account?'

'No, I should not, of course; but you, Florence, you'—

'Well, what?'

'Why, nothing, only I can't understand you. One day you treat with neglect the most aristocratic and wealthy of our inhabitants, and the next, you accept, blushingly, the card of one who has nothing but talent to recommend him.'

'And is not that sufficient? When you learn to know the world as I have done, dear

MISCELLANY.

THE TWO WEDDINGS.

'Oh, Florence, who do you think I saw riding with student Porter just now?' said Kate Winters as she entered the room where her cousin was sitting. Florence Bently raised her eyes from the book she was reading, as Kate continued. 'You will not guess, I am sure, so I must tell you. Well it was no other than Maria Somers, the reputed heiress of twenty thousand dollars.'

Florence Bently was an orphan. She came from Virginia immediately after the death of her parents, and it was generally supposed that she did so from necessity. Her uncle Winters having a large family to support, many wondered that he performed so cheerfully the part of a father to the beautiful girl thus thrown upon his bounty. Kate was the eldest of the family, and she seemed to regard Florence as a superior being. She consulted her upon every occasion, and nothing was done without her approbation. Perfect confidence existed between them, and yet they resembled each other no more than the flashing diamond and the dewey rose-bud. All loved, yet few dared approach the beautiful Florence, while every one carressed the sweet Kate, as though she were still a child. The College students soon found where they could while away a pleasant hour, as their neglected lesson could testify. Charles Porter was the first whom rumor assigned to the beautiful southerner, but not long did he bold the place; wealth was his idol, and although he loved with passion such as he might not feel again, pride forbade, and he left the field to those 'who could afford to marry a poor girl because she was pretty.' Florence saw him depart with a mingled feeling of sadness and scorn. Sadness, that he must forever crush a bright hope, and scorn of his pride that led him to leave her for one more wealthy than herself.

As the cousins entered the parlor, Kate sprang to the table, and snatching a couple of cards which lay on it, exclaimed—

'Here, Florence, are the invitations for the pic nic on the mountain to-morrow, and yours is from Edward Wheaton, the poor student, as he is sometimes called. Shall you go?' she continued almost breathless, as Florence took the card.

'Why not, Kate?' said Florence, with a smile, the rose hue on her cheek deepening to a crimson.

'Why, you know he is poor, and that he was obliged to teach a common school, to obtain money to finish his studies.'

'I know all this, Kate, but would you refuse to go with him on that account?'

'No, I should not, of course; but you, Florence, you'—

'Well, what?'

'Why, nothing, only I can't understand you. One day you treat with neglect the most aristocratic and wealthy of our inhabitants, and the next, you accept, blushingly, the card of one who has nothing but talent to recommend him.'

'And is not that sufficient? When you learn to know the world as I have done, dear Kate, you will no longer wonder at my preference.'

The next day was a pleasant one. The party went in carriages to the mountain, and then ascended it on foot. It was a toilsome journey, as any one who has ever climed one of the Green or White Mountains, can assure you. Kate and the rest of the girls bounded along, sometimes with and sometimes without assistance, as happy as the birds singing in the chesnut bough above their heads. But Florence soon tired. She had been more tenderly nurtured and was illy fited for climbing one of the rugged hills of New Hampshire. But she toiled on, and at last reached the top, although she was obliged to lean heavily on the arm that supported her.

Edward Wheaton had loved the beautiful and gifted being who now leaned upon him for support, almost to adoration; but he had loved without hope. He had looked upon her as a bright star, that he might gaze upon and love, but must not hope to call his own. His early life had been a sad one. His father died before he had reached the age of fourteen. But he had struggled on, and in three months more he would complete his studies. As he seated Florence upon the rude seat constructed for the occasion, he whispered—

'The last part of our journey, Miss Bently, though toilsome to you, will be to me a scene on which memory will ever love to linger.'

A bright blush suffused the before pale cheek of Florence, that passed all unnoticed save him who called it forth. Refreshments were soon prepared, and there they dined, with the bright blue sky of June above their heads, and the beautiful Connecticut spread far beneath them, as it meandered slowly round the mountain. All were happy. Even Miss Somers forgot for a while her dislike to country manners, and participated in the rural scene. By her side was the polished Charles Porter, watching every look, and showing her every act of devotion. The day passed too quickly, and it was not until the bright stream below them began to deepen in shade, that any one spoke of returning. They both discovered, when alone and revolving over the events of the day, that each had lost a heart, either previous to or during the excursion. How they supported the loss the sequel will show.

As soon as Charles Porter had finished his studies, the elite of the village were summoned to witness his nuptials with Maria Somers. Mr. Winters' family including Florence, were invited; and, although it was generally known that she was the betrothed of Edward Wheaton, he was left out of the extended invitation. But Florence attended; and in her usual dignified manner offered her congratulations to the happy couple.

The bride wore a gold chain, crossed in front, attached, minus the watch, to a cord worn about the waist. A brilliant pin sparkled upon her bosom, which gave back the flash to the showy bracelet that encircled her arm. Her hair was braided and gathered to the back of her head, where it coiled around a bunch of artificial flowers, half rose and half violet. Such was the dress of the bride of the fastidious Charles Porter. That he observed it we may not say; but when Florence approached, dressed as she was, with neatness and elegance combined, he turned, with a look that could not be called satisfaction, to the butterfly-looking creature hanging upon his arm. As they were returning home, Mr. Winters said to Florence—

'Well, Flora, what do you think now of a New England wedding?'

'I think if this is a specimen, that I do not wish to attend another. Why, uncle, the bride looked like an opera-dancer! Is she a specimen of your brides?'

'Not exactly; I hope to see a fairer representation next week.'

Tears sprang to the eyes of Kate as she whispered, 'Do not let it be next week, dear Florence; put it off a few months longer.'

'The longer I stay, the harder it will be to part with my friends,' was the reply of Florence, as they entered the house.

The remainder of the week was a busy one to the inmates of Mr. Winters' house. Several packages had been received from Boston, and the milliners of H——— asserted that it was their opinion if the bride was to have a new dress, she was certainly going to make it herself, for no application had been made to them. How that may be, I know not; but when the day arrived, and Florence Bently, by the side of Edward Wheaton, appeared before the astonished spectators, a fairer vision of richness and elegance can scarcely be imagined. Her dress was of the richest satin, purely embroidered, over which fell a half skirt of Brussels lace. A veil that a princess might have envied fell from the back of her head, half hiding the delicate orange blossoms nestling in her dark hair. A pearl bracelet, worn because it was the gift of Edward, was her only ornament. As she entered the room, Mrs. Porter exclaimed—

'I really wonder how Mr. Winters can afford it! But I suppose he is so glad to get rid of her, that he intends to make it a general season of rejoicing.'

Charles, by a look, checked his wife from this breach of good manners, as the ceremony proceeded. As soon as it was over, and the guests had partaken of the bride's cake, (imported from Boston,) a splendid equipage drove up to the door, and the poor student, gently disengaging his beautiful bride from the embrace of her wedding relatives, handed her into it, and then springing to her side, the carriage rolled away from the intense gaze of the spectators. Mr. Winters enjoyed their surprise for a few moments, and then said—

'You are probably surprised at the sudden departure of my niece, and I owe you an apology for so long keeping her circumstances unknown to you. She is not the poor relation so generally supposed, but possesses wealth, the interest of which would enable me and mine to live in luxury. She early learned the value of wealth in the eyes of the world, and when she came here, discovered, by accident, that she was supposed to be a needy relation, and determined to countenance the mistake, and thus try the lovers of wealth. In that character she won the heart of Edward Wheaton, and he now enjoys wealth that will take from him that title of The poor Student.'

'Can this be so?' soliloquised Charles Porter. It was a common-place remark, but it did not fall common-place upon the ear of his wife. Her face reddened to the very temples, and every one expected a regular scene; but it was stayed—at least before the guests. The last time I saw her she was endeavoring to make a light-hearted girl believe that all a man would ever marry her for would be to add riches to his estate. 'Charles would never have married me,' she concluded, turning to her husband, who happened to be present, 'if it had not been for my money.'

OLD ENOUGH FOR SCHOOL.

One of the most pernicious customs in society is that of sending children to school at too early an age. We hardly enter into a school room without finding ample evidence that there is a great want of intelligence or humanity in parents. To get rid of trouble at home, they are willing to inflict it upon the teacher at school; to gratify their most contemptible vanity, they are willing to sacrifice the health and life of the child; and while this torturing process is going on at school, the parent is sure to make no visits there. What though its feeble frame, and less elastic step, its pale cheek and pensive look, send forth the keen rebuke, and plead for exercise and pure air! These appeals have no power, because they are at first but slightly made, and increase daily in the same ratio as the child's energies are exhausted. Stimulants, stimulants are given to create a fictitious strength to sustain the child; its ambition is appealed to, and its nervous system is made to prop up its sinking constitution while this system of torture is carried on—a system which sends its victim to an early grave, or leaves it to recover its vital energies, if perchance it may when its school days have ended.

Nature wisely dictates, if parents will only heed her instructions, that the child must have exercise, pure air, and ample opportunity to enjoy the flow of spirits which characterize that period of life. It needs all its vital energy for the healthy growth of its body. It should not, therefore, be diverted from its legitimate office, for the purpose of affording an unnatural stimulus to the mind, or be repressed to meet the exigencies of the school-room.

If civilization is indicated by its care of human life and happiness, a system of education must be sadly deficient when it tends to shorten life, and crowd its brief period with pain and anguish. The true progress of society can be marked only by the increasing proportion of mature persons to the number of births—persons possessing well disciplined minds and healthy bodies. Those regulations of society which require a premature school education, are fraught with too many evil consequences to be tolerated by any enlightened community. The whole period of life is the school age, and the world is the school. Then why crowd the child through mental labor enough to enervate those who have reached maturity?

It will save time as well as health, to delay the school day until the child have acquired vigor of frame sufficient to tax the powers of the mind. It will acquire much valuable information from the book of nature. She unfolds her pages and exhibits the sublimest truths ever contemplated by man, in myriads of forms, each of which is more attractive as the admiring learner progresses. Habits of observation are formed, the sensibilities are improved, and the mind is strengthened by the unrestrained intercourse children have with nature.

Counsels to Sleepers. Never sleep with the head covered, for the air under the clothes is apt to be vitiated, and the skin secretes perspirable matter, carbonic gass, etc. Children should sleep alone as much as possible, if we would give them vigorous lungs, sound bodies, free circulation of blood, and good minds. Pure air and exercise is a remedy for a host of physical transgressions. Fat persons should sleep little and exercise much. Too much sleep weakens the nerves, disorders the brain, produces peevishness, leads to apoplexy and palsy, disturbes the heart, and relaxes the system, by over-prespiration in bed. Hearty suppers, strong tea and coffee, disturb the sleep. Early rising and exercise strengthen the fibres, whereas morning sleep relaxes the solids. The passions disturb the sleep, and induces various diseases.

D'Israeli, author of the Curiosities of Literature,' died in London, on the 19th of Jan., in the 83d year of his age.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

The School Committee having attended to their duty for the year ending February, 1848, respectfully present to the Town the following

REPORT:

The first and most important duty of a town is to provide for the education of all the children. Universal education is justly regarded as the vital principle of our political institutions; as "the keystone of our social arch, which binds and holds fast the elements of liberty." To give permanency to our institutions; to remove existing evils, and to avert those which threaten us; the moral and intellectual advancement of the people is our only dependence. To secure this is the object of our free Schools; which give to the child of the poorest man, a chance for an education. It is a gratifying reflection to the Committee, and must be also to every citizen of this town, that the education of every child is here provided for. It will be still better provided for, when we shall have added some further improvements to our present school system, and shall have elevated the standard of education to a higher rank among us.

In view of the importance of our public schools and the expense incurred by the town in supporting them, the Committee have felt the responsibility resting upon them in the discharge of duties to which they were appointed. In performing those duties, they may not have given satisfaction to all, (nor was this perhaps to be expected under all the circumstances in which they have been called to act,) but they have endeavored carefully to guard and promote the interests of the schools; and are now prepared to make a true and faithful report of their condition. In doing this, they ask leave to notice more particularly than in former years, the excellencies and deficiencies of the several Schools, in the order in which they were examined.

North District.

This District has but one school. The whole number of scholars attending it is fifty seven. Average attendance during the last quarter, thirty seven. The general appearance of this school at the last examination, was far from being satisfactory to the Committee. This was in a great measure owing to a change of teachers, which took place, unfortunately, just as the school began to exhibit signs of improvement. Mr. Cheever who taught the latter part of the year, labored hard, but was not successful in his efforts to promote that improvement. The order of the school was decidedly bad. The scholars appeared idle, and very much wanting in interest in their studies. Hence the school is very backward, with few exceptions, in reading, arithmetic, grammar, and geography; and as a whole far behind the other schools in this town.

Quincy Point District.

In this District there are two schools. The Primary school has been taught during the year by Miss Burrell, and may rank with the best schools of this description. Under the management of the present teacher, it has risen rapidly to this elevation, and presents evidence of most pleasant relation between her and her pupils. The school exhibited unusual improvement in reading and spelling; and is an example of the success of oral instruction in other branches of learning. It contains sixty six pupils. Average attendance fifty five.

The Grammar School in this District is taught by Mr. Newcomb, whose ability and faithfulness as a teacher are clearly discerned in the progress of his pupils during the past year. This school contains one hundred scholars. Average attendance seventy six and two-thirds. Their appearance in geography, arithmetic, penmanship, and map-drawing, was very good. To this latter useful exercise, much attention has been given; and the specimens exhibited were skilfully and tastefully executed. Considerable improvement had also been made in reading, and the examination in other branches of study showed that they had been duly attended to. The school exhibited an appearance of great activity and industry, combined with kind feelings between the teacher and his pupils, which was manifested at the close of the examination in a very neat and appropriate manner. The improvement in the schools of this district, is fully equally to that of any others in town.

West District.

The Primary department in this District contains eighty six scholars. Average attendance fifty seven. This school under the charge of Miss Ela, was, during the first part of the year, very dull and backward. By her faithful labors during the year, a better state of things has been produced. The order of the school was good, and the improvement in reading and spelling exhibited at the closing examination, was equal to the expectations of the Committee.

The Intermediate school in this district, taught by Miss Whiting, contains seventy seven pupils. Average attendance fifty seven. The Committee of last year found this school in a very low state; the Committee of the present year find that state much improved. The exertions of the present teacher have been very successful. The order of the school has been good, and the examination in reading and spelling was very satisfactory. In geography and arithmetic, the school is still backward, but compared with former deficiencies, there is considerable improvement.

The Grammar school in this district is one of our most important schools, and Mr. Woods, who has taught it during the year past, has filled a very laborious station, in a manner creditable to himself and his pupils, and satisfactory to the Committee. The school contains ninety one scholars. Average attendance sixty six. The reading at the examination was in some respects defective; but the exercise was rendered interesting by a very beautiful specimen of reading the scriptures given by the teacher and the pupils in concert. And the Committee was further gratified to find enunciation attended to as one of the regular exercises of the school. The examination in the other branches was satisfactory, especially in arithmetic, in which some of the boys of this school are known to excel.

Centre District.

The Primary school in this district has been taught for several years by Miss Burbank, and still compares well with the other primary schools in this town. Considerable attention is paid to the elementary principles of geography and arithmetic in this school, in which, considering the age of the pupils, they appeared well; as they did also in the exercises of reading and spelling. This school contains forty five scholars. Average attendance in summer thirty five; in winter twenty six.

The Intermediate school numbers sixty scholars, and the average attendance is forty five and one-fourth. This school is under the care of Miss Varnum, and has exhibited throughout the year a beautiful and satisfactory appearance. The neatness and order of the school is very commendable. The examination in reading and spelling was satisfactory, quite so. In arithmetic and geography the school will compare favorably with others of the same grade.

The Grammar school in this district possesses features of peculiar interest. During the past year it has been under the charge of Mr. Greene by whom it has been well governed and well instructed. The number of scholars belonging to the school is 113. The average attendance during the summer was 73 7844-10189; and during the winter 61 7968-10459. The blackboards are used to good purpose in the school, particularly in analysis, which is very thoroughly and successfully taught. Great attention has also been paid to map-drawing, some speciemens of which were very beautiful; and the scholars displayed a familiar understanding of the subject of geography within the limits to which their maps and studies had been confined. The reading was uncommonly good—the enunciation uniformly full and distinct. The examination in arithmetic was not so satisfactory. In this the scholars appeared more deficient than in either of the other branches. The neatness and order of the school is truly commendable. The teacher has had some difficulties to contend with during a part of the year; but by his faithfulness and persevering labors he has sustained himself and the school much to the satisfaction of the Committee. At the close of the examination, a pleasing incident occurred which showed that the relation between him and his pupils was very satisfactory.

South District.

The Primary school in this district, under the care of Mrs. Burrell has always been one of our best primary schools, and still maintains its high rank. The school room is quite too small for the number of scholars, which is one hundred. The average attendance through the year has been 54 23-44. The school is much crowded, but still the order is good; and the improvement in reading and spelling, together with many other things taught in this school, fully meet the expectations of the Committee.

The Intermediate school contains a large number of scholars, but the attendance has been quite irregular. The whole number belonging to the school is one hundred. Average attendance 57 31-37. Though unpromising at the commencement of the year, this school has done great credit both to teacher and scholars. The appearance of the school is neat and orderly; and the examination in reading, spelling, geography and arithmetic exhibited satisfactory improvements. Miss White the teacher of this school has succeeded well.

The Grammar school taught by Mr. Cummings is one of the best in town, and exhibited at the closing examination a degree of improvement rarely witnessed. In arithmetic, geography, and grammar, it was uniformly satisfactory. The instruction in grammar in the lower classes was singularly well adapted to the capacities of the children, being combined with their spelling lesson; and the answers were uncommonly prompt and correct. In reading great attention is paid to emphasis and pauses, and to acquire a graceful and natural tone. The excellent condition of this school is very creditable to the present teacher, and speaks well for all concerned. The whole number of scholars belonging to it is 128. Average attendance during the winter 75 4-23.

East District.

This district contains but one small school, which has been taught during the year by Mr. Steel. The average attendance during the summer was twenty one. The whole number of scholars in the winter has been forty; average attendance thirty four. The committee found this school in a very dull and backward state. The order was good. The reading low and indistinct, and very much wanting in spirit and feeling. Their knowledge of grammar was confined to the elements. In penmanship there was little or no improvement. There is however a high moral tone in this school, which in some degree compensates for the want of literary excellence. The true system of education includes both.

Such is a rapid view of the condition of the several schools in this town. It seems proper for your Committee to say in conclusion, that the schools of the larger districts, taken as a whole, have done more than maintain the character and reputation given to them in former years. They have attained a higher rank. It is the opinion of the Committee that in no previous year has so much work been done, and such manifest improvement made as during the past year. This may be in part attributed to the wholesome and inspiring influence of the Teachers' Institute, held in this town in March last, combined with the skillful management and untiring efforts of the teachers; many of whom have given a great deal more time and instruction than was required of them. Something is also due to the new and improved methods of teaching, as it regards spelling, composition, geography, parsing and analysis, which have been more fully introduced into the schools of this town the past year, and which are not to be regarded as innovations merely, but as improvements. For such, they decidedly are. What enlightened teacher would be willing to abandon the work of investigation upon the black-board and slate, to become again the servile follower of the text-book?—or to change the present method pursued in the study of grammar, for Lindley Murray's system?

But while the Committee have the pleasure of reporting the improvement which has been made in the schools of the larger districts, they are sorry to say that in the two smaller districts, the schools have not appeared so well as in former years. They are behind the other schools in this town, both as to government and progress. Something should be done to elevate them to a higher rank, and render them more useful to the districts in which they are located. And the Committee would suggest, that competent female teachers be employed in both these schools, at least for the greater part of the year. And they fully believe that the interests of the schools will, with such teachers, be much better promoted, than by low salaried masters.

The Committee would further remark, that although something has been done towards supplying the schools with black-boards and the facilities for instruction, still there is a great deficiency. And they would recommend that all our grammar schools be furnished, in addition to black-boards, with globes and outline maps. This could be done by the inhabitants of the several districts at a small expense.

But in seeking to improve our grammar schools, we must not be forgetful of the primary and intermediate departments, nor overlook their importance. They are to the grammar schools, what the nursery is to the garden and orchards. Children will invariably exhibit in the grammar school, the effects of their previous training. They "like tender osiers take the bow,

And as they first are fashioned, still will grow."

The character of our primary and intermediate schools must first be elevated, by the employment of well paid teachers of the right stamp; inasmuch as to them is committed the earliest, and therefore most important part of the work of educating in our common schools. This early training should be skilfully and carefully managed. Then, when from the well-stocked nursery we transplant to the orchard, we may expect thrifty and productive trees.

Respectfully submitted,
JOHN T. BURRELL, Chairman.

RESPECT TO MR. ADAMS. The Senators and Representatives of the Eighth Congressional District held a meeting in Boston on the 28th ult, at which the following resolutions were passsd:

Resolved, That the Senators and Representatives of the Eighth Congressional District have heard with profound emotion and regret of the death of their late venerable Representative in Congress, John Quincy Adams.

Resolved, That as a mark of respect to the memory of the Patriot Statesman, they recommend to the people of the several towns in the Eighth District to appoint committees to attend his funeral.

The citizens af Braintree at their annual meeting on Monday last, adopted a series of resolutions in relation to Mr. Adams and chose a Committee of fifty to attend his funeral. We have not room for the resolutions this week.

The people of Walpole have also adopted resolutions, and invited Rev. Mr. Merrich to deliver an Eulogy on Mr. Adams. The proceedings of the meeting shall have a place in our colums next week.

PRISONER'S FRIEND. Rev. John M. Spear has disposed of his interest in this paper to his brother Charles, who will now be sole proprietor. The retiring partner proposes to travel and lecture "wherever he can find an open door," and aid the prisoner according to his ability. Communications for J. M. Spear can be sent to the "Friend" office, No. 40 Cornhill, Boston.

CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE AND APPENDIX. Messrs Blair & Rives give notice that they have struck off a large edition of these valuable publications, to meet the increased demand, and will, up to the first day of April, furnish full copies, from the beginning to the conclusion of the session, at the original subscription of two dollars for each. After that period, the price will be enhanced to three dollars each. As a Congressional record, this work is valuable.

The Barre Patriot records the death of Mr. Edson Highley of Templeton, caused by the use of water drawn through a lead pipe.

The body will arrive here about eleven o'clock, A. M., under the charge of the Washington Light Guards of Boston, commanded by Capt. Kelsey,

The Roxbury Artillery have been detailed the honor of firing the proper salute on the arrival of the body, and the bells of the different churches will then be tolled, announcing to our quiet town the fact that John Quincy Adams has returned, but, in his own words, "This is the last of earth."

During the moving of the funeral cortege, minute guns will be announced from "President's Hill" and the several bells tolled.

We are glad to find that the Committee of Arrangements have selected John L. Dimmock, Esq., as Chief Marshall, as we know whatever duty he undertakes to perform, will and can be done as it should be.

LEGISLATURE. A bill has been reported to repeal all existing laws on insolvency; also, bills to incorporate a bank in Worcester and one in Barre, and to increase the capitol of several others. The Committee on the license laws have reported a bill regulating the sale of alcohol and prohibiting the sale of intoxicating drinks, which has been ordered to be printed. Rev. Dr. Pierce of Brooklin, has been appointed to preach the annual election sermon.

CROPS IN OHIO. The tobacco crop in Ohio it is supposed will not be over 6,000 or 8,000 hhds.; last year it was 20,000. The corn crop, in the giant of the West, during the year just closing, is estimated to amount to 47,272,815 bushels.

CONGRESS. The journal of Congressional proceedings is uninteresting. The "Treaty" has not been acted upon as yet.

FAST. The Governor, with the advice and consent of the council, has appointed Thursday, the sixth day of April next, to be observed as a day of public fasting, humiliation and prayer.

EIGHTH DISTRICT. The Governor has assigned Monday, the third day of April next, for the choice of a member of the thirtieth Congress, in District No. 8, in place of John Quincy Adams, deceased.

Worcester's

Universal and Critical Dictionary of the English Language.

BY JOSEPH E. WORCESTER, LL. D.

One volume, 8vo. sheep, 1032 pages—Price $3 50

THE Publishers respectfully invite attention to the following eminent testimony to the excellence of this Standard Dictionary.

The execution of this Dictionary fully answers to its title.

The Vocabulary is probably more comprehensive than that of all preceding English Dictionaries united.

Constant reference is made to authorities with respect to words newly introduced, and care is taken to note such as are technical, foreign, obsolete, provincial, or vulgar.

The definitions are clear and exact, and those pertaining to technical and scientific terms are specially valuable to the general reader.

The author has evidently bestowed great labor on pronunciation. His system of Notation, which is easily understood, and founded on a more complete analysis of the vowel sounds than we have elsewhere met with, together with his plan of exhibiting all the best English authorities in relation to words differently pronounced by different orthoepists, gives to this work important advantages as a Pronouncing Dictionary.

In orthography he has made no arbitrary changes, but where usage is various and fluctuating, he has aimed to be consistant, and to reduce to the same rules words of similar formation.

The insertion of Grammatical forms and inflections of words to a much greater extent than they are given in other English Dictionaries, and the short critical notes on the orthography, the pronunciation, the grammatical form and construction, and the peculiar, technical, local, and American uses of words interspersed through the volume, give to this work much additional value.

The copious Vocabulary of Modern Geographical Names, with their pronunciation, and a greatly enlarged and improved edition of Walker's Key to the pronunciation of Classical and Scripture Proper Names, are important appendages to the Dictionary.

A year has passed since this Dictionary was published: and its already extensive use, both among cultivated English readers, and men of wide learning, affords good testimony of its merits. We confidently recommend it as containing an ample and careful view of the present state of our language.

Health! Health!!

DR. WOOD'S
SARSAPARILLA
AND
WILD CHERRY BITTERS.

THIS new and valuable extract of SARSAPARILLA and WILD CHERRY has been used with great success for the permanent removal of all such diseases as take their rise from an impure state of the blood; it promotes a healthy action of the Liver—strengthens the Nerves, and at once secures to the whole system. In all cases of

JAUNDICE, INDIGESTION, DYSPEPSIA,
LOSS OF APPETITE, HABITUAL COSTIVENESS, SCROFULA, HEADACHE, LANGUOR,
and that
DEPRESSION OF SPIRITS,
which is so common a complaint in the
SPRING AND SUMMER

season of the year, this Medicine has not its equal—and a single trial will convince the most incredulous of its peculiar virtues.

For furthor particulars the reader is referred to pamphlets which will be furnished by the Agents, showing the estimation which this valuable Medicine is held by those who have used it.

☞ CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC. ☜

Be particular and ask for Doct. Wood's Sarsaparilla Wild Cherry Bitters, and receive no other. This is the first preparation of these articles combined, ever offered to the public, and the great success attending its use has induced the unprincipled to counterfeit and imitate. As a preventive, see that the bottles have the words "Dr. Wood's Sarsaparilla and Wild Cherry Bitters," pressed on the glass, and that each label on the bottle is signed by the proprietor, E. Thornton, Jr., New Bedford.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

There's mourning on the mountain side,
There's weeping in the vale,
On lake and river far and wide,
Where e'er there floats a sail,
Columbia mourns her Patriot tried,
It is a nation's wail.

A vet'ran from his post has fled
Who never flinch'd before;
The Nester of the north is dead;
Her watchman is no more,
The requiem o'er his honor'd head
Resounds from shore to shore.

Lamented Patriot! o'er thy grave
The freeman's tears will flow,
And from the hovel of the slave
Will rise the note of woe,
Belov'd by all the good and brave
Where freedom's Altars glow.

F. M. Adlington, Weymouth.

THE PRINTER'S SONG.

Print, comrades, print; a noble task
Is the one we gaily ply;
'Tis ours to tell to all who ask,
The wonders of earth and sky;
We catch the thought all glowing warm,
As it leaves the Student's brain;
And place the stamp of enduring form
On Poet's airy strain.
Then let us sing, as we nimbly fling
The slender letters round:
A glorious thing, is our laboring,
Oh where may its like be found!

Print, comrades, Print; the fairest thought
Ever limned in Painter's dream,
The rarest form e'er sculptor wrought,
By the light of beauty's gleam,
Though lovely, may not match the power
Which our own proud Art can claim;
That links the past with the present hour,
And its breath—the voice of fame.
Then let us sing, as we nimbly fling
The slender letters round:
A glorious thing, is our laboring,
Oh where may its like be found?

Print, comrades, print; God hath ordained
That man by his toil should live;
Then spurn the charge, that we disdained
The labor that God would give!
We envy not the sons of ease,
Nor the lord in princely hall;
But bow before the wise decrees
In kindness meant for us all.
Then let us sing, as we nimbly fling
The slender letters round;
A glorious thing, is our laboring,
Oh where may its like be found?

THE SCOLDING WIFE.

'Tis she! 'tis she! the scalding she!
With tongue so long and loud and free;
Without a stop—without a bound,
It runs like the devil the whole year round:
It plagues the earth, it shocks the skies
And like a blazen beldame's lies
I'm sure 'tis she! I'm sure 'tis she!
I am as I would never be,
With the blues above, and the blues below,
And clamor wheresoe'er I go.
If I seek to escape in slumber deep,
What matter?
What matter? she scolds me up from sleep.

I love—oh! how I love to run
From this fierce, foaming, raving one,
When her mad capers scare the moon,
As she bellows aloft her tempest tune,
And yells as yelleth a fiend below,
And gives with every word a blow.
I never approached this terrible bore,
But I envied a bachelor more and more,
And backward I flew from her thump or kick,
Like a dog that dreadeth his master's stick;
And a master she was and is to me,
For I am wed to this scolding she!

The day was sad, and black the morn,
In the noisy hour when she was born;
The winds they whistled, the thunders rolled,
But confessed a beat from the baby-scold;
And never was heard such an outcry wild,
As came from the throat of that yelping child.
Since then I have fled, in brawl and strife,
Some dismal winters, a husband's life;
With brats to rock when I want to range,
But never have dreamed or hoped for a change;
Will come from the tongue of this scolding she.

THE veracious testimony attached to the Native Preparations of Capt. Brant's Indian Remedies is a sufficient attestation to their merits. The soothing influence of the PULMONARY BALSAM over the raging tortures of the CONSUMPTIVE COUGH, the cessation of their pains, the increased facility afforded to the EXPECTORATION, the absence of those debilitating Night-Sweats altogether produce the consciousness of relief and permanent cure in the patient's mind. Add to these the

Samaritan Balm,
For the cure of Coughs, Colds, and
Diseases of the Lungs!

ANOTHER evidence of the benefits derived from the use of this invaluable Medicine;

Boston, Nov. 1, 1847.

Messrs. Otis, Broaders & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen—Please send me by Expresss six dozen more of the "Samaritan Balm." Its virtues are fully established in our neighborhood, and I do not hesitate to say that the sale of it has been far greater than any new medicine I ever attempted to introduce. Of its benefits I can speak from actual experience, as being decidedly the best remedy for colds and diseases of the Lungs I ever tried. Last winter I was sorely afflicted with an attack of the "Bronchitis," when the good lady whose invention it is kindly prepared me a bottle which has completely cured me; and from the benefits I myself have personally derived from its use, I feel grateful that she has been prevailed upon to give so valuable a medicine to the world. Notwithstanding she has done it without any wish to profit by it in a pecuniary point of view, I hope and trust she will reap a rich reward for her goodness towards suffering humanity. Yours, truly, D. BUGBEE.

☞Price one dollar per bottle—six bottles for five dollars.

GRAEFENBERG COMPANY'S OFFICE,
50 Broadway, New York, September 24th, 1847.

The very great increase of the Graefenberg Company's business in New England, has rendered it necessary to re-organize the General Agency there. This is therefore to certify, that the New England Branch of the Graefenberg Company, is now established at No. 154 Washington street, Boston, and that Mr. Edwin C. Barnes is duly appointed Secretary of said Branch; and that he is authorized to establish Local Depots, and to grant rights to vend the company's Medicines. Every Agent must have a certificate with the seal of the Company thereunto, signed by its Secretary and countersigned by the aforesaid Branch Secretary. No one is authorized to sell the Company's Medicines without such certificate. EDWARD BARTON, Secretary.

GRAEFENBERG MEDICINES.

The undersigned is fully prepared to establish a Graefenberg Depot in all places of proper size in New England (except the State of Connecticut and that portion of Vermont west of the Green Mountains,) and also in the British Provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. Immediate application should be made either personally or by letter. As there will ordinarily be but one Depot in a town or village, the Agency will be very valuable.

The leading article to which public attention is invited is the GRAEFENBERG VEGETABLE PILLS, of which 30,000 boxes are sold each and every week. The following complaints yield with certainty to their power: Asthma, Bilious Complaints, Catarrh, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Erysipelas, Imperfect Digestion, Fluor Albus, Green Sickness, Heartburn, Headache, Jaundice, Liver Complaints, Rheumatism, and various diseases of the Stomach. In all Chronic complaints the most implicit reliance may be placed upon them. Price 25 cents a box.

The names of the other Medicines are as follows:

THE CHILDREN'S PANACEA.

For summer complaints, dysentery, and all other affections of the stomach and bowels, it is infallible. Price 50 cents a bottle.

THE GRAEFENBERG SARSAPARILLA COMPOUND,

Warranted to make two quarts superior to any in the world. Price one dollar a bottle.

THE GREEN MOUNTAIN VEGETABLE OINTMENT.

Wherever inflammation exists, this ointment is a positive and speedy cure. Price 25 and 50 cents a box.

THE GRAEFENBERG EYE LOTION.

For disorders of the Eyes this Lotion has no equal. For violent inflammation, weakness, or foreign substances in the eyes, it is an unfailing remedy. Price 25 cents per bottle, with full directions.

THE GRAEFENBERG HEALTH BITTERS.

Sovereign to build up the enervated system, to restore the appetite and clear the skin. Price 25 cents a package.

THE CONSUMPTIVE'S BALM.

This most extraordinary article is infallible, positively, in Consumption, Bronchitis, and Bleeding at the Lungs. It is only sent as ordered at $5 the quart. Consumptives may be sure of finding in this article that which will not disappoint their hopes.

The Graefenberg Gazette, published by the Company for gratuitous distribution, may be had on application to any one of their numerous Agents.

PERFORM all Operations belonging to the Dental Profession, and continue to Manufacture and insert the purest and best of MINERAL TEETH, upon the Atmospheric, and on all other principles as practised by the best Dentists in this country and Europe.

Every Tooth we fill, and every one we insert, we insure, according to circumstances; and all Dental Plate Work executed at our rooms is warranted to be equal to any that can be produced, and to give perfect satisfaction.

☞We are administering the Chloroform every day with success, and extracting Teeth by the dozen, without pain, and have never known it to affect the patient unfavorably, and yet we charge no more than when we do not give it.

The public will not forget that to us is due the credit of the great and important improvement recently made in the method of inserting Artificial Teeth, both on Gold Plate and Pivots, and also preserving diseased Teeth and stumps in a healthy condition.

☞Instruction given in relation to the New Method invented by us, and whole sets inserted in the most difficult mouths, for country or travelling Dentists, on reasonable terms. Pivot Teeth adapted to the mouth on our plan are far more durable and permanent than upon gold plate, secured in the common way, and will never want resetting. When necessary to mount them on a plate of gold by our method, we extract no sound stumps, preserve the form of the mouth, and secure them so firmly that the patient can eat with them as well as if they were natural teeth, and they will last a whole life-time, and look perfectly natural.

To all who require the services of a Dentist, and particularly such as have been unskillfully served, we would 'make our best bow,' and say, don't wait for an introduction, but call and see us at

MISCELLANY.

A LOVE OF A SINGING-MASTER.

The prettiest girl that attended our singing-meeting was Jane Gordon, the only daughter of a Scotchman who had lately bought a farm in the neighborhood. She was a fair and gentle damsel, soft spoken, and down-looking, but not without a stout will of her own, such as they do say, your very soft spoken people are apt to have. Indeed, we may argue that to be able at all times to command one's voice down to a given level, requires a pretty strong will, and more self-possession than impetuous people ever can have; and it is well known that blusterers are easier governed than any body else. Jane Gordon had light hair, too, which hasty observers are apt to consider a sign of a mild and complying temper; but our dear Jane, though a good girl, and a dutiful daughter, had a good deal of trouble with old Adam, and had given her sober parents a good deal too.

So that, by and bye, when it was whispered that Jane Gordon was certainly in love with Mr. Fasole, and that Mr. Fasole was at least very attentive to Jane Gordon, the old people felt a good deal troubled. They were prudent, however, and only watched and waited though quite determined that an itinerant singing master should not carry off their treasure, to be a mere foot-ball of Fortune, and have nor house nor ha'.

Nor fire, nor candle-light.

And at every singing-meeting the intimacy between Mr. Fasole and his fair pupil became more and more apparent, and the faces of the unappropriated damsels longer and longer. The district schoolmaster, that winter, was a frightful old man, with a face like a death's head, set off by a pair of huge round-eyed spectacles, so he was out of the question, even if he had not had a wife and family to share his sixteen dollars a month. The store-keeper, Squire Hooper's partner, had impudently gone off to the next town for a wife, but a few weeks before; and a young lawyer who talked of settling among us as soon as there was anything to do—(he had an eye on the setting-back of the mill-pond, we suspect,) did nothing but smoke cigars and play checkers on the store-counter, and tell stories of the great doings at the place he had been haunting before he came among us. So the dearth of beaux was stringent, mere farmer-boys being generally too shy to make anything of, until they have bought land and stock, when they begin to look round, with a business eye, for somebody to make butter and cheese. Mr. Fasole, with his knowing air, and a plentiful stock of modest assurance, reigned paramount, 'the cynosure of neighboring eyes.' He 'cut a wide a swath,' the young men said, and it may be supposed they owed him no good will.

How matters can remain for any length of time in such an explosive state without an eruption, let philosophers tell. Twice a week, for a whole long Western winter, did the singing-school meet regularly at the school-house, and practise the tunes which were to be sung on Sunday; and every Sunday did one or two breakdowns attest that improvement in music could not have been the sole object of such persevering industry. Sometimes a bold bass would be found finishing off, for a bar or two, in happy unconsciousness that its harmonious compeers had ceased to vibrate. Then again, owing to the failure, through timidity or obliviousness, of some main stay, the whole volume of sound would quaver away, trembling into silence or worse, while the minister would shut his eyes, with a look of meek endurance, and wait until Mr. Fasole, frowning, and putting on something of the air with which we jerk up the head of a stumbling horse, could get his unbroken team in order again. Jane Gordon was not very bright at singing, perhaps because she was suffering under that sort of fascination which is apt to make people stupid; and she was often the 'broken tooth and foot out of joint' at whose door these unlucky accidents were laid by the choir. Mr Fasole always took her part, however, and told the accuser to "look at home," or hinted at some by-gone blunder of the whole class, or declared that Miss Jane evidently had a bad cold—not the first time that a bad cold has served as an apology for singing out of time.

The period for a spring quarterly meeting of one of the leading denominations now drew nigh, and a great gathering was expected. Ministers from far and near, and a numerous baptism in the pond, were looked for. Preparations of all sorts were set on foot, and among the rest, music 'for the occasion.' The choice of 'set pieces' and anthems, and new tunes, gave quite a new direction and spur to the musical interest; but Mr. Fasole and Jane Gordon were not forgotten. There was time to watch them, and sing too. Through the whole winter, the singing-master, though his way lay in quite an opposite direction, had thought proper to see Miss Gordon home, except when it was very cold or stormy, when he modestly withdrew, with an air which said he did not wish his attractions to seem particular. It had become quite a trick with the young men to listen by the road-side, in order to ascertain whether he did not pop the question somewhere between the school-house and Mr. Gordon's; but the conclusion was, that either he was too discreet to do it, or too cunning to let it be heard, for nothing could ever be distinguished but the most ordinary talk. Nothing could be more obvious, however, than that, whatever were Mr. Fasole's intentions, poor Jane was very much in earnest. She lost all her interest in the village circle, and, too honest and sincere for concealment, only found her spirits when the fascinating singing-master appeared. He had the magnetizer's power over the whole being of his pupil.

The parents observed all this with the greatest uneasiness, and remonstrated with her on the imprudence of her conduct, but in vain. They reminded her that no one knew anything about the singing-master, and that he had probably had at least one wife elsewhere, although it was past the art of man to betray him into any acknowledgement of such incumbrance; but Jane was deaf to a caution, and evidently only waited for the votary of music to make up his mind to ask, before she could courtesy, to say yes.

The quarterly meeting came on, and Squire Hooper's big barn was filled to overflowing. A long platform had been erected for the ministers, and rough seats in abundance for the congregation; but every beam, bin, and 'coin of vantage,' was hung with human life in some shape or other. Such a gathering, had not been seen in a long while. In front was placed Mr. Fasole, with Jane Gordon on his left hand, and his forces ranged in order due on each hand. White was his bosom, (outside) and fiery red his hair and face, as he wrought vehemently in beating time, while he sent out volumes, not to say whole editions of sound. One could not but conclude that every emotion of his soul must find utterance in the course of the morning's performance, if Jane Gordon only listened aright, which she seemed very well disposed to do. But the concluding hymn was to be the crowning effort. It abounded in fugues—those fatal favorites of country choirs, and had also several solos, which Mr. Fasole had assigned to Jane Gordon, in spite of the angry inuendoes of other pretenders. He had drilled her most perseveringly, and, though not without some misgivings, had succeeded in persuading himself, as well as his pupil, that she would get through these 'tight places' very well with a little help from him.

When the whole immense assembly rose to listen while the choir performed this 'set piece' it was with a sound like the rushing of many waters, and poor Jane, notwithstanding the whispered assurances of the master, began to feel her courage oozing out, as woman's courage is apt to do just when it is most wanted. She got through with her portion of the harmony with tolerable credit; but when it came to the first solo, it was as if one did take her by the throat, and the sounds died away on her lips. Dread silence ensued, but in a moment, from the other side of the barn, seemingly from a far distant loft, a female voice, clear, distinct and well trained, took up the recreant strain, and carried it through triumphantly. Then the chorus rose, and encouraged by this opportune aid, performed their part to admiration—so well indeed, and with so much enthusiasm, that they did not at first miss the leading of Mr. Fasole.

When the next solo's turn came, they had time to look round; and while the distant voice once more sent in its clear tones meandering among the rafters and through the mows and out of the wide doors, and all the class turned to look at the master. There he stood—agape—astare—pale—spiritless—astonished—petrified; his eyes sunken and hollow, and fixed in wild gaze on the dim distance whence issued the potent sound, while poor Jane's fascinated optics gazed nowhere but on him. But before note could be taken of their condition, the chorus must once more join in the last triumphant burst, for the new auxiliary had inspired them like a heavenly visitant, and they could not attend to sublunary things. They finished in a perfect blaze of glory, the unknown voice sounding far above all others, and carrying its part as independantly as Mr. Fasole himself could have done.

'What is the matter with the singing-master?' 'Has he got a fit?' Is he dying?' was whispered through the crowd as soon as the meeting was dismissed.

'Bring water—whiskey—a fan—oh goodness! what is to be done?'

'Let me come to him,' said a powerful voice just at hand; and, as the crowd opened, a tall, masculine woman, of no very prepossessing exterior, made her way to the fainting Orpheus.

'Jedediah!' she exclaimed, giving a stout lift to the drooping head; 'Jedediah! don't you know your own Polly Ann?'

It was Mrs. Fasole—a very promising scholar whom the unhappy teacher had married at the scene of former labors, somewhere in the interior of Illinois, hoping to find her a true help-mate in the professional line. But, discovering to his cost that she understood only one kind of harmony, and that not of the description most valuable in private, he had run away from her and her big brothers, and hoped, in the deep seclusion of still newer regions, to escape her forever, and pass for that popular person, an agreeable bachelor. Whether he was really villian enough to have intended to marry poor Jane too, we cannot know, but we will cheerfully hope not; though we are not sure that wantonly to trifle with an innocent girl's affections for the gratification of his vanity, was many shades less culpable. The world judges differently, we know, since it makes one offence punishable by law, while the other is considered in certain circles, rather a good joke than otherwise. But the singing-master and his fearful spouse disappeared and those who had not joined the class exulted; while, as far as public demonstration went, we could not see but the singing at meeting fell back to very nearly the old mark, under the auspices of old deacon Ingalls, who has for many years been troubled with a polypus in his nose.

Jane Gordon is a much more sensible girl than she was two years ago, and looks with no little complacency upon Jacob Still, a neighbor's son who boasts that he can turn a furrow much better than he can a tune.

Champagne Wine. A bottle of this wine in the province of Champagne, can be bought for about forty cents. Now the jolly fellows of the United States think they get the best of this wine to drink. Why shouldn't they? Don't they pay two, three, and even five dollars a bottle? The following facts will show them the chance they have of drinking pure Wine. With a ticket a prize can be calculated on with more certainty than the purchaser of a bottle of the wine pure from the vintage, in this country.

There are 32,000,000 of bottles of false champagne every year sent to Russia, about as much more is sent to England, and fully equal to that quantity to the United States. There is a company in Paris who make natural Champagne Wine. They take poor chablis, for instance, sweeten it with candy, refine it, and then pass it through an apparatus which charges it with carbonic acid gass, and in fifteen minutes, it is ready for the market.

Immense quantities are also made from cider, by the employment of all sorts of drugs, and in England, a great deal is made from gooseberries and the stalks of rhubarb. It is not so good as the genuine, but nine out of ten of those who drink it, can't tell the difference, and it will make them just as drunk, and give them the same horrid head ache, and why then is it not just as valuable? True, some poisonous drugs are sometimes used in the fabrication, but none, perhaps, worse than alcohol.

The annual productive of France in this article of Champagne Wine, is 50,000,000 bottles. The annual consumption of the world in the same time, is 300,000,000, so that 25,000,000 of false Wine goes down somebody's throat is a clear case.

At Campania, in Italy, the vintagers, it is said, let themselves to pick the grapes from the trees over which the vines grow, on condition that if they fall and are killed, their employers pay the funeral expenses. If such an agreement was made by the drinker with the vender of Wine in the United States the trade would be anything but profitable.

A Hard Case. A poor but jolly weaver, in Boston, not many years ago, had a fortune left him by a distant and wealthy relative, who who went 'off the handle' in England, rather unexpectedly. When the news came to the poor fellow, as he sat clicket-te-clack at his loom, he stopped, stock still, and said—'Well I suppose I must spend the money straight.' The fortune, some twenty thousand dollars, was duly realized and duly spent. For two brief years did the poor weaver travel, make merry, and riot upon all the luxuries of the land! But two years did the job and he returned to his loom as poor as a church mouse, but merry as a cricket, and worked away again for his daily bread, perfectly satisfied with the 'good time' he had had, while his fortune lasted. His friends called him green, but he laughed at their gibes, and worked the harder. In a twelve month's time, off popped another rich relation, and the news, post haste, came to the jolly weaver, and he was again the possessor of a handsome fortune. Stopping his loom, and looking sorrowfully at the letter, he despondingly said—'Good heavens! is it possible that I must go through all that again?"

Advice to a Son. Do not begin to quarrel with the world to soon, for bad as it may be, it is the best we have to live in—here. If railing would have made it better, it would have been reformed long ago: but as this is not to be hoped for, at present, the best way to slide through it is as contentedly and innocently as we may. The worst fault it has, is want of charity, and calling knave or fool at every turn, will not cure this failing. Consider as a matter, of vanity, that if there were not so many knaves and fools as we find, the wise and honest would not be those rare and shining characters that they are allowed to be; and, (as a matter of philosophy) that if the world be really incorrigible in this respect, it is a reflection to make one sad and not angry. We may laugh or weep at the madness of mankind—we have no right to vilify them for our own sake or theirs. Misanthropy is not the disgust of the mind at human nature, but with itself; for it is laying its own exaggerated vices as foul blots at the door of others! Do not, however, mistake what I have here said. I would not have you when you grow up, adopt the low and sordid fashion of palliating existing abuses, of putting the best face upon the worst things. I only mean that indiscriminate, unqualified satire in the most revolting speculations of human nature, do not themselves always set the fairest examples, or strive to prevent its lower degradation.

Grafting Currants. The Gardener's Chronicle recommends, for the pretty appearance presented, as well as improved flavor, to graft currants of different colors, as the red, black, and white, variously intermixed, on stocks trimmed up to a single stem three or four feet high. The tops may be headed down to a dense compact head, or trained as espaliers in the horizontal or fan method, the two latter modes of training, by the free exposure to the sun and air, much improving the quality of the fruit. The importance of trimming the bushes up to a single stem to improve the fruit and facilitate clean culture, instead of suffering two hundred and fifty suckers to shoot up all around into a dense brush heap, is very obvious to those who have tried both.

Life Insurance. A week or two ago, an elderly man, dressed like a comfortable farmer, walked quietly into the office of the Ohio Life Insurance Company, his face bearing the smile of one who knows he has a good thing to tell; and after weatherly remarks such as old codgers are always apt to make, told 'Mr. President,' that his son Reuben had a month before, insured his life for $1500, 'and a stouter looking fellow you never seen; nor a bigger fool than he looked like, when we laughed at him after he came home and told us how he'd fooled away his money. But, by gracious! mister, he warn't so far out after all—for he died of a suddent only ten days ago. There's the docyments, and I'm come for the money. He was my son, sir, and ain't left no other heirs.'

Punctuality. It is said of Melancthon, that when he made an appointment, he expected not only the hour, but the minute to be fixed, that no time might be wasted in idleness or suspense; and of Washington, that when his secretary, being repeatedly late in his attendance, laid the blame on his watch, saying, 'You must get another watch or I another secretary.'

Striking Coincidences. The death of John Quincy Adams is in striking contrast with that of the great Earl of Chatham. Both held reliable situations in public life; both had been elevated to the highest offices, the one to the Presidency, the other to the Premiership; both were smitten with paralysis in the halls of legislation, and were carried out, only to die. Not only their lives, but their characters were similar. Both were ever found on the side of oppressed freedom and humanity; both were ever advocates of justice and religion; and both will be ever regarded as the greatest statesmen and the highest ornaments of their respective countries.

Letter from Mrs. Adams. The following letter was received and read in the United States House of Representatives on the 1st inst. The Speaker announced that it would be entered upon the Journal of proceedings.

To the Hon. Robert C. Winthrop, Speaker of of the House of Representatives of the United States:

Washington, Feb. 29, 1848.

Sir:—The resolutions in honor of my dear deceased husband, passed by the illustrious assembly over which you preside, and of which he, at the moment of his death, was a member, has been duly communicated to me.

Penetrated with grief at this distressing event of my life, mourning the loss of one who has been at once my example and my support through the trials of half a century, permit me, nevertheless, to express through you, my deepest gratitude for the signal manner in which the public regard has been voluntarily manifested by your honorable body, and the consolation derived to me and mine from the reflection that the increased efforts of an old public servant have not been in this world proved without their reward as the generous appreciation of them by his country.

With great respect, I remain,
Your obedient servant,
Louisa Catherine Adams.

For the Quincy Patriot.

RESPECT TO MR. ADAMS.

At the Town Meeting in Braintree, on Monday, 6th inst, the following resolutions, offered by N. L. White, Esq., were adopted by the town:—

Resolved, That the inhabitants of the town of Braintree have received with profound sorrow, the intelligence of the recent death of the Hon. John Quincy Adams, while in the discharge of his duties at Washington as a Representative in the Congress of the United States from this District.

Resolved, That while, in common with other citizens of this Commonwealth and country, we gratefully cherish the memory of the man who for the last fifty years has devoted his transcendant talent to the service of his country, who in his long and unequalled career as Foreign Minister to the highest Courts in Europe, so discharged his duties as to merit the high encomium of Washington that he was "the most valuable public character we had abroad, and the ablest of our diplomatic corps"—who, through various gradations of high civic honor at home, was at length placed at the head of the nation whose honor and interests he had so long and so ably upheld and illustrated abroad, we also feel an honest pride that this illustrious statesman and patriot was born upon the soil of the original town of Braintree, and that the scenes so familiar to our childhood, were also the scenes in which his infancy and boyhood were nurtured.

Resolved, That as members of this Congressional District we deeply lament the loss of a Representative on the floor of Congress, who, while he has for the last seventeen years faithfully watched over and protected our interests, has also brought to the use of his country and of the world that large and varied experience, that affluent learning, that matured and wonderful power of intellect, and above all, that enlarged christian philanthrophy which rendered him while standing as a relic of the generations past, a truthful expositor of the principles upon which our republican institutions are based, a champion of the universal rights of men, and a promulgator of those ideas of human freedom shadowed forth in the Declaration of Independance, and destined yet for a long time to agitate the world, till the rights of man, as man, are everywhere fully and practically acknowledged.

Resolved, That while we admire the lofty patriotism and the exalted talents and learning of John Quincy Adams, we consider the republican simplicity of his manners, his unassuming kindness and courtesy to all, the high religious principle which governed his conduct and the habitual meekness with which he prostrated his soul before the King of Kings as the crowning virtues and glory of his life.

Resolved, That as a mark of our affectionate veneration and respect for his memory, a Committee of fifty be chosen to attend his funeral ceremonies.

Resolved, That these resolves be entered upon the records of the town.

MEETING IN WALPOLE.

At a meeting of the citizens of Walpole, held on the 6th inst, for the expression of sympathy and adoption of measures which the decease of our venerable Representative in Congress, the Hon. John Quincy Adams, demands, Joshua Stetson, jr., was called to the chair and Edmund W. Clap was chosen Secretary.

Voted, That a Committee of three be chosen to draft and report to the meeting suitable resolves. Smith Gray, Ebenezer Stone, and Joshua Stetson, jr., were chosen to fill said Committee, and subsequently reported the following resolves, which were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That while, in common with our whole country, we mourn in the death of John Quincy Adams, the loss of a scholar of the rarest and ripest attainments, a statesman of unrivalled abilities, and a patriot of the purest disinterestedness,—as citizens of the Eighth Congressional District we mourn the loss of a Representative of untiring assiduity, of fearless intrepidity, and of uncompromising devotion to liberty and truth.

Resolved, That while we would cherish devout gratitude to a kind Providence, which for so many years has vouchsafed to us such a man to represent us in the Congress of the Nation, we would gather from the life of the departed patriot lessons for our guidance, and from his successful vindication of the rights of man, hope in confidence that those rights shall ultimately be sustained.

Resolved, That we deeply sympathise with the members of his afflicted family in the irreparable loss they have sustained.

Voted, That a delegation be chosen from the citizens of this town to attend his funeral.

Voted, That a Committee be chosen to invite the Rev. Mr. Merrick to deliver an eulogy upon the deceased at some early day, and also to request that the bells of the several churches in town, be tolled one hour on the day of his funeral.

Voted, That the proceedings of this meeting be signed by the Chairman and Secretary, and published in the newspapers of the District.

JOSHUA STETSON, Jr., Chairman.
Edmund W. Clap, Secretary.

TOWN OF WEYMOUTH.

At a meeting of the inhabitants of the town of Weymouth held March 13th, 1848, the following resolutions were unanimously passed:

Resolved, That as citizens of the town of Weymouth, the birth-place of the maternal ancestor of the late John Quincy Adams, and a part of the Congressional District so eminently represented by him in the Legislature of the Nation, we hereby register our deep sense of the loss which we and our common country have sustained in the death of that distinguished statesman, patriot, and friend of justice and humanity, and also the gratitude we owe to him as the only defender of the right of petition, in the day when in desperation, it was so boldly hurled to the ground by the foes of liberty; and for the energy with which he ever guarded the rights of man, of every complexion and clime, in whose cause he early consecrated a life which it pleased Providence greatly to prolong, and finally to terminate with a brilliant serenity, worthy the illustrious deeds with which it had been crowned.

Resolved, That the Town Clerk be directed to transmit a copy of the foregoing resolutions to the friends of the late distinguished John Quincy Adams; and also forward a copy to the Quincy Patriot for publication.

Attest: ORAN WHITE, Town Clerk.

THE FUNERAL CEREMONIES.

The remains of the Hon. John Quincy Adams arrived in Boston on Friday, the 10th inst., at two o'clock in the afternoon, where they were received and under a large military escort were conveyed to Fanuel Hall. The civic part of the procession owing to the inclemency of the weather was omitted. At Faneuil Hall, Mr. Buckingham, Chairman of the Legislative Committee, addressed the Mayor of the city—where the custody of the remains were delivered up to the city of Boston—to which Mr. Quincy replied. The addresses of both gentlemen were well received and highly appreciated.

Until eleven o'clock on Saturday, the body remained in the Hall, in the care of a guard of honor, when they were conveyed to the depot of the Old Colony Railroad, under escort of the Washington Light Guards, Capt. Kelsey. They were accompanied by the Brass Band. The Hearse was drawn by six black horses dressed in mourning, attended by six pall bearers. The Mayor and city authorities followed in carriages. At the Depot, the Norfolk Guards, Capt. Merriam, were on duty. When the body was about being placed in the car specially trimmed and arranged for its reception the Mayor, on behalf of the City of Boston, in a brief and highly appropriate address, delivered the remains to the Committee of Arrangements of this town, when the Rev. J. T. Burrill, in behalf of the Committee, replied to Mr. Quincy as follows:

SIR—The Committee appointed in behalf the citizens of Quincy to receive the remains of their distinguished fellow-townsmen, the Hon. John Quincy Adams, acknowledge with a deep sense of gratitude the honors which have been paid to his memory by the citizens of Boston, the metropolis of his native State; and by those of other places through which his remains have passed. They come to us attended by a nation's representatives, and followed by a nation's tears.

Often, during his long and eminently useful life, have the citizens of Quincy been permitted to welcome back the living Patriot to the familiar scenes of his childhood, to enjoy a short season of repose from his public labors. To-day, alas! the melancholy duty devolves on them, of receiving in sacred trust his honored remains, to consign them to their long and last repose. And like the children of one common household they will assemble around the bier of their Patriot Father, sorrowing that they shall see his venerable form no more, and feeling the full import of his dying words—"This is the last of earth."

In the bosom of their peaceful community he is henceforth to rest from all his labors. Sacred will be the spot where his ashes will lie. Often will his fellow townsmen resort in the still hour of eventide, to the tomb where he reposes, to recall the example of his public and private virtues, and teach their sons to grow good and great like him.

A few minutes before twelve the train started from Boston and arrived in Quincy at half past twelve, when a national salute of twenty nine guns was fired by the Roxbury Artillery, Capt. Chase. The body was then removed to the hearse and conveyed to the late residence of the deceased. On the arrival of the special train which brought the Congressional Committee, the Governor and suite, and the members of the Legislature, a procession was formed by J. L. Dimmock, Esq., Chief Marshal, in the order as published in our paper of last week, and moved under escort of the Washington Light Guards and Norfolk Guards to the Stone Temple. The hearse was drawn by two white horses clothed in mourning. The music was very beautiful and solemn, and the whole spectacle was sad and imposing. Minute guns were fired while the procession was in motion. The church was dressed in mourning within and the pillars without were arrayed in sable drapery, as also were the fronts of several stores in the village. In front of the pulpit were placed the last words of Mr. Adams, "This is the last of earth," and over the pulpit relieved by the black curtain was an accurate likeness of the honored dead. The gallery of the church was densely filled with ladies and the body of the church, pews and aisles were filled with sad spectators of the solemn scene.

The address of the Rev. William P. Lunt was appropriate, interesting and eloquent. His text was from the second chapter of Revelations, tenth verse—"Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life." It will be doubtless given to the public and therefore we abstain from giving any of its outlines. The anthem at the close was very beautiful, and exhibited not only the remarkable excellence of the organ, but also the finished skill of the gentleman (Mr. Hayter, of the Boston Handel and Haydn Society) at whose touch it poured out such rich and glorious melody.

The body of Mr. Adams was then removed from the church and borne to the graveyard where in his tomb dust was consigned to its native dust. The whole procession passed before the tomb to take a last look at the coffin that enclosed the remains. It was a still and solem scene, and when one from the far and sunny south who had been with him in the halls of legislation stooping down to look at the coffin within its narrow resting place said with a quivering lip and trembling voice, "Good bye, old man," every voice was hushed and in many a manly eye was seen the silent tear.

As soon as the procession had passed through the grave yard the cars started for the city, and in a brief time the thousands which had been gathered together from the surrounding villages had quietly returned to their homes.

The following gentlemen acted as Pall Bearers, viz:—Gov. Briggs, Lt. Gov. Reed, President Josiah Quincy, Hon. Thomas Greenleaf, Hon. Joseph Barrett, Hon. Wm. B. Calhoun, Rev. Dr. Pierce, Hon. Josiah Quincy, Jr.

The arrangements, so far as the Chief Marshal was concerned, as we predicted, were excellently managed, and great credit for the order and regularity observed is therefore due to John L. Dimmock, Esq.

A letter was received from Hon. Edward Everett regreting that the state of his health would render it impossible for him to be present. A letter from Governor Lincoln, who was also invited to be present, to be one of the pall holders, we are permitted to publish:—

WORCESTER, March 11, 1848.

Wm. S. Morton, Esq., Secretary of Committee, etc,

SIR—The invitation, on behalf of the citizens of Quincy, with which I was yesterday honored, through your kind communication, was put into my hands at the very moment when I was about to address the Congressional Committee, on their way through this town, and to accompany them to the city. The inclemency of the weather, and the state of my health, when the cars arrived at Framingham, admonished me to return, and this morning I am too unwell to leave home. An esteemed friend, who proposes to be at Quincy, has promised to offer you the apology for my absence; but fearing that the pressure of the occasion may prevent him the opportunity, I beg to express my great regret that I cannot be with you to participate in the solemn and impressive scenes in which you will be engaged, and to repeat my deepest personal sympathy in an event which has filled the hearts of a nation with affliction.

I am, Sir, with faithful respect, most truly,
the obliged servant of the Committee,
LEVI LINCOLN.

LIKENESS OF MR. ADAMS. A very neat likeness of Hon. John Quincy Adams, with a fac-simile signature, has been executed. It is printed on an enamelled card, surrounded by a gold lace-work border, with engraved corner pieces of the birth-place of John Adams, the Homestead, the birth-place of John Q. Adams, and the family tomb. It is for sale at the Quincy Bookstore.

THE WATERVILLE (ME.) MURDER. The trial of Dr. Valorus P. Coolidge, for the murder of Edward Matthews, at Waterville in September last, was commenced at Augusta, (Me.) on the 14th inst, and is still in progress, before Chief Justice Whitman and Associate Justices Ether Shepley and Samuel Wells. Hon. George Evans and Edward Noyes are attorneys for the prisoner.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE. On Friday night of last week a fire broke out in Messrs Damrell & Moore's Printing Establishment (formerly Dickinson's) on Washington street, Boston, and in a short time the whole establishment was in flames. Two elegant granite front blocks are in ruins, involving a loss of property probably equalling $300,000. Dickinson's Type Foundry, in the rear of the printing establishment, was saved. The insurance on the buildings destroyed and the property of the several occupants, was upwards of $120,000.

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION. The democrats of the several towns composing the Eighth Congressional District, have been notified to meet at the Phoenix House in Dedham, on Monday next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, for the purpose of nominating a candidate to be supported for Congress. Quincy is entitled to send five delegates, according to the notice.

TERRITORY. Should the Treaty which has just been ratified by our government be ratified also by the Mexican Government, it will give us an extent of new territory, larger than the whole of the old thirteen United States, more than ten times as large as all New England, and sufficiently extensive to make one hundred states, each larger than Massachusetts! By the Mexican laws, slavery should not exist in this territory, but no provision for its continued exclusion therefrom is contained in the treaty.

FROM CHINA. A recent arrival from Canton brings news of an alarming character which forebodes another war between England and China. Six Englishmen who had gone into the interior a short distance had been butchered by the natives. The authorities are disposed to punish these outrages, but it is almost impossible to do so on account of the banding together of the populace.

FIRE IN DORCHESTER. A large barn in Dorchester, situated in Mount Harrison, near Columbia street, was set on fire on Friday evening of last week and destroyed, together with a quantity of farming tools and a number of valuable fruit trees which had been deposited there. The building belonged to Messrs. W. & S. Phipps & Co.. of Boston.

ESCAPED. Four prisoners escaped from the State Prison at Charlestown, last week, by crawling through a wooden drain or canal, which leads from the interior of the prison to the water on the outside. The end of the canal was sawed off, probably by some accomplice on the outside. Two of them have been re-taken.

ROXBURY CHARTER ELECTION. The election for City Officers took place last Monday, and resulted in the choice of the present incumbent, Gen. H. A. S. Dearborn, as Mayor. Aldermen: Benjamin F. Campbell, Robert Gardner, Samuel P. Blake, Richard Ward, William B. Kingbury, Calvin Young, Francis C. Head, William Keith.

STONE QUARRIES. From two to three hundred men will be employed the coming season upon the ledges in Rockport, and twenty-five or thirty sloops will be required to transport the stone. Most of it is brought to Boston, and a large quantity of it is used in the construction of the water works.

"SCOTT'S WEEKLY PAPER." A large and handsome sheet published at Philadelphia for one dollar a year, and bearing the above title, has been received at this office. A club of eight persons will be supplied for six dollars. Cheap enough, certainly.

MONTHLY BROTHER JONATHAN. A specimen number of this cheapest of family newspapers in the United States has been received. It is issued on the 15th of each month, by Wilson & Co., New York, at twenty-five cents a year—four copies for one dollar—eight copies for two dollars, and thirteen copies for three dollars. If this is not cheap enough, we should like to know what is cheap.

The same firm are making preparations for the issue of a Great Pictorial Jubilee Brother Jonathan for next Fourth-of-July. This will be a stupendous pictorial sheet, and issued by the 10th of May. The price is 12 1-2 cents, or ten for one dollar.

"BOY'S AND GIRL'S MAGAZINE. The March number of this work has come to hand. "Mark Forrester," the editor, furnishes his young readers with a great amount of useful reading, in a pleasant style. Bradbury & Guild, publishers, 12 School street, Boston—terms one dollar a year.

LAW OF ATTACHMENT. A bill has passed to be engrossed in both branches of Congress, in relation to attachments, which does away the preference creditors living out of the State have, heretofore, enjoyed under our insolvent laws.

THE WEATHER IN NEW ORLEANS. The New Orleans papers state that the trees in that vicinity are in full foliage, and the blossoms of the fruit trees are filling the air with fragrance.

WATER CURE. A friend at Neponset Village writes:—"I wish, through you, to inform your readers of the good opportunity they may have to hear the celebrated Dr. Kittridge, of Lynn, lecture on the water cure, by coming down to Neponset next Thursday evening and taking the evening train home which will leave Neponset at nine o'clock and twenty minutes. The lecture to be in the beautiful hall just erected opposite the depot."

FROM MEXICO. A train which left Vera Cruz for Orizaba under command of Briscoe, was attacked by four hundred guerillas; Gen. Twiggs sent three companies of cavalry to his aid, and one account states that a desperate fight occurred between his forces and the guerillas, in which the latter were dispersed.

CONGRESS. The Treaty was ratified by the Senate on the night of the 10th inst, after an Executive Session of nine hours, by a vote of 38 to 15, three Senators being absent. Mr. Sevier of Arkansas, has been appointed Commissioner to carry the treaty to Mexico. There has been considerable of a "flare up" in the House between Mr. Haralsom of Georgia, and Mr. Jones of Tennessee, in which the parties used their fists with much effect. The matter was amicably settled after causing some confusion. In the Senate, the bill for the relief of the heirs of John Paul Jones passed with House amendments; it is now a law. We do not see much of further interest in the journal of proceedings.

LEGISLATURE. The license law bill has been recommitted. The thanks of the Legislature, by preamble and resolutions, have been presented to the Congressional Committee who attended the remains of Mr. Adams to their last resting place. A bill has been reported to increase the capital stock of the Dorchester and Milton Branch Railroad Company. The bill to authorize the Old Colony Railroad Corporation to widen their road between Boston and South Braintree, and to make branches in Quincy and Dorchester, has passed to be enacted, in the Senate.

WHIG NOMINATION. The Whig District Convention at Dedham on the 15th, nominated Hon. Horace Mann of Newton, as their candidate to fill the vacancy occasioned by the lamented death of Mr. Adams. They also chose Hon. Henry Wilson of Natick, as Delegate to the Whig National Convention.

ECLIPSE. There will be a total eclipse of the moon to-morrow afternoon; partially visible in New England, commencing at about six o'clock and lasting twenty minutes.

NEW HAMPSHIRE. The returns indicate that this State is strongly democratic.

The bark Frances Burr, from Palermo for Boston, with a cargo of fruit, went ashore on the 10th inst, on Marshfield beach, five and a half miles from Scituate Light. She is only partially insured—it is doubtful whether she will be got off.

A firemens riot occurred in Baltimore on the 12th inst. From one to two thousand men were engaged in the fight. Pistols were fired into the crowd, and stones, bricks, clubs, etc, were used with the greatest violence. A young man about eighteen years of age, was shot dead, and many others wounded.

There has been a hearing in the Hall of the House of Representatives, before a select Committee, upon the abolition of the death penalty in Massachusetts. The hearing occupied two afternoons, and the Committee was addressed, in support of the petitions, by Dr. Walter Channing, R. Rantoul, Jr., and others.

In Philadelphia, on the 24th of January last, Mr. James H. Brackett.

He has gone, but left behind him a delightful testimony, both in his life and death, of the power of Divine grace. His life was marked by a strict, close, conscientious adherence to the interests of a crucified Redeemer—no compromise with the powers of darkness—always bold in defence of his Master—he ever stood forth a champion of the truth. His death was the Christian's death. Commending his spirit to him who bought, washed and redeemed it, he sweetly fell asleep in the bright hope of a glorious resurrection.

These lines are penned to his memory by one who loved him as a christian, and admired him as a friend.

A warrior has fallen—his battles are o'er—
His war-song is hushed—it will cheer us no more.
His sword that was red with the blood of the slain;
Will ne'er be unsheathed in the conflict again.

Close, close by the cross did he nobly contend
For the faith of his Master he had vowed to defend.
Foes many and deadly were gathered around,
But the arms that he bore were invincible found.

The defence of the Cross was his pleasure and pride,
Its standard no foe ever snatched from his side—
Unfurled to the last, o'er his head did it wave,
And now it enwraps him, asleep in the grave.

Rest! rest for the hero! he needeth repose,
Undisturbed by sore conflicts, untroubled by foes;
Rejoice! he has found it—and free from the strife,
He is bathing his limbs in the "River of Life,"

Mourn not for the warrior, now gone to his rest,
Where sorrow will never his quiet molest.
He has fought the good fight, and his course he has run
His battle is over, the victory won.

Unloosed from the armor, his glad way he wings.
And the song of the victor, triumphantly sings—
Weapons forged for the conflict his hands no more wield,
The harp has supplanted the sword and the shield.

Christian warriors on the earth, who the battle maintain.
Yield not, though your pathway be strewn with the slain—
They who fall in the combat alone wear the crowd.
Then fight on, oh fight on, for eternal renown.

He bequeathed, by will, $300 to the American Tract Society, and $200 to the American Bible Society.

DIED.

In Stoughton, 2d ult, Betsey Williams, one of the Punkapog tribes of Indians, of pure blood, aged 100 years. Her sister, Mary Burr, still lives, being "the last of the Mohegans," of pure blood.

In Philadelphia, on the 24th of January last, Mr. James H. Brackett.

He has gone, but left behind him a delightful testimony, both in his life and death, of the power of Divine grace. His life was marked by a strict, close, conscientious adherence to the interests of a crucified Redeemer—no compromise with the powers of darkness—always bold in defence of his Master—he ever stood forth a champion of the truth. His death was the Christian's death Commending his spirit to him who bought, washed and redeemed it, he sweetly fell asleep in the bright hope of a glorious resurrection.

These lines are penned to his memory by one who loved him as a christian, and admired him as a friend.

A warrior has fallen—his battles are o'er—
His war-song is hushed—it will cheer us no more.
His sword that was red with the blood of the slain;
Will ne'er be unsheathed in the conflict again.

Close, close by the cross did he nobly contend
For the faith of his Master he had vowed to defend.
Foes many and deadly were gathered around,
But the arms that he bore were invincible found.

The defence of the Cross was his pleasure and pride,
Its standard no foe ever snatched from his side—
Unfurled to the last, o'er his head did it wave,
And now it enwraps him, asleep in the grave.

Rest! rest for the hero! he needeth repose,
Undisturbed by sore conflicts, untroubled by foes;
Rejoice! he has found it—and free from the strife,
He is bathing his limbs in the "River of Life,"

Mourn not for the warrior, now gone to his rest,
Where sorrow will never his quiet molest.
He has fought the good fight, and his course he has run
His battle is over, the victory won.

Unloosed from the armor, his glad way he wings.
And the song of the victor, triumphantly sings—
Weapons forged for the conflict his hands no more wield,
The harp has supplanted the sword and the shield.

Christian warriors on the earth, who the battle maintain.
Yield not, though your pathway be strewn with the slain—
They who fall in the combat alone wear the crown.
Then fight on, oh fight on, for eternal renown.

He bequeathed, by will, $300 to the American Tract Society, and $200 to the American Bible Society.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

TIP GUZZLEDOWN THE SWIG'RY TAPSTER.

Tip Guzzledown a swig'ry kept,
A money grub was he,
And there he ate, and drank, and slept,
And held his grand levee.
Full four and twenty customers
Attended every day;
Two dozen young and sprightly sirs,
Too good to cast away.
Fair young customers,
Spry young customers,
Bright eyed customers,
Attended Tip's levee.

A shilling each per day they spent,
And when a year had past,
Tho' Tip had made his cent per cent.,
His friends had spent their last.
Tip thought of something to be done
To make his gudgeons bite;
He judg'd their heads had heavy grown,
Perhaps their fingers light.
Blout faced customers,
Slow paced customers,
Blear eyed customers,
Attended Tip's levee.

A something stronger might prevail
To make the rhino come,
So to his cider, beer and ale,
Tip added gin and rum.
A grand effect he soon could spy,—
Some how the money came,—
While spirit flash'd from every eye,
His cronies all were game
Full grown customers,
Red nosed customers,
Glass eyed customers
Attended Tip's levee.

Another year has past and gone,
Where now are Tip's young slaves?
Some in a prison lie them down,
Some slumber in their graves.
And Tip, who took to drinking too,
In prison made his berth,
The remnant of his early crew
Are nuisances on earth.
Real old customers,
Rum soak'd customers,
Rheum eyed customers,
Prepar'd for death's levee.

F. M. Adlington, Weymouth.

A FRAGMENT.

Is there a man, at woman's very name,
Whose bosom does not glow with kindling flame?
Whoe'er thou art, whate'er thy state may be,
Still, gentle woman must be dear to thee.
Had she not nurs'd thy wants, and still'd thy fears,
What cold neglect had chill'd thy infant years!
How joyless and unblest thy youth would prove,
If unendeared by her devoted love!
What could the cheerless gloom of age beguile,
Unbrightened by the sunshine of her smile?
In grief where would thy drooping spirit rest,
If unsustained by woman's pitying breast?
How dear in every tie of social life,
As mother, daughter, sister, friend, or wife!
'Tis man she lives to bless, or dies to save,
His solace from the cradle to the grave.

* * * * * *

O thou! who giv'st our morn of life its charm,
Our youth its transport, and our age its balm;
Whose witching power the proudest can control,
Whose very glance speaks to the inmost soul,
Woman! on whom our hopes, our fates depend,
Our trust, our blessing, comforter and friend!
In sickness, or in sorrow's saddening hour,
The heart best feels thy soft controlling power:
In vain for power or wealth from thee we rove,
Earth has no gem so rich as woman's love.

A CHILD'S LAUGH.

I love it, I love it—the laugh of a child,
Now rippling and gentle, now merry and wild;
Ringing out on the air with its innocent gush,
Like the thrill of a bird at the soft twilight's hush;
Floating up on the breeze like the tones of a bell,
Or the music that swells in the heart of a shell—
Oh! the laugh of a child, so wild and so free,
Is the merriest song in the world for me.

ANECDOTES.

The minister of a small Scotch parish, who was by no means averse to the good things of the world, was catechising the juvenile portion of his flock, and on putting the usual question, "What is thy name?' to a strapping wench of thirteen, the daughter of the village Boniface, received no reply. He put the question again, more peremptorily, when the girl said—"Nin o'yer fun, parson—ye kna me neame verra weel. Duont ye say, when ye're at our house on a nest, "Bet, bring in another pint o' yell?" His reverence looked daggers.

The eccentric Dr. John Murray, the founder of Universalism, was on familiar terms with Dr. Baldwin, of the Baptist persuasion. On exchanging salutations one morning, Dr. Baldwin said, "by the way Dr. Murray, I think the strangest thing happened to me a few days since I ever knew. I met a person in the street who took me for you, yes! actually took me for you?" "Ah, did he?" returned Murray, "well I hope the devil will make the same mistake."

The widow of an eminent composer, in her obituary of her departed husband, used this language—'He has left this life and gone to the blessed place where only his harmony can be exceeded." The widow of a famous pyrotechnist, pleased with the idea, adopted it on a similar occasion, with a slight variation, and remarked of her lord that "He had gone that blessed place where only his fireworks could be exceeded."

An individual on board a steamboat conducted himself rather rudely in the presence of ladies. 'Pray, sir,' said a gentleman on board, 'of what State are you a native?' 'I'm from Ohio,' grunted the fellow. 'Ah! I have heard,' returned the other, 'that Ohio is famous for raising hogs.'

"Mrs. Marston, can you allow your Henrietta Georgianna to come and nurse Claudius Alfred, while our Louisa Ann goes to dancing school?"

THE veracious testimony attached to the Native Preparations of Capt. Brant's Indian Remedies is a sufficient attestation to their merits. The soothing influence of the PULMONARY BALSAM over the raging tortures of the CONSUMPTIVE COUGH, the cessation of their pains, the increased facility afforded to the EXPECTORATION, the absence of those debilitating Night-Sweats altogether produce the consciousness of relief and permanent cure in the patient's mind. Add to these the Distress of Thousands who yearly suffer and die with the horrid scourge of Scrofula, drying up their blood and searing their vitals, and observe the sudden relief afforded by Brant's Purifying Extract,
which in so many cases acts with a force and rapidity beyond even the SANGUINE EXPECTATION of the invalid.

Samaritan Balm,
For the cure of Coughs, Colds, and
Diseases of the Lungs!
ANOTHER evidence of the benefits derived from the use of this invaluable Medicine:
Boston, Nov. 1, 1847.
Messrs. Otis, Broaders & Co., Boston.
Gentlemen—Please send me by Expressx six dozen more of the "Samaritan Balm." Its virtues are fully established in our neighborhood, and I do not hesitate to say that the sale of it has been far greater than any new medicine I ever attempted to introduce. Of its benefits I can speak from actual experience, as being decidedly the best remedy for colds and diseases of the Lungs I ever tried. Last winter I was sorely afflicted with an attack of the "Bronchitis," when the good lady whose invention it is kindly prepared me a bottle which has completely cured me; and from the benefits I myself have personally derived from its use, I feel grateful that she has been prevailed upon to give so valuable a medicine to the world. Notwithstanding she has done it without any wish to profit by it in a pecuniary point of view, I hope and trust she will reap a rich reward for her goodness towards suffering humanity. Yours, truly, D. BUGBEE.
☞Price one dollar per bottle—six bottles for five dollars.
For sale by Mrs. E. HAYDEN, Quincy, and by Dealers in Medicine generally throughout the United States.

GRAEFENBERG COMPANY'S OFFICE,
50 Broadway, New York, September 24th, 1847.
The very great increase of the Graefenberg Company's business in New England, has rendered it necessary to re-organize the General Agency there. This is therefore to certify, that the New England Branch of the Graefenberg Company, is now established at No. 154 Washington street, Boston, and that Mr. Edwin C. Barnes is duly appointed Secretary of said Branch: and that he is authorized to establish Local Depots, and to grant rights to vend the company's Medicines. Every Agent must have a certificate with the seal of the Company thereunto, signed by its Secretary and countersigned by the aforesaid Branch Secretary. No one is authorized to sell the Company's Medicines without such certificate. EDWARD BARTON, Secretary.

GRAEFENBERG MEDICINES.
The undersigned is fully prepared to establish a Graefenberg Depot in all places of proper size in New England (except the State of Connecticut and that portion of Vermont west of the Green Mountains,) and also in the British Provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. Immediate application should be made either personally or by letter. As there will ordinarily be but one Depot in a town or village, the Agency will be very valuable.
The leading article to which public attention is invited is the GRAEFENBERG VEGETABLE PILLS, of which 30,000 boxes are sold each and every week. The following complaints yield with certainty to their power: Asthma, Bilious Complaints, Catarrh, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Erysipelas, Impeded Digestion, Fever, Nausea, Green Sickness, Heartburn, Headache, Jaundice, Liver Complaints, Rheumatism, and various diseases of the Stomach. In all Chronic complaints the most implicit reliance may be placed upon them. Price 25 cents a box.
The names of the other Medicines are as follows:
THE CHILDREN'S PANACEA.
For summer complaints, dysentery, and all other affections of the stomach and bowels, it is infallible. Price 50 cents a bottle.
THE GRAEFENBERG SARSAPARILLA COMPOUND.
Warranted to make two quarts superior to any in the world. Price one dollar a bottle.
THE GREEN MOUNTAIN VEGETABLE OINTMENT.
Wherever inflammation exists, this ointment is a positive and speedy cure. Price 25 and 50 cents a box.
THE GRAEFENBERG EYE LOTION.
For disorders of the Eyes this Lotion has no equal. For violent inflammation, weakness, or foreign substances in the eyes, it is an unfailing remedy. Price 25 cents per bottle, with full directions.
THE GRAEFENBERG HEALTH BITTERS.
Sovereign to build up the enervated system, to restore the appetite and clear the skin. Price 25 cents a package.
THE CONSUMPTIVE'S BALM.

MISCELLANY.

JEM DALLY.

Years ago, when Dock Square was what Dock Square is, the place for a New Yorker to rest his eyes, after traversing the uniform streets of Philadelphia, in the vain hope of encountering stumbling on an irregularity, by way of relief, a lad about ten years of age might be seen day after day, with a basket on his arm, pursuing his vocation, entering the various offices or accosting people as they hurried to and fro with his well worn salutation, 'Buy some matches?' followed by a 'thank you' whenever he was so fortunate as to secure a purchaser From so frequently meeting the poor boy on my way to and from my office, I learned to identify his pale face with his quiet business, and felt quite disposed to exclaim, 'Buy some matches,' whenever I chanced to see him. To me he became a sort of fixture, a thing to be looked for, and so far as mere thought or habit is concerned, a thing to be cared for. As for encouragement in his profession, my hands involuntarily searched my pockets for a penny or so, when we met—though I invariably forgot when I dropped it in his basket to take a paper in return.

One day as I was returning from dinner, in a thoughtful mood, (a good dinner makes a man thoughtful, sometimes,) leisurely pacing the Square, I observed two striplings of the genius aristocrat before me, enjoying their Havanas, occupying at the same time the outside as well as the inside of the walk in their motiveless, perambulation. My little friend, the match boy, presuming, from their occupation I conclude, that articles in his line might not come amiss, proffered his usual query, receiving in reply, a push that sent him, basket and all, into the gutter. The little fellow, indignant at the tough usage, seized a handful of mud, and with the unerring aim of a marksman, threw it full in the face of his assailant.

'Good enough for you, Clarence Beal,' said his companion. 'You had no business to treat the boy so!'

'Business or not, I'll teach him better manners,' said the enraged Clarence, and was about to administer his first lesson as I came up. My little favorite stood his ground manfully. His black eyes flashed with anger, and the red spot on his black cheek betokened a spirit within that but illy accorded with his general quiet demeanor.

How far matters might have been carried, I know not as, being a sort of justice of the peace, I felt bound to interfere. The aggressor passed on—vowing vengeance at his earliest opportunity—while the assailed gathered up his wet and scattered wares.

As he put them into his basket, I could see his lips work as though there were thoughts within, too powerful for retention, but unfit for utterrance. To test the spirit of the lad I asked him in a careless tone,

'What's that you are saying, my boy?'

To which he instantly responded,

'That fellow says he will have his revenge, and may be he will, but we'll see.'

There was a deep meaning in the tone of his voice, and a bright flash of the eye that betokened a spirit but little used to indignities, and a heart ready to repel insolence, be it proffered by whom it might.

With a short lecture on the folly of wrath, fashioned after the pithy discourses of Sterne, I passed on, leaving my hero, Jemmy Dally, to recover his temper and dry his matches at the same time. Jemmy kept down the street, and, as I remarked before, my steps were so leisurely taken that he not only overtook, but was far before me on his home bound way. Poor fellow! My thoughts followed the embryo man, and losing sight of him, I made him a man in a marvellous short space. Comparing

GRAEFENBERG COMPANY'S OFFICE,
80 Broadway, New York, September 24th, 1847.

The very great increase of the GRAEFENBERG COMPANY'S business in New England, has rendered it necessary to re-organize the General Agency there. This is therefore to certify, that the NEW ENGLAND BRANCH OF THE GRAEFENBERG COMPANY, is now established at No. 154 Washington street, Boston, and that Mr. Edwin C. Barnes is duly appointed Secretary of said Branch; and that he is authorized to establish Local Depots, and to grant rights to vend the company's Medicines. Every Agent must have a certificate with the seal of the Company thereunto, signed by its Secretary and countersigned by the aforesaid Branch Secretary. No one is authorized to sell the Company's Medicines without such certificate. EDWARD BARTON, Secretary.

JEM DALLY.

Years ago, when Dock Square was what Dock Square is, the place for a New Yorker to rest his eyes, after traversing the uniform streets of Philadelphia, in the vain hope of ere stumbling on an irregularity, by way of relief, a lad about ten years of age might be seen, day after day, with a basket on his arm, pursuing his vocation, entering the various offices or accosting people as they hurried to and fro, with his well worn salutation, 'Buy some matches?' followed by a 'thank you' whenever he was so fortunate as to secure a purchaser From so frequently meeting the poor boy on my way to and from my office, I learned to identify his pale face with his quiet business, and felt quite disposed to exclaim, 'Buy some matches,' whenever I chanced to see him. To me he became a sort of fixture, a thing to be looked for, and so far as mere tho't or habit is concerned, a thing to be cared for. As for encouragement in his profession, my hands involuntarily searched my pockets for a penny or so, when we met—though I invariably forgot when I dropped it in his basket to take a paper in return.

One day as I was returning from dinner, in a thoughtful mood, (a good dinner makes a man thoughtful, sometimes,) leisurely pacing the Square, I observed two striplings of the genius aristocrat before me, enjoying their Havanas, occupying at the same time the outside as well as the inside of the walk in their motiveless, perambulation. My little friend, the match boy, presuming, from their occupation I conclude, that articles in his line might not come amiss, proffered his usual query, receiving in reply, a push that sent him, basket and all, into the gutter. The little fellow, indignant at the tough usage, seized a handful of mud, and with the unerring aim of a marksman, threw it full in the face of his assailant.

'Good enough for you, Clarence Beal,' said his companion. 'You had no business to treat the boy so!'

'Business or not, I'll teach him better manners,' said the enraged Clarence, and was about to administer his first lesson as I came up. My little favorite stood his ground manfully. His black eyes flashed with auger, and the red spot on his black cheek betokened a spirit within that but illy accorded with his general quiet demeanor.

How far matters might have been carried, I know not as, being a sort of justice of the peace, I felt bound to interfere. The aggressor passed on—vowing vengeance at his earliest opportunity—while the assailed gathered up his wet and scattered wares.

As he put them into his basket, I could see his lips work as though there were thoughts within, too powerful for retention, but unfit for utterrance. To test the spirit of the lad I asked him in a careless tone,

'What's that you are saying, my boy?'

To which he instantly responded,

'That fellow says he will have his revenge, and may be he will, but we'll see.'

There was a deep meaning in the tone of his voice, and a bright flash of the eye that betokened a spirit but little used to indignities, and a heart ready to repel insolence, be it proffered by whom it might.

With a short lecture on the folly of wrath, fashioned after the pithy discourses of Sterne, I passed on, leaving my hero, Jemmy Dally, to recover his temper and dry his matches at the same time. Jemmy kept down the street, and, as I remarked before, my steps were so leisurely taken that he not only overtook, but was far before me on his home bound way. Poor fellow! My thoughts followed the embryo man, and losing sight of him, I made him a man in a marvellous short space. Comparing him with multitudes around me, I saw him in fancy as I saw others in reality every day. But my dreamings came to an end as I saw him enter a miserable looking hovel occupied by several families, herding together because necessity compels them, in a place scarce fit for the lowest animals. As he entered, he gave his basket a toss, scattering its contents all over the floor; and throwing himself on a low stool buried his face in his hands. A pale faced woman, whose thin form was wasted by want, as well as toil, occupied a chair near the window. Her back was toward the door when the boy entered, but his strange manner, so unusual to one so quiet in his habits, caused her to turn round, and looking at him sorrowfully for a moment, she asked what had happened.

For a few moments Jemmy was silent. His feelings were too deep for words, and he was too manly to weep. Struggling to keep down the emotions which ever and anon seemed ready to break forth, he related the incident we have described above.

'Never mind, Jem,' said the mother, for such she was, 'it is no fault of yours that your matches are spoiled. I only wish you had not thrown the mud.'

'Not thrown the mud, mother? If I had had the strength, I should have thrown the curb stone.'

'My son, such anger will never do. You must learn to bear evil rather than to return it.'

'But, mother, I could'nt help it. I thought of the shilling I had spent for them. It was all we had, and if I had sold them, we could have had a nice supper; now we must go without. But I would'nt mind for myself. You know Mr. Parker sometimes asks me to do chores, and when I go in the house the cook gives me something to eat; but nobody gives you any thing, and I thought if I made a shilling all my own, we would have something nice together.'

The sorrowful tone in which poor Jem uttered these words, so touched his mother's heart, that she could scarce command her voice as she continued her reproofs for his unbecoming violence. The effort ended in calling the noble boy to her and imprinting a mother's kiss on his flushed cheek, with the kindly charge to be careful and not do so again. Then pointing to the papers which had been scattered over the floor when Jem threw down his basket, she bid him gather them up, and place them so that they could dry.

'But, mother, they are good for nothing,' said Jem. 'Don't you see how wet they are?'

'Dry them, my son,' said the mother, 'and then we will examine them. If the wood is thoroughly dried, Mr. Brown will dip them again, and they will be as good as ever.'

A new light seemed to dawn on Jem. His misfortune was not so great, after all. His investment would not prove a total loss, and perhaps he could sell enough before dark to accomplish the purpose for which he had been laboring. Gathering them up as speedily as possible, he threw them into the basket again, and before his mother could ask where he was going, ran out of the house with the basket on his arm. Surprised at this sudden movement, she ran to the door, following him with her eyes till she saw him enter a bake shop near the alley below. Assured now that all was right and that Jem was acting as she recommended, Mrs. Dally resumed the sewing which Jem's abrupt entrance had interrupted.

She had scarce seated herself, ere her son came running in with a face full of gladness, and holding in his hand a shilling which he had fortunately found in the street.

Showing it to his mother, he exclaimed, 'now we can have a nice supper, after all. See,' he continued, 'just as I crossed the alley I saw this. so I didn't stop till my matches were dry, but after asking Mr. Brown if I might set them near the oven, I came back again to show you my good luck. Now, mother, you shall have a nice cup of tea, and I will get a warm roll, and won't we have a prime supper together?'

Poor fellow! Full of this joyful anticipation he went back to the baker's to attend to his matches and purchase his loaf.

He had scrcely reached Mr. Brown's door ere he spied a little girl looking very intently along the walk in search of something. She seemed so distressed that Jemmy's heart was touched, and going up to her he asked what was the matter.

The little girl told him she had been sent of an errand by her grandmother who was very ill. She had been to the apothecary's for medicine, but when she put her hand in her pocket for the money to pay for it, it was gone. Jem thought of the shilling he had found, and held it closer, lest he should be equally unfortunate, and joined the little girl in looking for the money.

'It must have been near this corner that I dropped it,' said the child, 'for I member I took out my handkerchief here and it was safe. I felt it in my pocket.'

'How much was it?' said Jem, hesitatingly.

'Only a shilling, but it was all grandma' had, so if I can't find it, she must go without the medicine,' and the thoughts of this made the tears fall still faster than before.

There was a struggle in Jem's heart for a moment. This new disappointment was worse than the first, but the girl's sorrow was too much for him—so holding out his hand, he said—

'Why if it is but a shilling, and you lost it near the corner, this must be the one; I found it a few minutes ago.'

Grasping the money, the girl exclaimed, 'why, this is the very one. See, there is a bit cut from one side. Thank you, thank you,' and in her eagerness to procure her medicine, she ran off as fast as possible.

Thoroughly discouraged at this second chill to his hopes, poor Jem sat down on the curb stone and cried bitterly.

He had done right. The self denial was as great as most of more mature years are ever called to exercise. He had returned what belonged to another, though at first he considered it honestly his own. The principle holds good in shillings as in dollars, and his one act of stern honesty, in obedience to his mother's early instructions, doubtless gave him more strength to resist future temptation, than any other incident in his whole life. Jem sat still on the curb stone when the little girl returned with the medicine her shilling so generously returned had procured. She stopped for a moment to thank him again for his kindness, when Jem sprang up, as if inspired by a sudden thought, and offered to go home with her.

As she lived down the alley but a few steps, they soon reached the door, which the little girl pushed open, asking Jem to come it. As he entered he saw an old lady sitting up in bed trying to sew, but she looked so old, so thin, and so sick, that it seemed almost impossible for her to maintain an upright position.

The old woman held out her hand for the vial, saying, 'Mary, did you get it?'

'Yes, grandma; but I shouldn't if it had not been for this boy.'

Then relating the loss of her shilling as above, together with its recovery, she pointed out Jem to her grandmother, who had not noticed him before.

The old lady thanked him for his honesty in tones so touching, that he was forced to turn his face away to hide the tears which were following each other so rapidly down his cheeks. As Jem was wiping his face, good old Dr. W ——, the dispensary physician, who chanced to be an acquaintance of Mrs. Grey's, the sick woman, came to inquire after her as he had accidently heard of her illness. To him she related the story her grandchild had just repeated, and he was so pleased with the recital, that he drew a quarter from his purse, remarking, as he gave it to Jem, that 'honesty deserved compound interest.' This climax to the already pent up but overburdened feelings of poor Jem was too great. He wept and sobbed so violently that the good doctor was distressed, and sought by all possible means to sooth him.

After calming him in a measure, he drew from him the history of his past life, also as much as he knew of his mother's. Then bidding him run and obtain the roll and the tea he had promised his mother, he assured him he would call in a few days at his mother's house.

With a delight perfectly unknown to those who have never known destitution, Jem hastened to procure the luxuries he had anticipated for his mother.

* * * * * *

According to his promise, Dr. W —— called on Mrs. Dally, a few days after, to inform her he had succeeded in procuring a place for her son with Mr. H ——, in Chesnut street. The fortunes of a boy so good as Jem proved himself to be, we need not follow. Step by step he ascended the ladder of wealth, and at a suitable time became a partner not only in an establishment in Front street, but in the fortunes and affections of that same Mary whose shilling he had so generously returned.

Seated in his office one cold day in winter, he heard a knock at the door, to which he responded with a good natured 'come in.' The door opened, and a little boy with a basket on his arm entered, saying, 'Please sir, do you wish to buy any matches?' In a moment his childhood was before him. The day when his little fortune was so suddenly swept away, but which, after all, was the means of his after good fortune.

Patting the little fellow on the head, Mr. (now no longer Jem) Dally said, 'what will you take for the lot, my boy?'

Surprised at such a question, the lad hesitated a moment, looking Mr. Dally full in the face as if to assure himself of his sincerity, ere he replied, 'One shilling, sir.'

'Then I'll take the lot, and here is a half dollar, you need not change it either, you may have it all.'

Surprised at his success the poor boy forgot his thanks, and every thing else, and stood looking first at the money and then at his benefactor.

'Well, my boy,' said Mr. Dally, 'what is your name?'

'Clarence Beal.'

Clarence Beal!' said Mr. D., surprised in turn. 'Well tables do turn strangely. You may come here again with your matches and I'll promise to buy them. But where is your father?'

'He is sick, and the doctor says he can't go out to work for a long time.'

'Well, Clarence, you may take this to him,' said Mr. D., giving him a bill; and as the boy closed the door, he added, 'and now I have my revenge.'

CUTS OR WOUNDS. Balm of Gilead buds, bottled in N. E. rum, make the best cure in the world for fresh cuts or wounds. Every family should have a bottle of it. The buds should be gathered in a particular state; just when they are well covered with gum. They last but two or three days in this state.

PROCLAMATION FOR FAST.

By and with the advice and consent of the Council, I appoint THURSDAY, the sixth day of April next, to be observed by the people of this Commonwealth as a day of Fasting, Humiliation and Prayer.

The observance of religious ceremonies, when not prompted by right motives, and not flowing from sincere hearts, is injurious to those who perform them, and offensive to the Deity.

I do, therefore, earnestly request the good people of Massachusetts, to keep this, their annual Fast, in an appropriate manner, and in the spirit in which it was instituted by their Puritan Fathers.

Reason and Revelation pronounce that all men are sinners, and that communities, as well as individuals, commit sins and do wrongs for which they ought to repent, and from which they ought to refrain.

Let us then, on that day, avoiding all labor and amusements inconsistent with its proper observance, assemble with our spiritual teachers in the usual places of public worship, present ourselves humbly before our Maker, and there, remembering with penitential sorrow, those numerous individual transgressions which render us so unworthy of His favors, and those public national sins which are calculated to provoke His anger, and to call down upon ourselves and upon our children His severe judgments, implore Him, in the name of His Son, our Saviour, to pardon those sins and transgressions, and avert those judgments.

Remembering with grateful hearts His past goodness, let us pray that His parental regard may be continued to us hereafter:

That He will bless us in the seasons of the year, so that in due time the husbandman may rejoice in a plenteous harvest:

That He will extend his care to those who go down to the sea in ships, and save them from the dangers of the deep:

That He will give health and contentment to those who earn their bread by the sweat of their brow, and cause them to receive a generous recompense for their labor;

That in His good Providence He will make eminently useful all our literary, scientific and benevolent institutions, and extend the benefits of education, and the blessings of competence, of plenty, and of pure religion, to all classes of people in our favored Commonwealth:

That in kindness He will remember the stranger, and visit in mercy the destitute, the widow, and the fatherless:

That He will not withhold from us those spiritual gifts, so necessary to elevate and improve our higher nature here, and so essential to secure our happiness hereafter:

That He will bestow upon our brethren in our sister States the blessings which we ask for ourselves, and extend the shield of His protection and the arm of His power over the government and the people of this great American Union:

That He will speedily restore peace between this and a sister Republic, and open the way for giving liberty to the millions of the human race now wearing the chain of slavery in our own land:

That He will endow the officers of the General Government with a spirit of wisdom, moderation, and justice, and inspire the people with a reverence of the constitution and laws of their country, a sacred regard to the rights of their fellow men, and teach both the Government and the people the great lessons, that nations, like individuals, to secure permanent prosperity and lasting renown, 'must be just, fearing.'

Finally, that He will cause 'the Sun of Righteousness to rise with healing in his wings,' and diffusing the light of Christianity over the face of the whole earth, brighten the hopes, and illuminate the path of every human being. GEORGE N. BRIGGS.

SQUARING THE CIRCLE. A great number of people do not know what the meaning of this term is, and have curious ideas regarding it. It is simply to find out the true circumference of the circle by the diameter. The determination of the ratio of the circumference to the diameter has exercised the ingenuity of mathematicians in all ages, and in all likelihood will do so in future ages. As 7 is to 22, the Archimedian rule, is near enough for all common purposes.

What is the circumference of a circle, the diameter of which is 14.

As 7 is to 22, so is 14 to the circumference
$-22\times14=308$
$\frac{308}{7}=44$ circumference.

VALUE OF SMALL THINGS. At the coal pits of England broad flat ropes are used to draw up the coals. These are called tows, and a new tow has to be added every few weeks to some of the large collieries. For many a year these old ropes were thrown aside and considered useless as they were black with grease, tar and coal dust. But lately ingenuity has converted that dirty substance into beautiful tissue paper, a ream of which weighs only two and a half pounds. It is used in the English potteries for transferring patterns to the earthenware and is found superior to any other substance ever known for that purpose, and it is so tenacious that a sheet of it twisted will support a weight of one hundred pounds.

A NOBLE SENTIMENT.

In Bible history, we find that the patriarchs, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and Moses, the lawgiver, were shepherds; David the mightiest sovereign of antiquity—one of the greatest conquerors the world ever saw, was a shepherd, and was called from his flocks to fill a throne. One or two of the prophets were herdsmen; some of the apostles were fishermen; Paul was a tent maker, and wrought at his trade. Christ himself, was the reputed son of a carpenter, if not of the same trade himself.

The Emperors of China, have, from time immemorial, annually practised agriculture.—Mahomet was in youth a travelling pedler. The celebrated Italian house named Sforza, which occupies such a prominent place in the history of Italy, during the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries—which gave six sovereigns to Milan—which formed alliances with most of the princely houses of Europe, was founded by a peasant, named Giacomo Attendolo. Luther was the son of a poor man. Most of Napoleon's marshals were of humble origin. Ney, the Duke of Elchingen, prince of Moscow, marshal and peer of France, grand cross of the legion of honor, besides being called 'the bravest of the brave,' was of humble origin, and at an early age entered the army and served as a private hussar. Soult, Duke of Dalmatia, marshal and peer of France, entered the army as a private soldier. Murat, brother-in-law to Napoleon and King of Naples, was the son of an inn-keeper. Lefitte, the celebrated banker of Paris, rose to wealth and honor by his own exertions. Oliver Cromwell, so celebrated in English history, was once a captain in the army. Lord Clive and Mr. Hastings, the conquerors of British India, were once penniless adventurers. Ben Johnson, the poet, was at first a bricklayer, and afterwards a private soldier. Jonathan Swift who carried one species of poetry, that of satirical humor, to a degree never before attained, was in early life a servant of Sir W. Temple. Dr. S. Johnson was the son of a petty bookseller. He received his early education at free schools, and afterwards entered Pembroke College, as a charity student.—Beattie, the poet, philosopher and moralist, was the son of an indigent farmer, and supported himself when young by teaching a country school. Falconer, the poet, and Cook, the navigator, were once common sailors. Burns was the son of a peasant and himself a farmer through life. Bloomfield was the son of a tailor and himself a shoemaker. He is said to have composed his well known 'Farmer's Boy' in a shop, surrounded by six or seven workmen. Fergurson, the widely known mathematical instrument inventor and astronomer, originated from the humblest walks of peasant life. He was so poor, that for some time, his food consisted of nothing but water gruel. And Herchel was once a fifer in the army.

In looking over the biographical annals of our own country, we find numberless similar instances. A few examples are contained in the following extract. 'In the armies of the revolution,' says Potter, 'I can call no name, Washington's only excepted, which occupies a prouder place in the memories and affections of a grateful people, than that of Nathaniel Green, the blacksmith. In the deliberations of Congress, and in the negotiations with foreign powers, I see no worthier representatives of the cool, sagacious, inflexible, upright, and far-reaching statesmen than Benjamin Franklin, the printer, and Roger Sherman, the shoemaker. I need not add the names of others, scarcely less honored. If we would know what mechanics were, at the era of the revolution; and what in point of influence they must ever be, in a country like ours, let this suffice; of the committee of five, appointed to draw up the Declaration of Independence, two were mechanics. Of the brave men who led our armies, he, whom Hamilton, while he honored Washington, as 'the first man of the country,' did not hesitate to style the first soldier of the revolution, was a mechanic. He who was the first choice of his country as her representative at imperial courts, and who was sent to baffle the arts of practised diplomatists, and did it triumphantly, was a mechanic. And finally, he who in Congress and conventions, by the mere force of intellect and knowledge, without any gifts of eloquence or external show, could still command the confidence and sway the opinions of the wisest; the man, who, to use the language of Jefferson, 'never said a foolish thing in his life;' and whom another colleague described as a 'slow-spoken and almost tongue tied man, but with a head as clear as light,' he also was a mechanic. In this extract Green, Franklin and Sherman are eulogised.

EXPERIMENT WITH A PLANT. Cut a small branch of oleander from a thrifty plant, place it in a vial partly filled with rain water, so that the lower end of the branch may be immersed about half an inch in the water. Place this in the sun in an open room, and in about fifteen or twenty minutes small roots will shoot from the end of the branch, presenting a beautiful appearance. After these roots have extended two or three inches, the branch may be set out in moist earth, and if frequently watered, it will grow rapidly and soon form a large thrifty stalk. Ladies who are fond of flowers may easily propagate oleanders in this manner, and in a few months multiply these beautiful plants to an indefinite extent.

No man is so poor but he can have a liberal spirit; and no man is rich but he can have a mean one.

LIBERTY. We like Burke's ideas of liberty. He says: "Men are qualified for civil liberty, in exact proportion to their disposition to put chains upon their own appetites; in proportion as their love of justice is above their rapacity; in proportion as their soundness and sobriety of understanding is above their vanity and presumption; in proportion as they are more disposed to listen to the counsels of the wise and good, in preference to the flattery of knaves.'

CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN GOV. BRIGGS AND MRS. ADAMS. The subjoined letter from Gov. Briggs to Mrs. Adams, enclosing the Resolves of the Legislature of Massachusetts, and the reply of the lady, will be read with deep emotion:—

COUNCIL CHAMBER, BOSTON, 3d March, 1848.

Respected and Dear Madam:—

In compliance with the request of the Legislature of Massachusetts, I forward to you the enclosed Resolves, passed by them, expressive of their great respect for the private and public character of your illustrious husband, and of their profound grief at his death.

I trust I may be allowed, whilst performing this official duty, to express my sincere concurrence in the sentiments of these resolves, and to say that it is not in the power of words to express the mingled feelings of sadness, veneration and love which at this moment pervade the hearts of the people of this Commonwealth.

May your stricken and bereaved heart derive full consolation and support in this hour of bereavement from that Religion which made your companion "composed" in the last scene of earth, and which I devoutly hope will crown both you and him with "an eternal weight of glory" in Heaven.

With great respect and esteem,
I remain, and am truly yours,
GEORGE N. BRIGGS.

MRS. J. Q. ADAMS.

WASHINGTON, 11th March, 1848.

DEAR SIR—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of Resolutions of the Legislature of Massachusetts, forwarded to me by your Excellency.

Accept the very grateful thanks of the distressed Widow of the illustrious Representative of your State, for all the honors so cordially manifested to the memory of a Patriot, whose existence seemed to hang upon the prosperity of his native State; and the honor of the Nation which he so nobly and faithfully served.

My heart overflows with unspeakable gratitude; and I can only entreat your Excellency to believe that until I see "the last of earth," the impression of this universal goodness in the just appreciation of the character and merits of my departed husband, can never be effaced.

With the highest sentiment of regard and consideration, I must ever remain,

Dear Sir, Your obedient servant,
LOUISA CATHERINE ADAMS.

CHEAP POSTAGE. The citizens of Boston are about forwarding to Washington their first petition in favor of two cent postage. This will be followed by other petitions, as soon as prepared for that purpose. The following is the form of petition—"The undersigned, citizens of Massachusetts, respectfully petition Congress to establish a uniform rate of Postage, not to exceed one cent on Newspapers, and two cents on each pre-paid Letter of half an ounce, for all distances, and as in duty bound will ever pray." From a cursory glance at the arguments offered by the friends of the movement, we should judge that a strong case is made out in favor of cheap and uniform rates of postage. The average rate of postage, at present, on all letters, amounts to six and a quarter cents. Those paying this tax would save two thirds by cheap postage, and could enjoy three times as much correspondence for the same money. Those who feel interested should be moving in the matter.

ORDINATION. Mr. Frederick A. Reed was ordained over the Second Congregational Church and Society in Cohasset, on the 9th inst. The exercises were—reading of the Scriptures and Prayer by Rev. Mr. Emery of North Weymouth; Sermon by Rev. Mr. Emery of Taunton; Ordaining Prayer by Rev. Mr. Harding of South Weymouth; Charge by Rev. Mr. Perkins of Weymouth Landing; Right Hand of Fellowship by Rev. Mr. Wight of Scituate; Address to the People by Rev. Mr. Tappan of North Marshfield; Concluding Prayer by Rev. Mr. Dyer of Hingham.

"THE GRAPE SHOT." It will be seen by an advertisement in our paper this week, that Silas W. Wilder, Esq., who is somewhat known in this County, having formerly edited the Norfolk Democrat, proposed to publish a paper in Boston to advocate the election of Gen. Taylor to the Presidency. Friend Wilder has had considerable experience in every department of a newspaper establishment, and will doubtless draw all the admirers of the gallant hero of Buena Vista to his support.

"THE INDUSTRIAL AGENT." This is the title of a large and handsome sheet which has recently been commenced in New York by William Newell & Co., 135 Nassau Street. Its object is to do good by collecting from every quarter valuable and practical information on all subjects connected with industrial avocations. The motto is, "the apprentice, the journeyman, the employer," and they intend to furnish a general price current of labor, as paid in all the principal places in the United States, in all mechanical branches, together with the condition of trades, etc. Published weekly at two dollars a year.

WRITING. Mr. S. Lee Lyman, well known in this vicinity as a successful teacher of Penmanship, is now in Braintree and intends soon to open a school in this town.

FROM EUROPE. The Cambria arrived at New York on Saturday morning, having left Liverpool February 27. Her most important news is concerning the Revolution in France, and the abdication and flight of Louis Philippe and the Royal Family.

Confidence was returning in England, and money was more abundant. No more failures of importance were anticipated. There was considerable more activity in the manufacturing districts. Willmer's Times says, the English Ministry is doomed, having been defeated in several measures.

The "three days" of 1830 have been repeated in Paris—the Monarchy is renounced, and a Republic is proclaimed. The latest dates leave matters still unsettled, and the next steamer will be awaited with anxiety; but the confused accounts received establish these facts—that there has been an outbreak among the people—that the Guizot Ministry is dissolved—that Louis Philippe abdicated the throne in favor of the Count de Paris, under the Regency of his mother, the Duchess of Orleans—that the Royal Family have been compelled to flee—that the populace have taken matters into their own hands, have organized a Provisional Government "in the name of the Sovereign people," and call loudly for a Republic. The emeute commenced on Thursday, the 22d Feb., was at its height on Thursday, the 24th, and still in progress on Friday, the 25th—the latest date from Paris. The loss of life is said to have been frightful.

The immediate occasion of the Revolution was the attempted suppression, by the Government, of the Reform Banquet, which the liberal Deputies and their friends had appointed for the 22d, as a political demonstration in aid of their cherished measures of Parliamentary reform. All the arrangements had been made, for the procession, dinner, &c., when at the latest moment, the meeting was forbidden, and it was ascertained that troops had been posted at every station, where they were thought necessary for the support of the Government.

Prince Louis Napoleon Bonaparte set out for Paris, from London.

Affairs at Rome are represented to be in a feverish and unsettled state. Rumors are prevalent that the Pope was disposed to hold back in respect to reformatory measures, and that he had been deposed.

LEGISLATURE. Leave to withdraw has been reported on the petition of Isaac G. Blanchard to be set off from Randolph to Stoughton; also, on the petition of Bradford L. Wales and others for a Railroad from Boston to East Stoughton. A petition was presented of Wm. H. Dunbar and others, for incorporation of Abington Mechanics' Institute.

MEXICO. Gen. Scott gave up the command to Gen. Butler on the 16th ult, and an armastice for two months was agreed to by Gen. B. A later account states that a reconnoitering party of Mexicans had been attacked and dispersed. Another party at Seacualdican were surprised by the Americans and several lives lost on both sides in the attack.

CAPITAL TRIAL. The evidence on both sides in the case of Dr. V. P. Coolidge under trial for the murder of E. Matthews, at Augusta (Me.) was closed on the 20th. The next day was occupied in hearing the arguments of council, and after the charge by Judge Whitman on the 22d, the Jury retired. They returned a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree, it was reported last night.

CONGRESS. In the Senate, on the 18th, the Ten Regiment Bill passed by a vote of 29 to 19. The death of Mr. J. M. Holley, Member of Congress from New York, was announced in both branches. The Senate has had the Loan Bill under consideration. Mr. Webster made a speech on the subject. The business in Congress the past week has not been of much interest.

NEW HAMPSHIRE. The Democratic candidate for Governor is re-elected by an increased majority. Both branches of the Legislature are also strongly democratic.

THE PLAYMATE. The seventh number of this admirable little "companion" for children has been received. C. Gill & Co. at the Quincy Bookstore are agents for the work in this vicinity.

ODD FELLOWS. There are in the United States more than one thousand Lodges, with one hundred thousand members, who pay for the relief of destitute families and sick brothers two hundred thousand dollars a year. Christian, Turk and Jew may enter, but those who declare their disbelief in a Supreme Being are inadmissible.

MISSION TO MEXICO. Hon. Nathan Clifford, the Attorney General of the United States, has been appointed by the President, and confirmed by the Senate, to accompany Mr. Sevier—with equal powers—on his mission to Mexico.

WRITINGS OF MR. ADAMS. The works of John Quincy Adams, which will make some fifteen or twenty lage octavo volumes, we learn from the papers, will be soon given to the press by Mr. Charles Francis Adams, the son and executor of the deceased Statesman, who had carefully revised them for publication, and has by his will appropriated a sum of money to defray the expense of printing, etc. Among the unpublished writings of Mr. Adams is a new version of The Psalms in Metre, a translation of Wieland's Oberon, and several minor poems; but the chief portion of his MSS. consists of historical, biographical and poetical works, relating to the last half century.

ETHER AND CHLOROFORM. Professor Brande of London in a recent lecture, after describing and illustrating by experiment the chemical properties of both ether and chloroform, said that in regard to the relative advantages of the two agents, his own opinion was, that chloroform was perhaps the more dangerous, but at the same time the more manageable; his meaning was, that an over-dose of chloroform may produce effects which would not result from an over-dose of ether. In all other respects, chloroform was to be preferred, because more effectual, more rapid, and certain.

MORMANISM. Brigham Young, the Morman President, has issued a circular calling upon the faithful to repair to the valley of the great Salt Lake, between the Pacific and the Mississippi. A city has been laid off at this point, and a temple is to be built to exceed in "glory" the former. Their present site is in the midst of mountains, on the margin of the Salt Lake, and separated from other settlements by a belt of sterile land five hundred miles in breadth. They anticipate vast accessions this year to their present numbers by proselyting, and in time, of becoming a large and powerful settlement.

DEMOCRATIC NOMINATION. The Democrats of this District have nominated Edgar K. Whittaker of Needham, as their candidate for Congress, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Mr. Adams.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION. By the act of Congress, January, 1845, the next Presidential election will be held in every State on the same day. This year the appointed day is Tuesday, November 7th.

LADIES' EXCHANGE. Ladies should read the advertisement of George W. Warren & Co.

It is rumored that the Hon. Robert Rantoul, Jr., will be called to a seat in the Cabinet in the place of Nathan Clifford, the United States Attorney General, who has been appointed a Commissioner to Mexico.

The Grand Jury of New York have indicted six Model Artist establishments.

It is said that Gen. Caleb Cushing is soon to be appointed Governer of the City of Mexico.

The amount of specie in all the banks in the United States, by the last returns, may be stated at about forty millions of dollars, or less than two thirds of the amount in the Bank of England.

Gen. Appleton Howe is the Abolition candidate for Congress in the Eighth District.

Francis Braconier, who lately escaped from the Charlestown State Prison, has been arrested in New York.

The splendid new steamer "Empire," for the Fall River route was safely launched at New York last Saturday morning.

The Governor of Connecticut has appointed the 21st of April, and the Governer of Maine the 13th of the same month, to be observed throughout those States as a day of public fasting, humiliation and prayer.

From a list kept at the Lunatic Asylum at Utica, of the number of suicides in New York State, they appear yearly to be on the increase. In 1845, there were 45; in 1846, 64 and in 1847, 106.

The charter of a city government recently granted by Legislature was accepted by the people of Worcester on Saturday, by a majority of 539.

Harvard College has adopted appropriate resolutions in honor of J. Q. Adams.

The territory acquired by the treaty contains an area of 515,000 square miles. Assuming the cost of the war and the purchase money to be, in round numbers, $100,000,000, the acquired territory would cost less than thirty cents an acre.

Mrs. Adams has addressed a letter to the Select and Common Councils of Philadelphia, thanking them for the respect they have shown to the memory of her husband.

The number of desertions of seamen at the Port of Quebec, in the year 1847, amounted to 3,549!

Permission has been given for the shipment of arms and ammunition, from the ports of the United States for the protection of the white inhabitants of Yucatan against the exterminating designs of the Indians.

A bill for the relief of Capt. Cassius M. Clay, has been reported in Congress. It provides for remuneration for his losses on account of being taken prisoner by the Mexicans, and retained in captivity for some months.

The Swedish fleet consists of two hundred and seventy-two vessels of War, of which thirty-two are steamers.

The North has one electorial vote for every 52,576 free men, and the South one for every 41,436 free men. Their slaves give them an advantage of 11,000 in every district! It is not strange that men who covert political power, should struggle to retain this advantage.

A new street cleaning machine has been invented in Baltimore, (Md.) It operates by flexible scrapers.

A citizen of Fitchburg, (Mass.) was arrested recently for murdering his wife fourteen years ago. Her stomach being analysed showed traces of arsenic.

The receipts of the American Colonization Society last month, amounted to $4,469.

A very large estate in the city of Boston has fallen to the heirs of Mrs. Mary Morton, who, in 1656, married the Rev. John Morton, if such heirs can be found.

A good book and a good woman are excellent things for those who know how justly to appreciate their value. There are men, however, who judge of both from the covering.

It is said to be utterly untrue, that the Hartford and New Haven Railroad Company charged freight for the transportation of the body of Mr. Adams.

Enoch E. Chase of Yarmouth, says in a card, "The only man that ever injured me is the only man that ever kissed me." The girls would like to know who kissed Enock E. Chase.

Hon. John M. Holley, a Representative in Congress of the Wayne and Lenaca district of New York, died in Jacksonville, (Fla.) on the evening of the 9th inst.

A Temperance Society has been formed in Portland, under the name of the "Telegraphic Spike Society." It was formed by individuals, who, believing they had been in the habit of spending too much of their hard earnings for liquor, drove a spike into a post, and under a ten dollar obligation, agreed that the first one who should drink, must draw out the spike with his teeth, or forfeit the above sum.

Two of the more advanced of the Viennoise Sylphides have chosen new protectors, in the persons of two nice young gentlemen, with whom they eloped from Madame Weiss, then at New Orleans, and went to Mobile.

The venerable Ambrose Spencer died at Lyons, New York. He was the father of the Secretary of the Navy under Mr. Tyler.

Joseph Shinn, of Goshen, was fined five dollars and costs, at Salem, Ohio, for appearing in meeting with his hat on.

The Anti-Sabbath people commenced their Convention in Boston on Thursday. About two hundred were present.

A Campaign Paper.

THE undersigned proposes to publish a semi-weekly paper, about the size of the Boston Path-Finder, to advocate the election of Gen. Taylor to the Presidency. It will be called
"THE GRAPE-SHOT,"
and will be commenced on the first of June, and continued until the election in November, making 45 numbers. Able writers and correspondents have been engaged to assist in the editorial department. The Grape-Shot will be printed on good type and fine paper, and will be entirely devoted to the work of elevating that noble chieftain, Gen. Taylor, to the Presidency. It is, in short, intended as a spirited campaign paper, for the New England States.
TERMS—To single subscribers, one dollar.
Ten copies to one address, eight dollars
Twenty do do do fifteen "
Fifty do do do thirty "
A handsome discount, it will be perceived, is to be made to those who take a large number of copies. This is done in order to give the paper an extensive circulation, and render it an efficient and influential instrument in promoting the good cause which it will advocate. The payments, in all cases, are to be made in advance; otherwise no attention will be paid to orders.
The undersigned can be consulted by those who feel interested in this movement, at No. 5, Washington street, Boston.

Boston, March 25. 3w

To the Honorable Judge of the Court of Probate for the County of Norfolk.

THE petition of ELIJAH BAXTER, Guardian to SARAH NEWCOMB, of Quincy, in said County, an insane person, respectfully represents, that said Ward is seized of real estate consisting of an undivided part of about four acres of land, situated in said Quincy, being equal to about one acre and five eighths thereof; also one undivided part of another parcel of land containing about two and a half acres, situated in said Quincy, being equal to about three-eighths of an acre thereof, as tenant in common with Charles Newcomb, of Boston, of the value of $250,00; and that she has no personal estate which can be applied to her support, and that the income of said real estate is insufficient for her maintenance, and that the sum of $500 is now necessary for that purpose—and that the persons interested in the estate of said ward, as next of kin, presumptive heirs, or otherwise, are Rebecca Chandler, widow, Eleaner Clapp, widow, of said Quincy; Charles Newcomb, of Boston, and John Newcomb, Thomas P. Newcomb, Richard Newcomb, Rachel Brown, wife of Joseph Brown, of said Quincy; Rachel Newcomb, of Boston, James Newcomb, and Mary Ward, wife of John Ward, whose places of residence are unknown to your petitioner. The said Guardian therefore prays that he may be licensed and empowered to sell and convey so much of the real estate of said Ward as will produce the sum of $500.

DRY GOODS CHEAP
AT THE LADIES' EXCHANGE,
192 Washington Street, Boston.

GEO. W. WARREN & CO.

CALL the attention of purchasers of Dry Goods, either at wholesale or retail, to their New Stock of Spring Goods.

[At this Establishment purchasers can find every kind and quality of Goods, from a common unbleached Cotton or sixpenny Print, to the finest and most costly fabrics imported, and always at Extraordinary Low Prices, and only one price named.]

We are now opening a large and Splendid Stock of Shawls, Silk Goods, Dress Goods, Fancy Goods, Linen, Woolens, Cottons,
In fact everything in our line, for either
Men's, Women's or Children's Wear,
OR FOR HOUSEKEEPING PURPOSES.

WE ARE NOW PREPARED TO SHOW THE LARGEST ASSORTMENT OF GOODS, AND AT THE LOWEST PRICES, EVER KNOWN IN OUR EXPERIENCE.

Grateful for the liberal patronage bestowed upon us, we shall use our best means to continue the increase of business that has yearly attended us; our sales having reached a very large amount, make out per cent. expenses so low that we can afford to sell at unusually small profits, and we find it our interest to do so—the interest of the buyer and seller is one, in the long run.

There is an impression with some that large stores are more expensive than small—whereas our per cent. expenses are less than one half what they were in our smaller store. We have increased our sales so much more in proportion than we have our expenses.

A Campaign Paper.

THE undersigned proposes to publish a semi-weekly paper, about the size of the Boston Path-Finder, to advocate the election of Gen. Taylor to the Presidency. It will be called and will be commenced on the first of June, and continued until the election in November, making 45 numbers. Able writers and correspondents have been engaged to assist in the editorial department. The Grape-Shot will be printed on good type and fine paper, and will be entirely devoted to the work of elevating that noble chieftain, Gen. Taylor, to the Presidency. It is, in short, intended as a spirited campaign paper, for the New England States.

"THE GRAPE-SHOT,"

TERMS—To single subscribers, one dollar.

Ten copies to one address, eight dollars

Twenty do do fifteen "

Fifty do do thirty "

A handsome discount, it will be perceived, is to be made to those who take a large number of copies. This is done in order to give the paper an extensive circulation, and render it an efficient and influential instrument in promoting the good cause which it will advocate. The payments, in all cases, are to be made in advance; otherwise no attention will be paid to orders.

The undersigned can be consulted by those who feel interested in this movement, at No. 5, Washington street, Boston. SILAS W. WILDER.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

JACK'S HARD PARTING.

The peeping moon, the tell-tale moon,
Is waning in the sky,
And must I leave you, love, so soon!
My Nancy, dear, good bye!

My ship-mates all on board have gone,
Yet still I linger here;
And must I leave you, worshipped one!
Good bye! my Nancy, dear.

Yet let me fold you to my heart,
One kiss and then away;
'Tis hard indeed from you to part—
Adieu! 'tis almost day.

Yet one kiss more before I go,
Then must I leave you here;
You have my heart, you have my vow,
Adieu! my Nancy, dear.

The clouds reflect the rising sun,
I must no longer dwell;
Good bye! my love, my cherished one,
My Nancy, dear, farewell!

F. M. Adlington, Weymouth.

A FAITHFUL FRIEND.

Where shall a faithful friend be found,
Free from treacherous words of guile;
With whom no venomed wiles abound,
To hide a sting beneath a smile.

Who ne'er with flattery's voice extols,
And pours its honied words on me;
Nor a rancorous tongue unfurls
Behind my back, my faults to see.

To magnefy and spread them forth,
Before the gaze of public eye,
The outpourings of malignant froth,
From heart depraved by treachery.

Whose noble heart can never bend
To wound me while my back is turned;
Ignobly thus a shaft to send,
Envenomed from a little mind.

Save me from such a coward foe,
Who beneath a treacherous smile,
Hides its venomed fangs below,
The unconscious victim to beguile.

Show me a friend whose generous soul
Would spurn a thrust thus made behind;
Who scorns to see a name thus stole,
And I will show a faithful friend.

TO THE MUSE OF HISTORY.

Perched on her rock-wheeled and winged car over the front door of the Hall of the House of Representatives of the United States.

Muse! quit thy car! come down upon the floor,
And with thee bring that volume in thy hand;
Rap with thy marble knuckles at the door,
And take at a reporter's desk thy stand.

Send round thy album, and collect a store
Of autographs from rulers of the land;
Invite each Solon to inscribe his name,
A self-recorded candidate for fame.

John Quincy Adams.

These lines were found in Mr. Adams's desk, in his own handwriting, penned by him just before his death. He signed his name after the House had been some time in session on the day on which he fell, and is probably the very last he ever wrote.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.

Staunch at thy post, to meet life's common doom,
It scarce seems death to die as thou hast died;
Thy duty done, thy truth, strength, courage, tried,
And all things ripe for the fulfilling tomb!
A crown would mock thy hearse's sable gloom,
Whose virtues raised thee higher than a throne;
Whose faults were erring Nature's, not thy own.
Such be thy sentence, writ with Fame's bright plume,
Amongst the good and great; for thou wast great,
In thought, word, deed—like mightiest ones of old—
Full of the honest truth which makes men bold,
Wise, pure, firm, just; the noblest Roman's state
Became not more a Ruler of the Free,
Than thy plain life, high thoughts, and matchless constancy.

ANECDOTES.

Two Irish friends had, from frequent practice, arrived at a high point of stealing. One having appropriated a goose, was on the point of being condemned by a jury for theft, when the friend appeared and swore that the bird was his, and had been ever since it was a gosling, and the prisoner on this was acquitted. Afterwards in the course of his calling, the ingenious witness was himself arraigned for stealing a gun. 'Don't be uneasy,' whispered the former culprit, 'I'll release ye.' Thereupon he stepped into the witness box, and boldly affirmed that the gun was his, 'and had been ever since it was a pistol.'

'John,' said his master to him one day, 'they really say that your wife beats you. Is it true?'

'Yoy,' drawled John, with provoking coolness

'Yoy,' responded the master with indignation, 'what do you mean, you lout? A great thumping fellow like you, as strong as a steam engine or an elephant, to let a little woman like your wife thrash you! What a blockhead you must be!'

'Whoy, whoy,' was the patient answer, 'it ple-ases her, an' it does me no hort!'

'Why are there so many widows in ——— town?' asked some one of Aunt Betsey, who once lived there.

'Because,' said she, 'the men drink like violence, die off like raving distraction, and leave the poor women in screaming distress.'

The following beautifvl sentiment was drunk at a private fete among de first circle of colored elite of New York:—"Here's to de darkey far see; dar face needs no paint, dar head no fumery."

The celebrated Ezra Doolittle, Esq, says that a pretty gal is enough to make a feller forsake father and mother, twist himself right up into a double breasted molasses dough-nut, and have warts on his disposition as big as pertater balls.

THE veracious testimony attached to the Native Preparations of Capt. Brant's Indian Remedies is a sufficient attestation to their merits. The soothing influence of the PULMONARY BALSAM over the raging tortures of the CONSUMPTIVE COUGH, the cessation of their pains, the increased facility afforded to the EXPECTORATION, the absence of those debilitating Night-Sweats altogether produce the consciousness of relief and permanent cure in the patient's mind. Add to these the

Distress of Thousands

Samaritan Balm,

For the cure of Coughs, Colds, and Diseases of the Lungs!

ANOTHER evidence of the benefits derived from the use of this invaluable Medicine:

Boston, Nov. 1, 1847.

Messrs. Otis, Broaders & Co., Boston.

Gentlemen—Please send me by Express six dozen more of the "Samaritan Balm." Its virtues are fully established in our neighborhood, and I do not hesitate to say that the sale of it has been far greater than any new medicine I ever attempted to introduce. Of its benefits I can speak from actual experience, as being decidedly the best remedy for colds and diseases of the Lungs I ever tried. Last winter I was sorely afflicted with an attack of the "Bronchitis," when the good lady whose invention it is kindly prepared me a bottle which has completely cured me; and from the benefits I myself have personally derived from its use, I feel grateful that she has been prevailed upon to give so valuable a medicine to the world. Notwithstanding she has done it without any wish to profit by it in a pecuniary point of view, I hope and trust she will reap a rich reward for her goodness towards suffering humanity. Yours, truly, D. BUGBEE.

☞Price one dollar per bottle—six bottles for five dollars.

GRAEFENBERG COMPANY'S OFFICE,

50 Broadway, New York, September 24th, 1847.

The very great increase of the Graefenberg Company's business in New England, has rendered it necessary to re-organize the General Agency there. This is therefore to certify, that the New England Branch of the Graefenberg Company, is now established at No. 154 Washington street, Boston, and that Mr. Edwin C. Barnes is duly appointed Secretary of said Branch; and that he is authorized to establish Local Depots, and to grant rights to vend the company's Medicines. Every Agent must have a certificate with the seal of the Company thereunto, signed by its Secretary and countersigned by the aforesaid Branch Secretary. No one is authorized to sell the Company's Medicines without such certificate. EDWARD BARTON, Secretary.

GRAEFENBERG MEDICINES.

The undersigned is fully prepared to establish a Graefenberg Depot in all places of proper size in New England (except the State of Connecticut and that portion of Vermont west of the Green Mountains,) and also in the British Provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. Immediate application should be made either personally or by letter. As there will ordinarily be but one Depot in a town or village, the Agency will be very valuable.

The leading article to which public attention is invited is the GRAEFENBERG VEGETABLE PILLS, of which 30,000 boxes are sold each and every week. The following complaints yield with certainty to their power: Asthma, Bilious Complaints, Catarrh, Costiveness, Dyspepsia, Erysipelas, Imperfect Digestion, Fluor Albus, Green Sickness, Heartburn, Headache, Jaundice, Liver Complaints, Rheumatism, and various diseases of the Stomach. In all Chronic complaints the most implicit reliance may be placed upon them. Price 25 cents a box.

The names of the other Medicines are as follows:

THE CHILDREN'S PANACEA.

For summer complaints, dysentery, and all other affections of the stomach and bowels, it is infallible. Price 50 cents a bottle.

THE GRAEFENBERG SARSAPARILLA COMPOUND,

Warranted to make two quarts superior to any in the world. Price one dollar a bottle.

THE GREEN MOUNTAIN VEGETABLE OINTMENT.

Wherever inflammation exists, this ointment is a positive and speedy cure. Price 25 and 50 cents a box.

THE GRAEFENBERG EYE LOTION.

For disorders of the Eyes this Lotion has no equal. For violent inflammation, weakness, or foreign substances in the eyes, it is an unfailing remedy. Price 25 cents per bottle, with full directions.

THE GRAEFENBERG HEALTH BITTERS.

Sovereign to build up the enervated system, to restore the appetite and clear the skin. Price 25 cents a package.

THE CONSUMPTIVE'S BALM.

This most extraordinary article is infallible, positively, in Consumption, Bronchitis, and Bleeding at the Lungs. It is only sent as ordered at 25 the quart. Consumptives may be sure of finding in this article that which will not disappoint their hopes.

The Graefenberg Gazette, published by the Company for gratuitous distribution, may be had on application to any one of their numerous Agents.

Dentistry.

GRANDIN, DUDLEY & BLAKE,

SURGEON DENTISTS,

238 Washington Street—near Summer Street,

BOSTON,

PERFORM all Operations belonging to the Dental Professios, and continue to Manufacture and insert the purest and best of MINERAL TEETH, upon the Atmospheric, and on all other principles as practised by the best Dentists in this country and Europe.

Every Tooth we fill, and every one we insert, we insure, according to circumstances; and all Dental Plate Work executed at our rooms is warranted to be equal to any that can be produced, and to give perfect satisfaction.

☞We are administering the Chloroform every day with success, and extracting Teeth by the dozen, without pain, and have never known it to affect the patient unfavorably, and yet we charge no more than when we do not give it.

The public will not forget that to us is due the credit of the great and important improvement recently made in the method of inserting Artificial Teeth, both on Gold Plate and Pivots, and also preserving diseased Teeth and stumps in a healthy condition.

☞Instruction given in relation to the New Method invented by us, and whole sets inserted in the most difficult mouths, for country or travelling Dentists, on reasonable terms. Pivot Teeth adapted to the mouth on our plan are far more durable and permanent than upon gold plate, secured in the common way, and will never want resetting. When necessary to mount them on a plate of gold by our method, we extract no sound stumps, preserve the form of the mouth, and secure them so firmly that the patient can eat with them as well as if they were natural teeth, and they will last a whole life-time, and look perfectly natural.

To all who require the services of a Dentist, and particularly such as have been unskillfully served, we would 'make our best bow,' and say, don't wait for an introduction, but call and see us at 238 Washington St. corner of Central Court.
